MASONIC FETE DRAWS 150,000 TO ALEXANDRIA

Hoover and Cabinet to Attend Memorial Dedication Today.

PARADE TO PRECEDE IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

National Dignitaries Gather for Ceremony at Shrine to Washington.

By CHARLES M. SHEPPERSON.

All roads will lead to the historic City of Alexandria today as the crafts of Masonry realize a dream of almost a quarter of a century in the dedication of their magnificent shrine to George Washington, one of the early leaders of the fraternity. The little city on the Potomac, where the Father of His Country passed most of his time, is preparing to receive 150,000 persons for the gala fete, if the weather only will break into clear skies for the day.

President Hoover, who will participate in the ceremonies, will arrive at 1 o'clock. He will be greeted by a 21-gun salute from the historic Constitution and three Coast Guard cutters anchored off Alexandria. He will be accompanied by virtually every member of his Cabinet. Many of the senators and representatives have signified their intention of being present and the Diplomatic Corps will be well represented.

From early morning until late at night the forces of Masonry will hold sway. The symbolism of square and compass will be the dominant note in Alexandrian life from 9:30 a. m., when the blare of trumpets announces the parade, until late in the evening when, in the auditorium of historic Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, where George Washington himself once wielded the gavel, the Master Mason's degree will be conferred by a delegation from Missouri.

Masonry's Dignitaries Gathered.

The $5,000,000 memorial on Shooters Hill will be the central point in the activities of the day. There the dignitaries of Masonry will gather to express the symbolism of their craft in the ritual of pouring "The Corn of Nourishment," the "Wine of Refreshment" and the "Oil of Joy and Gladness," over the miniature model of the memorial which will be dedicated by proxy for the beautiful structure, still in process of completion.

Masons will arise early today to prepare for the celebration. As early as 7:30 o'clock, the National League of Masonic Clubs will gather near the Masonic Temple on Thirteenth street, at New York avenue northwest, to take the train for Alexandria.

The grand parade will start promptly at 9:30 o'clock in Alexandria. Sailors, Marines and Coast Guardsmen, as well as troops of the regular Army, will take part in the procession. High Masonic dignitaries, grand lodges, chapters, commandaries, royal and select masters, Shriners, Veiled Prophets and members of blue lodges will be in line for the march along King street to Shooters Hill.

More than 100 special trains have been chartered to bring the visitors to the old city over whose Masonic lodge Washington presided as the first worshipful master 150 years ago. Many thousands will come by automobiles and buses. Ample accommodations have been provided for the great throng which is expected. Many will sleep in the Pullmans which will be parked in the railroad yards; thousands of rooms in the hotels of Washington have been reserved, and thousands of additional rooms will be available in the homes of Alexandrians, who will throw open their homes to visitors who can not secure accommodations elsewhere.

All these distinguished guests will be seated on the dedication platform, which has been erected at the foot of the granite steps leading to the Memorial. In addition, there will be

10,000 Below Akron See 2 Die; One Saved

Men Weep, Women Scream as Tragic Drama Is Enacted Half Mile Above Camp Kearney; Ship Finally Lashed to Temporary Mast.

Camp Kearney, San Diego, Calif., May 11 (A.P.).—The Navy dirigible Akron was lashed to its temporary mooring mast here at 6:50 p. m. (9:50 p. m. E. S. T.) tonight and Commander C. E. Rosendahl signaled with the sidelights of the craft "everything O.K."

C. M. Cowart, 19-year-old member of the naval ground crew, pulled into the Akron after two mates had dropped to their deaths from a landing cable, reached ground and demanded immediately, "Gimme something to eat."

Calm and unconcerned, he washed and ate a hearty meal.

Commander Rosendahl said the Akron will cast loose at 10 a. m. tomorrow and follow the ocean coast line toward Sunnyville, its West Coast mooring goal, expecting to "tie up" there Friday morning.

The ship had only one-sixth of its fuel supply left after battling Texas storms, and the mooring here was "necessary," the officer said.

A tragic drama of the skies was written in an unsuccessful attempt of the Akron to land here today.

Two men of the mooring crew were dashed to death and a third, Cowart, was carried two hours dangling on a 300-foot rope from the great Navy airship.

Ten thousand spectators saw the two fall as the dirigible surged upward. Cowart swung precarious half a mile over their heads. Women screamed, men wept.

Then he was rescued, hauled into a hatch of the big ship. A message dropped from the big bag.

"Cowart O. K.," it read.

A vast sigh of relief went up.

"Fifty air accidents have I seen, but none that chilled the heart like this," said Joe Van Dusen, aircraft veteran. The tear-stained faces of Navy and Marine veterans who wore

RESERVATIONS PUT IN COURT PROTOCOL

Senate Group to Vote Today on Postponing Bill to Next Session.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

The Senate foreign relations committee reviewed the protocol of American adherence to the World Court yesterday and decided to take the final step today by submitting it for a vote to the members of the committee.

American membership in the court took one step forward and one step backward after the members of the committee decided to delete the proposal of Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, while they approved the proposal of Senator Moses (Republican), of New Hampshire.

The Johnson proposal would have prevented the United States from joining the court because of the failure of the Root-Hurst proposal to unequivocally except all advisory opinions from the court's jurisdiction. The motion was voted down by a majority of one vote.

The way was then cleared for some definite action toward favorable consideration, but Senator Moses, an antagonist of the protocol, then tossed another monkey wrench into the machinery. This was in the form of a reservation to the proposal which would require every other signatory of the World Court formally to approve the conditions of American adherence with regard to advisory opinions.

This proposal was adopted by the same narrow margin which had brought about the defeat of the Johnson resolution.

Sleuth Accused of Lindbergh Ransom Fraud Obtains Reduction in Bail.

(Associated Press.)

Gaston B. Means, under indictments charging embezzlement of $104,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean and under suspicion in connection with allegations that he mulcted as much from another society woman by promising anti-Communist protection, was free last night on $50,000 bail.

The huge, dimpled detective strode from jail after Justice James M. Proctor ordered his release on bonds in the District of Columbia Supreme Court. Means stepped into his own limousine and was driven with his youthful wife toward their handsome suburban residence. His most emphatic declaration was:

"I'm going home."

He must appear tomorrow for arraignment under the indictments returned Tuesday. He had spent six days in jail following his arrest after secret investigation of complaints by Mrs McLean, wife of The Washington Post's publisher, that he appropriated the money she paid him to bring back the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

Freedom came after much conferring between lawyers and the judge—and after Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, had disclosed in an interview that it was "a fake warehouse receipt for twenty trucks of alleged Soviet documents," pro-

Repeal at Next Session Predicted by Linthicum

Baltimore, May 11 (A.P.).—Representative J. Charles Linthicum, leader of the wet bloc in the House of Representatives, declared here tonight that the Volstead act will be repealed at the next meeting of Congress.

The Maryland Democrat, speaking at a meeting of the United Democratic Club of the Eighteenth Ward, hurled an ultimatum at dry representatives from thirteen Southern and Western States.

$1,000,000 Art Suit Names Cadillac Head

Detroit, May 11 (A.P.).—Notice was filed in Federal court today of a suit for $1,000,000 against Lawrence P. Fisher, president of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., on behalf of the Howard Young Galleries, Inc., of New York.

A. M. Frumberg, New York attorney, in announcing the action, said the Young galleries sold to Fisher "some of the finest masterpieces in the world, representing the outstanding work" of famous artists. The action, he said, is for the balance of an account on the purchase of the paintings sold to Fisher. The Fisher gallery is valued at more than $2,000,000.

PLANK ON WET ISSUE BY G.O.P. SEEMS CERTAIN

Ohio's Vote Repudiating Prohibition Forecasts Referendum.

HOOVER IS EXPECTED TO KEEP HANDS OFF

Buckeye State Regarded as Pivotal; Both Parties Are Likely to Resubmit.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Now that Ohio, birthplace and headquarters of the Antisaloon League, has repudiated prohibition, a referendum plank in the Republican platform is a certainty.

This is said on the authority of men high in the councils of the Republican party. All that remains, these men say, is the fashioning of the plank itself.

Only one development might blur this prospect, and that would be an absolute demand by President Hoover for a dry plank. No such development is expected by the President's associates, who insist that he will maintain a hands-off policy and let the convention decide.

A referendum plank in the Democratic platform has appeared a certainty for many months.

Thus, with both big parties pledging their members on the proposition, there would seem to be ground for the prediction of the wets that the next Congress will submit the liquor question to the voters.

It was learned yesterday that Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, a close friend of President Hoover, is preparing to issue an important statement on prohibition when the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican national convention meets Saturday. Reed, while he voted for the Jones law and other dry laws, has consistently declined to discuss prohibition.

His forthcoming statement takes on unusual importance in view of reports that Reed may be chairman of the platform committee at the national convention.

John M. Morehead, American Minister to Sweden, appeared before the Senate manufactures committee yesterday and advocated a "twentieth amendment," establishing the Swedish system of liquor control in this country. Morehead is a friend of President Hoover, and his suggestion, therefore, caused considerable comment at the Capitol.

Ohio Vote Significant.

The smashing triumph of the wet candidates in Ohio's primary was regarded here as a major political development, the climax of a spectacular wet trend that, in the space of a few months, has changed the whole prohibition outlook with respect to the Republican party.

Ohio was regarded as a sort of Chateau-Thierry in the drive to force

Ferrara Is Named To Cabinet Post

Cuban Ambassador Made State Secretary; Sterling May Succeed Him.

Havana, May 11 (A.P.).—A shift in the cabinet of President Gerardo Machado to place Dr. Orestes Ferrara, at present ambassador to the United States, in the position of secretary of state was announced today.

Palace and state department unofficial comment had it that Marques Sterling would replace Dr. Ferrara at Washington. Dr. Ferrara will step into the post left vacant by Jose Clemente Vivancos, when he became chief justice of the supreme court.

El Pais said Miguel Angel Campa, former undersecretary of state, would go to Mexico as ambassador.

Eduardo Usabiaga, the present undersecretary, was expected to be sent to Berlin to replace Aristides Aguero, who will go from Berlin to Paris.

GLASS CHARGES START HOT ROW IN BOTH HOUSES

SENATE ECONOMIST DENOUNCED BY KEAN

Charges Dr. Willis Cabled to Paris Private Data That Hurt U. S. Trade.

(Associated Press.)

Banking legislation yesterday embroiled Congress in a raging dispute which produced charges of lying and an accusation that a Senate committee employe had divulged confidential information to the detriment of American business.

In the face of vehement denials, Chairman Glass, of the Senate banking committee, clung insistently to his accusation that certain banking interests bought a member of the House in their fight against the branch restrictions of the McFadden act of 1927.

Senator Kean, of New Jersey, whose voice is seldom heard in debate, asserted that Dr. H. Parker Willis, economist for Glass' committee, sent cablegrams to French newspapers which resulted in heavy gold withdrawals from the United States.

Denial of Suppression.

The Department of Justice issued a statement saying there was nothing in its files "to warrant or support" Glass' charge that an opinion prepared by Frederick W. Lehman, Solicitor General under President Taft, had been suppressed. It said the document, strongly questioning the legality of banking affiliates, was an interdepartmental communication, never intended for publication. Glass later insisted the opinion had been "suppressed."

A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General under President Wilson, late in the day issued a statement denying inferences that he had suppressed the opinion. He said it had apparently been taken out of the department files before he took office and that all he ever saw of it was a photographic copy unsigned.

Purchase of Members.

Glass' charge of banking interests buying Congress members was originally made Tuesday. He said they were Chicago banks outside the Loop district. Representative Britten, who comes from a Chicago district, seized upon the assertion yesterday with a statement that it was a "dastardly lie." He added:

"This impugns the honesty and purpose of every member of this House."

He said he didn't believe Glass had "lied" deliberately and noted that Glass yesterday limited the accusation to one House member.

Blanton, of Texas, remarked that the reference was to a man now dead.

State Seizes Train Of Missouri Pacific

Taken in Arkansas Because of Failure to Pay Fines on Full-Crew Law.

Camden, Ark., May 11 (A.P.).—A freight train of the Missouri Pacific Railroad was seized here by Arkansas authorities and held 24 hours because of the railway's failure to pay fines on conviction of violating the State's "full crew" law, but it was released today under a $73,000 surety bond.

The attachment order issued by Justice R. L. Boddie authorized the seizure of a locomotive, seven boxcars and a caboose. They were held until railway officials went to circuit court and arranged the bond.

The action arose from 365 cases in which the Missouri Pacific was charged with operating trains without the number of crew members designated by law. Fines assessed totaled $25,000.

ROBINSON BACKS HUGE IDLE RELIEF PROGRAM; TARIFF VETO IS UPHELD

EXECUTIVE HOLDS PLAN IS DANGEROUS

Vagueness of Democratic Proposal and Protection Need Stressed.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

President Hoover took his pen in hand yesterday to advise the House of Representatives, in a formal message, that although he had been unable to determine precisely what the Democratic tariff revision bill was intended to accomplish, he felt constrained to withhold his approval—on the broad general ground that it was an extraordinarily bad bill, dangerously befuddled in conception and execution and heavily burdened with grave potentialities of distress and disaster for the United States of America.

Within two hours of its reading, the veto message was sustained in the House, by a vote of 178 to 166. That tally marked the end of the Democratic tariff act of 1932, an act which did not carry a single proposal for a change in tariff rates.

Should it ever become law, the President said in his veto pronunciamento, the bill would destroy the hard-wrought gains which have been made in the United States during the last seventeen years toward establishment of a truly responsive flexible tariff system. Through its demand for reciprocal trade agreements, it would, in effect, entangle this country in the world mesh of tariff wars and medieval trade discriminations which make up the principal strands in the rope by which European economy now is hanging in the agonies of slow death.

Debased Currencies.

The President also is convinced that in view of the current popularity of debased currencies throughout the world, the maintenance of the American tariff policy is more urgently required than ever before in our national history.

Finally, the Chief Executive takes the position that if the Democratic majority of the House desires to lower certain rates it should set forth its proposed schedules with precision and clarity, and then vote on them.

"My first objection to this bill," the White House message began, "is the misimpression and uncertainty it may convey as to its purpose.

"If the purpose of the proponents of this act is to secure lower tariffs on the 35 per cent of our imports which are not on the free list it would seem that the direct and simple method of so doing would be to recognize that tariffs are duties

Two Alien Smugglers Thought Falls' Victims

Niagara Falls, Ontario, May 11 (A.P.).—United States border patrolmen reported tonight their belief that two men whom they had surprised landing aliens on the American side had been swept to death over Niagara Falls.

The officers said the men had shoved off in a rowboat into the rapids. A third smuggler, they reported, escaped into American territory. Two aliens, described as John Wordeg, 31, and Elsa Illoman, 36, of Toronto, were arrested.

Text of President's Tariff Veto Message

Following is the complete text of the President's veto message on the House tariff measure:

To the House of Representatives: I am returning without my approval H. R. 6662, entitled "An act to amend the tariff act of 1930 and for other purposes."

My first objection to the bill is the misimpression and uncertainty it may convey as to its purpose. If the purpose of the proponents of this act is to secure lower tariffs on the 35 per cent of our imports which are not on the free list it would seem that the direct and simple method of so doing would be to recognize that tariffs are duties applied to particular commodities, and to propose definite reduction of the duties on such particular commodities as are believed to be at fault and upon which the full facts can be developed. Alternatively, the Congress is able to direct the tariff commission under the "flexible" provisions of the act of 1930 to act upon such schedules as are believed to be too high.

As a matter of fact there never has been a time in the history of the United States when tariff protection was more essential to the welfare of the American people than at present.

Prices have declined throughout the world, but to a far greater extent

M'KELLAR HAS PLAN FOR SAVING BILLION

Program Eliminating Need for Huge Revenue Bill Is Outlined.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

A plan for saving $1,135,000,000 of Federal funds, eliminating need for the billion-dollar revenue bill, will be laid before the special Senate economy subcommittee today by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee.

Senator McKellar, author of the 10 per cent Senate appropriations slashes and member of the new bipartisan economy body, made known his program following the first subcommittee session.

The group met in executive conference for five hours, broken only by a brief lunch period. Sections of the emasculated House economy bill were reviewed, but no provisions finally agreed on. Earlier President Hoover conferred with the six members at a White House breakfast, where $300,000,000 was fixed as a tentative economy goal.

Conceding the urgency of balancing the budget, but insisting expenditures cuts can best achieve the re-

PRESIDENT IS SEEN IN FAVOR OF MOVE

June 10 Adjournment May Be Delayed by Work on Recovery Project.

(Associated Press.)

The powerful support of Robinson, of Arkansas, yesterday was thrown solidly behind a new move for Federal relief for the unemployed.

From the Democratic leader of the Senate came a broad plan for relieving suffering and aiding economic recovery through a $300,000,000 relief fund and a $2,000,000,000 construction program.

Later a group of ten Democratic senators pledged themselves to support the legalizing and taxing of beer to finance a $1,500,000,000 construction program.

The new relief plans complicated an agreement arranged almost simultaneouly by House and Senate leaders to adjourn Congress if possible by June 10, and resulted in suggestions for a compromise which could be enacted by that time.

Meanwhile there were strong indications in Senate cloakrooms that the administration was closely studying the relief problem with a view to possible legislation.

Reported Relief Plan.

President Hoover was said by one Republican leader to be considering a plan under which Congress would appropriate an emergency fund of $100,000,000 to be distributed by him through the Red Cross, if he deemed it necessary.

The program for adjourning June 10 was arranged at a conference between Senator Watson, Republican leader of the Senate; Senator Robinson, Speaker Garner and Representative Snell, Republican leader of the House.

It was agreed that a "heroic effort" would be made to finish on that date and avoid a summer session.

Robinson presented his plan to the Senate in a carefully prepared statement which drew the close attention of senators on both sides of the party aisle.

He emphasized the need of balancing the budget and proposed that his program should be financed by bond issues.

The relief funds would be advanced to States and municipalities with "such assurance of repayment as may be obtained" and deductions would be made when necessary from future allotments of Federal aid.

Robinson's Proposal.

Robinson said the construction program should be financed by tax exempt bonds and spent upon "self-liquidating and profit-making enterprises, such as tunnels, bridges and the destruction of slum districts."

A somewhat different proposal for a Federal construction program financed by bonds was advanced by former Gov. Smith, of New York, at the Democratic Jefferson Day dinner here.

Robinson also proposed a 30-hour week, application of the equalization fee to wheat as a test, and loans from the reconstruction corporation to farm loan organizations, as measures to aid in the restoration of prosperity.

He said the fear of unemployment has "chilled every heart" and presented a "crisis" to the Nation.

As Robinson concluded, Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, former member of the Hoover Cabinet, offered a

27 of Their Coconspirators in Brief Naval Revolt Given Long Sentences at Courts-Martial; Popularist Party Is Blamed.

Lima, Peru, May 11 (A.P.).—Eight sailors were convicted, sentenced to death, and shot today for participating in last Sunday's feeble naval revolt.

Fourteen of their coconspirators were sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary and 13 others to 10 years each. Three sailors were acquitted.

The prosecution charged the sailors had been influenced by Radicals, and named the Aprista party (Popularists) and Communists as responsible.

The defense charged the mutiny was planned by "politicians who had been deported to Panama," and contended the sailors were merely instruments in their hands.

Most of the prisoners admitted their conspiracy, and said they had been interviewed by the Apristas in Panama.

Those sentenced to death were Eleuterio Medrano, 29, sailor; Gregorio Pozo, 22, corporal steersman; Telmo Arrue, 18, sailor; Predemundo Hoyos, 21, corporal; Arnulfo Ojeda, 22, mechanic; Jose Vidal, 27, stoker; Rogelio Dejo, 20, sailor, and Pedro Gamarra, 21, stoker.

A group of sailors seized the only two cruisers in the small Peruvian navy and rebelled in Callao Harbor near Lima sometime during the night.

Government troops and the remaining four submarines and destroyer in the navy were called into action under a state of siege.

Troops in launches tried to board the cruisers and were repulsed after a short exchange of rifle fire, and both sides held off further action until

Boy, 14, Taken From School For Contempt Term in Jail

A 14-year-old schoolboy spent the first night of a 10-day sentence for contempt of court in the District Jail last night. He was taken from his classroom in the Polk School by a deputy United States marshal yesterday and sent to confinement by Justice James M. Proctor in District Supreme Court.

The boy is Francis Russell, of 809 E street southwest. He was taken into custody on an attachment issued after he was alleged to have failed to answer a subpena to testify in a criminal case.

On December 11, 1931, four boys were alleged to have broken into a garage in the 1100 block of L street southwest. A short time later two of them were arrested. One of them was Russell.

Following a hearing in Juvenile Court, Russell was placed on probation. His companion, who is not a minor, was held for trial in District Supreme Court.

The trial was held yesterday. On May 3 young Russell was summoned to appear before Assistant United

England to Curb Irish Trade If Oath to King Is Abolished

Dominions Secretary Tells Commons Preference Commerce Pact Will Not Be Renewed if De Valera Regime Makes Dublin Bill Law.

London, May 11 (A.P.).—The British government served notice on the government of Eamon de Valera today that if the Irish Free State abolishes the oath to the crown, there will be no Anglo-Irish trade agreement at the Ottawa imperial conference this summer. This in effect was the gist of a reply by J. A. Thomas, secretary of dominions, to a questioner in the House of Commons today.

(A bill is before the Dail Eireann at Dublin to abolish the oath to the king as provided in the Anglo-Irish treaty establishing the Free State in 1921. This bill was a part of Eamon de Valera's program for independent Ireland. Great Britain had previously served notice that she regarded abolition of the oath as a breach of the treaty).

If the abolition bill should be made law in the Free State, De Valera's government will find itself in the same position as a foreign country, so far as trade with Great Britain is concerned, under Mr. Thomas' pronouncement.

The present imperial preferences act expires on November 15, and unless renewed or replaced by a special agreement, the new British tariffs, averaging 20 per cent, would be reared against the Free State.

Stanley Baldwin, acting prime minister, made it clear to the questioner that the point was entirely hypothetical, since the oath allegience bill has not been made law and the imperial preferences act is still in effect.

Here is Mr. Thomas' reply to a ques-

U.S. RAIL OWNERSHIP FEARED BY RAYBURN

(Associated Press.)

One of Congress' leading students of transportation — Representative Rayburn, of Texas—yesterday saw the possibility of a Government railroad ownership becoming an accomplished fact, unless something more is done to help the carriers.

For that reason, the chairman of the House interstate and foreign commerce committee urged the rules committee to expedite his bill, which would repeal the law requiring railroads to put half of their earnings over 6 per cent into a Federal fund.

"My great fear is that those who advocate Government ownership are going to face it much sooner than they want to unless something like this is done," the Texas Democrat testified. He recalled that the Interstate Commerce Commission had found railroads owing the recapture fund $361,000,000, of which $10,000,000 has been paid. Interest has increased the paid-in fund to $13,000,000. The Rayburn bill would order this money returned to the roads.

Position of Roads.

Many carriers now can not borrow money, Mr. Rayburn said, partly because of "this $361,000,000 cloud hanging over them." He said that the "big fellow and the little fellow alike," are endangered, but that many bigger roads had been able to contest the assessments in court, while the smaller ones had not. Of the smaller lines he said:

"They are in trouble just like the big ones. If many of them could get back $100,000, or $200,000 they would become going concerns instead of going on the verge of bankruptcy as they now are." Mr. Rayburn said repeal of the law had been indorsed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, railroad shippers and labor.

The railroads yesterday told the Interstate Commerce Commission that a shortening of the legal work day for railway workers to six hours would increase their wage bill 26 per cent.

Menace of 6-Hour Day.

Speaking at the opening of the commission's inquiry into the effect of the six-hour day on the transportation systems, Jacob Aronson, general counsel for the New York Central, asserted such an increase in 1930 would have resulted in the railroads being unable to meet fixed charges.

The inquiry is being made on instructions of Congress by Commissioners Eastman, McManamy and Lee. Representatives of railroads from all parts of the country and officials of various brotherhoods and unions will be heard. John G. Wilbur, vice president in charge of personnel for the New York Central, is scheduled as the first witness for Eastern carriers.

Mr. Aronson said studies indicated adoption of the principle of the six-hour day for railway employes "will increase the pay roll of the class one carriers by approximately 25 per cent." He added:

Cost of Six-Hour Day.

"Applied to the year 1930 that increase would have been in excess of $600,000,000. Such an increase in 1930 would have resulted in failure to meet fixed charges by approximately $100,000,000."

Mr. Aronson said the studies assumed application of the principle of the six-hour day "means that the carriers will be required to pay the same amount for a basic six-hour day as they now pay for a basic eight-hour day."

Donald Richberg, for the Railway Labor Executives Association, agreed that pay rolls would be increased. He argued, however, that the worker who gives his life to an industry has a right to be cared for in difficult times.

The six-hour day would not only increase the number of workers, he said, but also would increase business.

The commission will make a report of its study to Congress, but it was indicated at the outset that there would be no comment that could be taken as a verdict of the commission on the question of a change from an eight-hour day.

Dill Says Government May Take Over Radios

(Associated Press.)

Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, said in a statement yesterday that "the American people will not tolerate private monopoly of radio," nor "endure too much blatant and direct advertising by radio."

Calling attention to the action of Canada in adopting government operation of radio, with license fees of $2 a year for receiving sets and a limitation of advertising to 5 per cent of any program, Senator Dill said if successful it "may easily lead to a Nation-wide demand for Government operation of all radio stations in the United States."

daylight. Meanwhile as dawn came thousands of spectators gathered on the docks and waterside streets to watch the spectacular action.

Airplanes flew over the cruisers and dropped bombs nearby, and finally it became apparent that one of the vessels which had been seized, the Almirante Grau, was not participating in hostile maneuvers.

The four submarines immediately began a fanwise movement and the other cruiser, the Coronel Bolognesi, fired two broadside and ran up the red flag. The submarines responded with four shells and that was enough. The rebels surrendered and were taken to prison at San Lorenzo Isle.

The naval war council met immediately and began hearing evidence under the emergency decree.

The hearing was completed today. Eight of the score or more who participated in the movement, were convicted and the sentence carried out immediately.

Text of Hoover Message Vetoing Tariff Measure

in other countries than in the United States.

Manufacturers in foreign countries which have abandoned the gold standard are producing goods and paying for raw materials in depreciated currency. They may ship their goods into the United States with great detriment to the American producer and laborer because of the difference in the value of the money they pay for their raw materials and the money they receive for their finished products. Under such conditions it is imperative that the American protective policy be maintained. If the intent or the effect of the proposed bill is to remove the possibility of executive action or to reduce tariff protection there never was a time more inappropriate on account of widespread domestic unemployment and the possibilities which lie before us.

Would Destroy Flexible Tariff.

The second objection to the bill is that it practically destroyed the "flexible" tariff through the removal of executive authority to render conclusions of the Tariff Commission effective. This bill would again reduce the Tariff Commission to a purely advisory body to the Congress, and thus defeat a reform so earnestly sought ever since its first advocacy by President Roosevelt and finally fully realized in the tariff act of 1930. By the act of 1930 the principle of a "flexible" tariff based upon determinations by a bipartisan commission, subject to approval of the executive, was firmly and effectively established. Beyond the ability to change the duties by 50 per cent there lies within the provisions the development of the definite principle of preference of the home market for American industry, workmen and agriculture, based upon the difference of cost of production at home and abroad, plus transportation to the principal markets. This open process, upon the application of any responsible party, is an assurance against either excessive duties or nonprotective tariffs upon dutiable goods.

The broad purpose of the present form of executive action upon the "flexible" provision is promptly to remedy inequities and injustices in the tariff as they may be discovered; to prevent any tariff system being frozen upon the Nation despite economic shifts, and by providing this flexibility to meet changing economic conditions, greatly to lessen the necessity for periodic general revision of the tariff with its disturbance to economic life and its orgy of politics and log rolling.

Results Under Present System.

The "flexible" provision has since the act of 1930 proved its high usefulness in these particulars. The commission has completed or has in progress investigations covering 291 different articles. Of those which come under the "flexible" provisions, the recommendations were for no change in about 54 per cent of the cases, increases in 16 per cent and decreases in 30 per cent, which were placed in effect within a few days. This effective "flexible" tariff as a protection to sound progress and for the future protection of our farmers, workmen, industries and consumers, should be maintained in our American system. The proposal in the bill under consideration will effectively destroy it and is a step backward.

Under the present law the Congress has the benefit of the advisory functions of the Tariff Commission, upon which it can act at any time. If this bill is to have any practical result by reserving to the Congress incidental or occasional readjustment of the tariff it simply opens the way for log rolling every time Congress is called upon to consider a report of the Tariff Commission recommending any specific change in rates or schedules. In an effort to avoid this obvious objection, the act attempts to limit Congress, in legislating upon the recommendations of the commission, to the specific items included in the report. But no Congress can bind another Congress in any such manner relating as it does to a question of legislative procedure.

Tariff a Domestic Question.

My third objection to the bill lies in the conditions stipulated for action in an international conference which it is proposed should be called to deal with trade questions. I wish to say at once that I am in fullest accord with the proposal for an international action or conference to "eliminate discriminatory and unfair trade practices," "preventing economic wars," and "promoting fair, equal and friendly trade and commercial relations among nations." The American Government has participated in several international economic conferences for these identic purposes since the great war. They have resulted in very little accomplishment.

But the objectives proposed in this bill for such a conference are not limited to the constructive purposes above mentioned. Some of the proposals in the bill for such a conference raise questions of futility or alternatively of abandonment of essential American policies. The first legislative act of Washington's administration was a tariff bill. From that day to this, one of our firm national policies has been that tariffs are solely a domestic question in protection of our own people. It is now proposed that an international conference should be called with a view to "lowering excessive tariffs." The very implication of calling other nations into conference with a view to changing our tariff duties is to subject our tariffs to international agreement.

For myself I hold that any inequalities or excessive duties in the American tariff can be corrected through the flexible provisions of the present tariff law. If other nations should adopt this principle and such an instrumentality it would automatically remove excessive duties and unequal treatment throughout the world without interference with domestic control of tariff policies.

Intent Not Clear.

If the meaning of the Congress is that such a conference should discover and negotiate the elimination of particular excessive duties throughout the world, then I do not need to elaborate upon the direction in which such action leads, for it means simply attempting the futility of negotiating a world tariff among 60 or 70 nations subject to confirmation of their legislative bodies. If on the other hand what the Congress means is to undertake a general lowering of American tariffs in exchange for lowering of tariffs elsewhere in the world, and if the Congress proposes to make such a radical change in our historic policies by international negotiation affecting the whole of American tariffs, then it is the duty of the Congress to state so frankly and indicate the extent to which it is prepared to go.

I am fully alive to the effect on our own and world commerce of the many arbitrary restrictions now in existence. The Departments of State and Commerce are actively engaged in protecting our export trade from unfair discriminations and infractions. If at any time circumstances are such as to permit the hope that such barriers to international trade and commerce may be removed through the medium of an international conference without sacrificing American interests or departing from the historic policies followed by our country, I shall not hesitate to take the lead in calling such a conference.

If this measure is intended to do more than this, then the new policy should be clearly indicated for clarity to the American people and for the guidance and judgment of the Executive. An established national policy should not be changed by implication.

Conflicting Ends of Bill.

My fourth objection to the bill lies in the further request that I should "negotiate with foreign governments reciprocal trade agreements under a policy of mutual tariff concessions." This proposal is in direct conflict with the other proposals "to eliminate discriminatory tariffs; prevent economic wars; and promote fair, equal and friendly trade," all of which latter are desirable.

A firmly established principle of the American tariff policy is the uniform and equal treatment of all nations without preferences, concessions or discriminations (with the sole exception of certain concessions to Cuba). No reform is required in the United States in this matter, but we should have at once abandoned this principle when we enter upon reciprocal concessions with any other nation. That is at once unequal treatment to all other governments not parties thereto. That is the very breeding ground for trade wars. This type of preferential tariff agreement which exists abroad today is one of the primary causes of trade wars between other countries at the present moment.

It has been the policy of our Government for many years to advance "most favored nation" treaties with view to extinguishing these very processes, preferences and trade frictions and to secure equal treatment to us by the other nations in all their tariff and economic arrangements. We have such treaties or executive agreements with 31 nations. If we adopted this complete reversal of policies and now negotiated reciprocal tariff agreements we should either under our "most favored nation" obligations need extend these rights to all nations having such treaties with us, or to denounce such treaties.

The struggle for special privileges by reciprocal agreements abroad has produced not only trade wars but has become the basis of political concessions and alliances which lead to international entanglements of the first order. These very processes are adding instability to the world today, and I am unwilling to enter upon any course which would result in the United States being involved in such complexities and such entanglements.

Of high importance to us also in consideration of these matters is that the principal interest of a majority of the 60 or 70 other nations which might be approached for mutual tariff concessions would be to reduce the American agricultural tariffs. No concessions otherwise than those related to agricultural products would be of any importance to those particular nations. The effect of such a shift in the basis of our agricultural tariffs would be to make us large importers of food products, to demoralize our agricultural industry, and render us more and more dependent upon foreign countries for food supply; to drive our farmers into the towns and factories, and thus demoralize our whole national economic and social stability.

A Futile Program.

Moreover, the futility of the Executive negotiating such treaties as reciprocal tariffs has been often demonstrated in our past. Before we definitely adopted the policy of equal treatment to all nations the Congress had from time to time authorized such treaties. Out of some 22 such treaties providing for reciprocal tariff concessions, the Congress either refused to confirm or failed to act in 16, and 2 of the remaining 6 failed of confirmation by other governments. On another occasion the Congress conferred upon the Executive a limited authority to conclude reciprocal or preferential tariffs without confirmation. Twenty-two such agreements were entered upon, all of which were repealed in subsequent tariff acts. The experience would not seem to be encouraging for this type of action.

There are other objections which might well be taken to this bill. It is enough, however, that this bill would destroy the effectiveness of the flexible tariff which for the first time gives protection against excessive or inadequate tariffs, prevents a system of frozen tariffs upon the country irrespective of economic change and gives relief from log rolling and politics in tariff making. It would surrender our own control of an important part of our domestic affairs to the influence of other nations or alternatively would lead us into futilities in international negotiations. It would start our country upon the road of a system of preferential tariffs between nations, with all the trade wars, international entanglements, &c., which our country has sought to avoid by extending equal treatment to all of them.

VETO OF TARIFF BILL IS UPHELD IN HOUSE

Hoover's Action in Quashing Measure Is Sustained by 178-166 Vote.

applied to particular commodities, and to propose definite reduction of the duties on such particular commodities as are believed to be at fault and upon which the full facts can be developed."

The President's message also emphasized that under the existing law the way always is open, through the Tariff Commission, for either House of Congress to initiate whatever tariff changes may seem advisable.

"As a matter of fact," the message continued, "there never has been a time in the history of the United States when tariff protection was more essential to the welfare of the American people than at present.

"Prices have declined throughout the world, but to a far greater extent in other countries than in the United States.

Foreign Manufacturers.

"Manufacturers in foreign countries which have abandoned the gold standard are producing goods and paying for raw materials in depreciated currency. They may ship their goods into the United States with great detriment to the American producer and laborer, because of the difference in the value of the money they pay for their raw materials and the money they receive for their finished products. Under such conditions it is imperative that the American protective policy be maintained.

"If the intent or the effect of the proposed bill is to remove the possibility of executive action, or to reduce tariff protection, there never was a time more inappropriate on account of widespread domestic unemployment and the possibilities which lie before us."

The principal advantage of the prevailing system of flexible tariffs, the President said, is that it tends to eliminate the "orgy of politics and log-rolling" incident to periodic general revisions.

Under the flexible system perfected in the 1930 act, the message pointed out, the Tariff Commission has completed, or has in progress, investigations touching 291 articles. Of those completed, 54 per cent carried recommendations for no change in rates; 16 per cent won increases and 30 per cent decreases; all of which "were placed in effect within a few days."

Effective Flexible Tariff.

"This effective flexible tariff, as a protection to sound progress and for the future protection of our farmers, workmen, industries and consumers, should be maintained in our American system. The proposal in the bill under consideration will effectively destroy it and is a step backward."

The message ignored the proposal contained in the House bill, that a consumers' counsel be established to represent the people before the Tariff Commission. This proposal was advocated originally in the 1930 tariff bill by Senator Norris, of Nebraska.

A grave constitutional defect in the House bill also was cited by the President. Whereas the House has undertaken to limit sharply the scope of congressional action upon Tariff Commission recommendations, the veto message pointed out that "no Congress can bind another Congress in any such manner relating, as it does, to a question of legislative procedure."

Discriminatory Practices.

After expressing his complete sympathy with the professed aims of the House bill to "eliminate discriminatory and unfair trade practices," for "preventing economic wars," and for "promoting fair, equal and friendly trade and commercial relations among nations," the President said he was fully alive to the effect on our own trade and world commerce in general, of the many arbitrary restrictions now in existence.

"The Departments of State and Commerce are actively engaged in protecting our export trade from unfair discriminations and infractions. If at any time circumstances are such as to permit hope that such barriers to international trade and commerce may be removed through the medium of an international conference without sacrificing American interests or departing from historic policies followed by our country, I shall not hesitate to take the lead in calling such a conference.

"If this measure is intended to do more than this, then the new policy should be clearly indicated for clarity to the American people and for the guidance and judgment of the Executive. An established national policy should not be changed by implication."

Says Vote Unnecessary.

The honorable House cringed again under the blunt exposure of its folly and legislative insincerity, but when the reading clerk had finished the message, Democratic Leader Rainey took the position that a vote on the message was unnecessary.

Representative Snell, the Republican leader, pressed, however, for a vote. An almost straight-out party roll call sustained the vote. The 178 votes garnered to override the veto compared with a total of 290 necessary to keep the bill on the legislative ways.

Only two Democrats—Connery, of Massachusetts, and Montet, of Louisiana—voted to sustain the veto.

Twelve Republicans and the lone Farmer-Labor member—Kvale, of Minnesota—joined the Democrats in their attempt to override the President.

Republicans Opposing Veto.

The Republicans who voted with Democrats were Representatives Amlie, Boileau, Nelson, of Wisconsin; Peavey, Schneider, Withrow and Statford, of Wisconsin; Campbell and Gilchrist, of Iowa; Christgau, of Minnesota; Morton D. Hull, of Illinois, and Sinclair, of North Dakota.

The now dead tariff bill had been sponsored early in the session by the late lamented Democratic "policy committee" of the House and Senate. The measure had been designed as stump material for the forthcoming presidential campaign.

Under the Democratic strategy plans, the tariff bill was to provide one of the major issues of the campaign.

That, at least, was what Democrats said of it a few days before the veto message become a certainty.

Bonus Advocates Will Get Hearing

Patman Bill Is Given Preferred Status by Rules Committee.

(Associated Press.)

The veterans' cash bonus advocates soon will be given a hearing by the House rules committee on the Patman resolution seeking a preferred parliamentary status for the new-money redemption plan.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, appealed to the powerful rules committee after his bonus payment plan was rejected in a 15 to 10 ways and means committee vote.

Approval by the rules committee of legislation defeated by another committee would be a departure from House precedents, but it is the only hope bonus sponsors have of getting a vote before the national conventions in June.

W. W. SMITH'S AID DEFENDS HER PAY

Miss Hinderliter Declares $4,800 Veterans' Bureau Rate Won by Merit.

(Associated Press.)

Ten salary increases which elevated her from a $1,440 Veterans' Bureau employe in 1923 to a $4,800 secretary in 1930 were defended yesterday before the House military affairs committee by Miss Annabel Hinderliter.

The secretary to William Wolff Smith, special counsel for the Veterans' Admnsitration, contended each advance in pay was justified under the Federal classification act, due to increases in her efficiency rating.

Smith, who collapsed on the witness stand three weeks ago when the committee was questioning him about a veterans' disability allowance he received in addition to his regular salary, was back at the Capitol, ready to resume his testimony. He will not be called until next Wednesday.

The committee is conducting a hearing on the Blanton resolution to repeal the emergency officers' retirement act and remove from the Federal pay roll several hundred persons, including Smith, who receive both active and retired pay. It also is intended to eliminate Miss Hinderliter through a clause directing the Veterans' Administration to dismiss all attorneys in the general counsels' office except "three assistants of profound legal knowledge."

Mr. Smith listened to the questioning by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, with an amused smile.

At one point Representatives Parker (Democrat), Georgia, and Representative Chiperfield (Republican), Illinois, threatened to quit the hearing if Blanton did not cease the personal nature of his questioning.

Parker said he could not see why Miss Hinderliter was "dragged in" and questioned for hours when the time of Congress members was valuable.

Blanton said he was seeking to show "the rottenness in these bureaus," and expected to prove Miss Hinderliter swore to a misstatement on which the $187.50 retirement pay of Smith was predicated. Smith draws a $9,000 annual salary.

SENATE IS PRESSED TO SIFT COAL ROW

Pastors Cite Terrorism in Kentucky Fields; Others Report Starvation.

(Associated Press.)

Appeals that the Senate investigate conditions in the Kentucky coal fields, of Harlan and Bell counties, were laid before one of its committees yesterday, together with an invitation from the area to "come on and investigate."

Intermingled with the plea for the inquiry was a reiteration by witnesses of charges of terrorism and starvation in the territory.

Two New York pastors, in messages to Chairman Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, urged approval of the resolution he sponsored jointly with Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, for the Senate to send an inquisitorial group into Kentucky to find out what is coming on.

One, the Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, said he felt "the truth can only be learned" by impartial observers, while the other, the Rev. Cameron Hall, asserted "no effort is being made to bring to justice those guilty of terrorism" and that he thought a senatorial investigation necessary.

Hall and Barnes, with the Revs. W. B. Spofford and Reinhold Niebuhr, represented a committee of 21 pastors that went into the fields. Mr. Spofford and Mr. Niebuhr will appear before the committee today.

James Garland, a miner, told the committee deputy sheriffs were "thugs," that the miners were in a terrible plight and that their constitutional rights had been denied.

Bob Hall, of Mobile, Ala., an undergraduate at Columbia University, who led a group of students into Kentucky and reported they were driven out, reiterated previous charges of terrorism and mistreatment by officials.

Views of the Kentuckians were contained in letters put into the record by Senator Costigan. One, from Cleon K. Calvert, of Pineville, who said he was speaking for the citizens and coal operators of Bell County, said they "rather approve" of an inquiry.

He asked that all factions be heard, that some of the hearings be in the area, and that there be an investigation of Communistic activities there.

Pineville, Ky., May 11 (A.P.).—T. J. Asher, jr., president of the Pineville University Club, tonight telegraphed Senators Cutting and Costigan asking that Bell County citizens be represented at the hearings on their bill seeking a senatorial investigation of coal field troubles.

Asher's telegram follows: "Strongly urge you invite representative Bell County and Pineville citizens to appear before your committee while you hear prejudiced testimony of New York ministers, students and writers regarding our section whose visits ranged from two to twenty hours. Our side has more at stake than outsiders seeking publicity."

Receipts Held Periled By Postal Rate Boost

(Associated Press.)

John Howie Wright, publisher of Postage Magazine, today issued a detailed denial of assertions by Postmaster General Brown that an increase in first class postage rates would produce enough revenue to balance the budget.

Mr. Wright sought to prove instead that, whereas first class mail now produces a profit of $60,000,000 on a gross business of $319,834,353, the 3-cent rate proposed in the revenue bill would "divert sufficient mail to other channels to reduce the gross volume to $265,000,000."

NEW RELIEF GROUP OFF FOR COAL AREA

Civil Liberties Union Party Plans to Make Quiz Even If Denied Writ.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—In high spirits, the American Civil Liberties Union party of investigators to the Kentucky coal fields left here today, confident of overcoming obstacles to accomplishment of their purpose.

"Scared? What of?" Dudley Field Malone, international lawyer, answered the banter of those who went to the train to see the party off. "I've always heard about Kentucky hospitality, and now I'm going to try it out."

Arthur Garfield Hays is leader of the group. Other members are Dr. Ernest Sutherland Bates, editor and former college professor; the Rev. Charles C. Webber, of the Union Theological Seminary, and Mrs. Carol King, representing the American section of the International Juridical Association.

Mrs. King, only woman of the group, was undaunted by prospects of an unfriendly reception.

"I've been arrested once before," she said.

She explained it was in connection with a department store strike.

Mrs. Malone, who was to have accompanied her husband, was ill and unable to make the trip, it was explained.

Malone said the purpose of the trip was "to see what steps may be taken to bring outside relief to the miners' families and to encourage a restoration of civil liberties."

At Harrisburg, Pa., the party was to be joined by Prof. Broadus Mitchell, of Johns Hopkins University, and Jesse C. Duke, lawyer of Virginia and Washington.

They will arrive in London, Ky., early tomorrow afternoon to appear before Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of the Eastern District, for a hearing on the Civil Liberties Union application for an injunction to restrain interference with the party by Bell and Harlan County officials.

"If we don't get it, we're going anyway," said Hays.

In comparison with a year ago the April sales average 21 per cent smaller, while the first four months of the year showed a decrease of 21 per cent. The figures were arrived at from 544 reporting stores in 231 cities.

tion asking the government's intention of policy toward Anglo-Irish trade:

"The position is that the Free State bill for the abolition of the oath is directly in conflict with the obligations undertaken by the Free State under the treaty of 1921. It appears to the government that if the bill becomes law it will be unreasonable to expect they should enter into negotiations for further agreements with a government which had repudiated an existing agreement."

Dublin, May 11 (A.P.).—President Eamon de Valera and his Republican supporters declined to comment tonight on the statement of J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, in the House of Commons, on Anglo-Irish trade.

There was nothing to indicate that the bill seeking abolition of the oath to the crown, now before the Free State Senate, would be affected.

Maddened Bull Kills Farmer.

Rumford, Me., May 11 (A.P.).—John Stephens, 45, was killed tonight on an East Rumford farm by a maddened bull which was dispatched by a rifle bullet after he had repeatedly charged two other men.

EYEWITNESS TELLS HOW 2 MET DEATH

Shock Felt by Huge Throng Prevents Cheers as Cowart Is Saved.

Editor's note—The following eyewitness account of the death of two sailors as the Navy dirigible Akron attempted to moor at Camp Kearney was written for the United Press by James Bratten, staff member of the San Diego Sun:

By JAMES BRATTEN.

Camp Kearney, Calif., May 11 (U. P.).—Intense interest of thousands of spectators changed suddenly to horror today as the Navy dirigible Akron soared aloft with three sailors clinging like flies to mooring ropes that were whipped about by the wind.

The Akron had descended close to earth four times, and on the final attempt it appeared that the ship would be pulled to the auxiliary mooring mast by 200 sailors forming a ground crew. The sailors had grasped the cables and were walking steadily toward the mast, pulling their immense burden ahead slowly. The crowd which had swelled to approximately 30,000 cheered what seemed to be the success of the crew.

Falls at 200 Feet.

Then a sudden gust of wind jerked the ship upward. Most of the crew let go the ropes as though they were hot. A score of men hung on until they were a few feet in the air, then dropped. The scene turned to one of pell-mell disorder, with sailors dropping from cables, falling on the ground, running aimlessly.

Three sailors clung tenaciously to their ropes as the ship soared upward. The crowd gasped. When the Akron had ascended to 200 feet, one of the sailors could hold on no longer and hurtled to earth to his death.

The ship climbed another 100 feet and the second sailor, unable to cling any longer, let go. He kicked like a madman all the way down. When he struck the hard-packed earth his body bounced into the air, then rolled along the ground, stirring up a puff of dust.

Ingenuity Saves Life.

Another groan swept through the crowd and was heard over the screeching of sirens as ambulances sped across the field to gather up the broken remains of the two sailors, who later were identified as Nigel Henton, Fresno, Calif., and Robert Edfall, South Bend, Ind.

Fearfully, the spectators gazed into the sky again, expecting the third sailor, Charles "Bud" Cowart, of Sand Springs, Okla., to follow his companions to death.

But Cowart's cold nerve saved his life. While the ship continued soaring upward and he was swept about in the air like a fly on a kite tail, he carefully knotted his cable into a "bosun's chair" and sat there until the crew of the dirigible hauled him through a hatch at the nose of the Akron.

His rescue, at 1,000 feet, caused a wave of relief to sweep over the crowd, but there was no cheering. The shock of seeing two men fall to their deaths had quieted the multitude.

ribbons testifying to battlefield experiences, testified to this.

The climax to the westward crossing of the Akron, which left Lakehurst, N. J., early Sunday on its first transcontinental trip, came during efforts to make an emergency mooring at Camp Kearney after an aerial voyage fraught with storms.

Several attempts to bring the great skyliner down had been made by a determined ground crew when upward currents suddenly caught the great ship.

Robert Edfall and Nigel Henton, both of the San Diego naval training station, and Cowart clung to the landing line to the horror of the watching throng as the Akron surged upward. Edfall and Henton lost their grip and fell to death, but Cowart clung on.

Upward the great ship swept with Cowart dangling on the line 300 feet below the dirigible. A height of 2,000 feet was reached, but Cowart maintained his precarious grip. Through bumpy air the Akron sailed, but Cowart clung on.

"Will try to land man on tail rope," was the crisp message Commander C. E. Rosendahl dropped to the ground.

Cowart at that time had been hanging to the rope for more than an hour. He held on with a "wooden hand" used by members of the ground crew to grip the landing cables. He also had a foothold on the line.

Planned Net Landing.

Minutes that seemed like hours to the gasping crowd below passed as the Akron cruised through bumpy air, rocking up and down, with the plucky Cowart dragging along. Then it was noticed that the distance between Cowart and the Akron began slowly to diminish. A thrill swept the crowd as it was realized efforts were being made to pull him through a cockpit.

There was no winch on the rope. It was slow work hoisting Cowart up by hand. At last he was dragged through a cockpit and a mighty cheer burst from 10,000 throats far below.

Cowart's home is at Sand Springs, Okla., near Tulsa. He has been in the naval service here only a short time.

The dirigible then headed southward to cruise over San Diego until dusk, when Commander Rosendahl said he would make another effort to land.

While Cowart was dangling aloft fire apparatus had been rushed to the field and great nets spread for him to drop on should the ship be maneuvered so this would be possible. In the meantime, the bodies of his two unfortunate companions were removed to the Naval Hospital at San Diego.

The accident came on the fourth day of the Akron's projected trip from Lakehurst to Sunnyvale, near San Francisco, to take part in maneuvers of the United States fleet, now in San Francisco Bay. It was the air liner's longest voyage, and difficulties had beset her since she nosed into western Texas to be balked by electrical storms and zero visibility.

Low Visibility Area.

An emergency landing had been decided upon to replenish the fuel tanks. After taking on 2,500 gallons of fuel, ready here, the Akron was to push northward to Sunnyvale. She was due there tomorrow in order to depart with the fleet, which was under orders to sail out of Golden Gate that afternoon for maneuvers in the Pacific.

Blocked by thunder and electrical storms over Texas plains east of El Paso, the Akron finally defied the elements and pushed through after being held back most of a day. Rapid progress then was made across New Mexico and Arizona to Southern California.

Three days after nosing out of the hangar at Lakehurst, Commander Rosendahl triumphantly crossed the last mountain range before reaching the Pacific, only to sail into an area of low visibility surrounding San Diego.

The ship made San Diego shortly after 8 o'clock, but because of fog was unable to proceed to the emergency landing field at Camp Kearney for more than an hour. A landing line was dropped at 10:50 in the first effort to land.

Describing the battle with storms over Texas and the hazardous crossing of the mountains, Commander Rosendahl in a radio message expressed the opinion that the Akron "underwent the most severe conditions ever experienced successfully by any rigid airship."

The ship and its crew reached the Pacific Coast in "excellent condition," despite the handicaps, he said.

Thousands Below Ship.

The spectators here formed below the ship in a thousand-foot circle, around which was a guard of 450 Marines. Within the circle, the center of which was the emergency mooring mass, were 50 guests, including 2 admirals, a major general, many officers and their wives and San Diego's mayor. There were also 200 Bluejackets, including 3 ground crew groups of 30 each.

On the third mooring attempt, at 11:15, the cable was made fast, and a group of 30 went to help the 2 groups of 30 each which held one of the ground ropes from the nose of the Akron. This made 45 men on each rope.

It seemed that the great airship had safely made its mooring. A sharp crack sounded. The cable parted. The big ship lifted. The two groups struggled to hold it. They were carried 10 to 15 feet from the ground as the big ship bumped up and down. Then one group let loose. A shout. The second group was lifted. All but 15 let loose. These were carried about 20 feet high. Then all but 3 fell back.

"It's the Acrobat."

Hysteria prevailed. Women fainted. Officers wept. Bluejackets ran around wildly, for their comrades were falling amongst them.

Upward sailed the ship. Edfall, aviation carpenter's apprentice from South Bend, Ind., fell from a height of 150 feet.

Two men were still clinging to the ropes.

"It's the acrobat," came a cry from one of the sailors.

Then a second form dropped from 200 feet. This was Henton, of Fresno, Calif., beloved by his comrades and noted for his prowess as a training station acrobat. Like Edfall, he was crushed to death. Yet the big ship moved upward. The third form was as still as a sand bag. For half an hour there was no motion.

The ship was 2,000 feet high. Then a cry broke out. The form was seen to move. But Cowart was still alive.

On the ground it was found that Edward S. Walkup, apprentice seaman, had broken an arm in the fall of the first fifteen.

Several times the Akron came close to earth as its navigators hoped to drop the clinging sailor to safety, but the air was too bumpy.

Enlisted in March.

At last a hatchway opened near the nose of the ship and slowly he was pulled in by hand. Then a few minutes later Lieut. Comdr. Rosendahl dropped the message, "Cowart O. K."

Lieut. J. C. Choatsworth, in charge of the landing crew, said that the accident was blamed on a faulty ring holding the rope on the right side. When this parted the burden of holding the ship was placed on the left-side crew. It was too great to hold.

A message from the craft said another attempt to moor was planned at 6 p. m. (9 p. m. Eastern standard time). A new cable was put on the mast and the ground crew was ready.

Fresno, Calif., May 11 (A.P.).—Nigel Henton, 19, killed at Camp Kearney today when the airship Akron lifted three men while being moored, enlisted in the Navy March 1, 1932. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Henton, of this city.

Camp Kearney Accident Recalls Similar Mishap

(United Press.)

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, in command of the Navy dirigible Akron when two sailors were killed at Kearney, Calif., participated in a similar accident several years ago at Lakehurst, N. J.

The veteran dirigible officer tells of the Lakehurst mishap in his book, "Up Ship," written recently.

At the New Jersey naval air base, three sailors were left clinging to the cabin of the Los Angeles when the ship snapped loose from its mooring cables and swept skyward. All were rescued when fellow seamen pulled them into the cabin.

Discussing the deaths of two sailors during efforts to land the Akron at Camp Kearney yesterday, Commander Garland Fulton, dirigible expert of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said no men had been killed in such an accident in this country previously.

Fulton explained that ground crews are instructed to release their cables immediately when an airship starts to break away. "Often some men continue to hold on by instinct and nothing can make them let go," he said.

Fleet to Put to Sea Without Awaiting Akron

San Francisco, May 11 (A.P.).—The United States fleet will sail from San Francisco tomorrow afternon and not await the arrival of the U. S. S. Arkon, it was announced tonight.

The Navy dirigible, delayed by storms and other difficulties on its scheduled flight from Lakehurst, N. J., to the Sunnyvale West Coast base, was moored to a temporary mast at Camp Kearney.

Orders for the fleet's sailing were issued by Admiral Frank H. Schofield, commander in chief. The Patoka, lighter-than-air craft tender, however, was ordered to remain here and will be at the disposal of the Arkon's commander.

Under original plans, the Akron was to have joined the fleet here and participate in maneuvers from this port.

GRANDMOTHER GETS RILEY GIRL CUSTODY

Care of "Cupboard" Child for Next 8 Years Provided For in Court Ruling.

Edith Riley, the 13-year-old girl who spent the greater part of the first portion of her life in a cupboard, will spend the next eight years with her grandmother, Mrs. Augusta Anna Annadale.

During this time she will be under the custody of the Board of Public Welfare. This was provided for yesterday in a ruling of Judge Mary O'Toole, of Juvenile Court.

At the expiration of the 8-year period, the child, it is expected, will be as normal and capable of choosing her way in life as any other 21-year-old girl.

Since she was admitted to Gallinger Hospital six months ago, Edith has gained 38 pounds, Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, staff psychiatrist, informed the court yesterday. When she entered the hospital last November she weighed only 33 pounds. She now weighs 71 pounds.

Dr. Gilbert recommended that the child be entered in a special private school. Her present intelligence, he said, is only half of normal for a child of her chronological age. The psychiatrist pointed out that even this represents "a remarkable improvement."

Edith was greeted in court by her father, Harry Riley, who was brought from the District prison at Lorton for the occasion, and by her 16-year-old brother, Francis.

Jobless Man Kills Self In Own Electric Chair

Chicago, May 11 (A.P.).—Philip Harris, 40, an unemployed ironmonger, today ended his life in a crude electric chair of his own construction.

A transformer attached to an electric light socket provided the current. Harris had run wires to two safety razor blades strapped to his chest with a leather belt. His landlady found him, half tumbled from the chair, dead.

ROBINSON ADVOCATES HUGE PROGRAM TO HELP JOBLESS

resolution to authorize loans up to $500,000,000 by the Reconstruction Corporation to States and cities for unemployment relief.

He said later the legislation was not recommended by the administration.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, presented to the Senate a list of eleven public projects estimated to cost from $625,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 as examples of the type of work against which the Government could issue bonds.

This program was prepared by the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor, and Pittman said off the floor they would each pay their own costs and interest charges.

The biggest project on the list was power development of the Columbia River, in Washington and Oregon, estimated at $100,000,000. A $90,000,000 tunnel under the Hudson River at New York was also suggested.

Meantime, in New York, Bernard M. Baruch, a Democrat and prominent financier, described Robinson's plan as "sound, necessary and effective."

Asserting in an interview it was needed to banish fear, Baruch added that enactment of the relief proposal "must be preceded by a balanced budget together with adequate taxation measures to take care of interest and sinking requirements on the bonds."

Beer Tax Advocates.

The pledge to support a beer tax to finance a relief program was signed by Senators Tydings, of Maryland; Walsh and Coolidge, of Massachusetts; Copeland and Wagner, of New York; Lewis, of Illinois; Hawes, of Missouri; Bulkley, of Ohio; Wheeler, of Montana, and Broussard, of Louisiana.

They agreed to support Tydings' amendment to the tax bill to tax 2.75 per cent beer, estimating it would raise $500,000,000, which could be used to pay off a bond issue for construction and take the place of a number of taxes proposed in the revenue measure.

The statement of the ten senators said community and welfare funds for aiding the unemployed were nearing exhaustion and that without a beer tax it was doubtful if enough money could be raised by taxation to take care of them.

Costigan's Statement.

In a formal statement, Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, long an advocate of Federal aid, said Robinson's statement and the bill introduced by Davis "indicate long deferred recognition both by Democratic leaders and the administration of the imperative necessity for such relief measures as progressives of both parties have been demanding since Congress assembled."

"It is to be hoped that minor differences will be forgotten and effective legislation of some kind enacted without delay," Costigan said.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday expressed fear that the Robinson bill, providing direct unemployment relief and a $2,000,000,000 fund for construction work would fail to pass at this session of Congress.

"Introduction of the bill," he said, "shows that Congress is finding out that we were right when we sought passage of the La Follette-Costigan bill.

"I am afraid this is merely a gesture as it comes at a time when Congress is coming near the point of adjournment. I am afraid it will not be passed."

Works Suggested.

Robinson said a bill before the Senate by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, "may be taken as the basis" for the proposed legislation.

"With assurances that the budget will be balanced," he said, "and with emergency assistance in sight for those in distress, a well considered construction program may be promptly authorized and entered upon by the issuance of $2,000,000,000 of tax exempt bonds to be spent upon self-liquidating or profit-making interprises, such as tunnels, bridges and the destruction of slum districts in great industrial centers.

"In instances where their credit resources have not been too far depleted, and where authority exists or can be promptly obtained, the States and cities should deliver to the Government their own tax exempt obligations, and the revenues from the undertakings should be impounded to pay, first, the running expenses, and second, interest and sinking fund to the Government. It is estimated that there is enough work of a municipal nature, which has been deferred because of lack of credit, to employ more than 1,000,000 men.

Special Tax for Interest.

"Simultaneously with the issuance of these bonds, a special tax should be raised to pay the interest and amortization on the bonds and thus relieve the balanced budget of any burden involved.

"The thirty-hour week, the application of the equalization fee to wheat as a test as to whether it is practicable to make tariff rates effective as to agricultural products and modification of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act so as to permit loans to Farm Loan Associations, are recommended as worthy subjects of legislation. It is especially emphasized that the budget be balanced; that emergency relief legislation be enacted, and a self-liquidating construction program be authorized and carried forward."

"The greatest fear that has gripped this country is that of unemployment—actual or apprehended," Robinson said. "It has chilled every heart and carries back through the merchant, the manufacturer, the farmer and producers of other raw materials. This is a crisis.

"The indispensable measures are a balanced budget and methods to get actual buying power into the hands of the consumer.

"A government which can not or will not pay the bulk of its annual expenses out of revenues must soon come to the end of its borrowing capacity. There is only one course left, namely by one means or another to issue money of doubtful value.

"Fear chills the hearts of our people because of the possibility of that now, and we shall go farther down into the depths unless expenses and receipts are brought together. The fear that this will not be done nullifies every plan enacted or proposed."

The subject of Federal relief was getting more and more attention in the Capital.

Reticent on Discussion.

President Hoover yesterday called into conference Charles G. Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Corporation, and Secretary Mills, his principal and almost constant financial adviser.

Both declined definitely to speak of the subject matter of their conference. Mr. Dawes, as he emerged by way of a side door to the President's office, was asked if he had discussed reports that the corporation might make loans in considerable quantity to needy States and municipalities.

"I can't say anything about that," he replied. "Why don't you talk to Secretary Mills?"

Mr. Mills, who also left by a side door, likewise declined specifically to say if such a subject or any related topic had been discussed. Asked if newspapermen could find out more definitely later, he replied:

"You will have to wait and see about that."

National Engineers Group Urges Public Works Plan

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—The American Society of Civil Engineers today urged the Federal Government to undertake at once a program of public works construction as the outstanding remedy for unemployment.

In a resolution the society called for the step as "the most effective immediate means of increasing purchasing power, stimulating trade recovery and reviving employment." It urged Congress to enact the necessary legislation to extend Federal loan facilities to solvent States, counties and municipalities to enable them to carry on their own programs of productive public works.

The society called attention to a shrinkage in volume of private and public construction from 1926, when it reached $9,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 estimated for 1932.

Surveys made at the President's direction, a communication accompanying the resolution said, indicate that the amount of necessary and worthy projects abandoned in the last twelve months would be enough to restore the program to normal.

$2,000,000,000 AID PLAN CALLED SOUND

Young, Smith and Baruch Praise Robinson's Move to Relieve Idle.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Owen D. Young, Alfred E. Smith and Bernard M. Baruch all commented favorably tonight on the $2,000,000,000 Democratic public works program proposed in the Senate today.

Mr. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., who is considered by many as a likely "dark horse" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, called Senator Robinson's proposal "the first comprehensive program which has been offered to correct our present situation."

Mr. Smith, also an aspirant for the nomination, pointed out that he had suggested such a program, in an address last January, and later in a published article.

Mr. Baruch, prominent financier, described the program as "sound, necessary and effective," provided it is preceded with a balanced budget and proper taxation to take care of interest and sinking fund requirements.

Young's Comment on Plan.

Mr. Young's comment follows:

"Senator Robinson's proposal in the Senate today seems to me to be the first comprehensive program which has been offered to correct our present situation.

"On the one hand, it should restore confidence by its insistence on a balanced budget, thereby keeping the bonds and the money of the United States sound.

"On the other hand, it undertakes affirmatively to put men and materials, now idle, at work to provide us with necessary, productive and self-liquidating construction.

"By a 30-hour week, work and earning power will be spread to a large number of the unemployed. The relief fund will be available as advances to proper authorities to tide over present suffering.

Move to Inspire Courage.

"Economies in Government operation and heavy taxes to balance a budget can, and I think will, be faced with much greater courage and confidence when they are part of a program which contemplates as a whole the relief of suffering, affirmatively putting men back to work, and starting business in materials.

"The experiment with the equalization fee on wheat, I believe worth making in the interests of the farmers. If successful there, it can then be extended by experience to other agricultural commodities.

"In any event, all agricultural products should feel quickly the restoration of confidence and buying power which Senator Robinson visualizes as a result of his plan.

"This plan, promptly adopted, should aid in putting to work the increase in our money volume and bank credit now being provided the Federal Reserve."

Smith Makes Summary.

Mr. Smith restricted his comment to a long summary of the program which he had suggested. It contained nine points:

1. That an emergency public works administraton be set up to function for one year, "or until the emergency is over."

2. That a public works administrator be appointed by the President, with regional assistants.

3. That the administrator have powers corresponding to those of the various Federal administrative agencies created during the war.

4. That there shall be a "prosperity bond issue of $3,000,000,000, of which $1,500,000,000 shall be for Federal public works, $1,400,000,000 be for the purchase of sound public works, bonds or debentures of the States and their subdivisions, * * * and $100,000,000 shall be for loans to limited dividend housing corporations for construction of low-priced housing accommodations."

Use of $1,500,000,000.

5. Women Protest Finance Aid to B. & O. Railroad

Baltimore, May 11 (A.P.).—A resolution protesting against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad receiving financial aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, set up by the Federal Government, was adopted here today by the Maryland branch of the National Woman's Party, meeting here in annual convention.

The resolution, members said, was a protest against the action of the railroad in placing on furlough without pay a group of married women who had long been employed by the road. The road, acording to the resolution, has "inaugurated an unfair and antisocial employment policy with reference to married women."

PROGRESS IS SHOWN IN TALKING PICTURES

RCA Victor Company Gives Demonstration Here at Engineers' Meeting.

Improvements in talking picture recording and reproduction which afford superior qualities of voice and music reproduction, resulting in greater audience enjoyment, were demonstrated last night at the meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at the Wardman Park Hotel. The demonstration, which was given by G. L. Dimmick and H. Belar, of RCA Victor Co., of Camden, N. J., is considered a definite step for greater improvement in the quality of the talking picture and is a result of the society's efforts to promote such improvements.

The RCA Victor equipment used in the demonstration employs a new loud speaker unit which is capable of reproducing sound of lower and higher pitch, resulting in greater naturalness.

Discussing projection problems at the session last night, W. B. Rayton, of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., described systems for projecting motion pictures from the rear of the screen. This type of projection is more suitable for small theaters and is now being used in the so-called newsreel type of theater, Mr. Rayton said.

Chauncey L. Greene, of Minneapolis, who spoke last night on "Standards and Requirements of Projection for Visual Education," told the engineers that "if educational pictures are to succeed in classroom instruction in schools, the quality of projection must be improved."

Problems in film editing which arise when it is necessary to reduce as much as several hundred thousand feet of film into a feature length picture having not more than 8,000 feet of film, were discussed by W. C. Harcus, of Paramount Publix Corporation, Hollywood, Calif.

Problems of release print will be discussed at the morning session today, while the afternoon will be taken up with theater operation problems. The meeting will come to a close tonight, following the official banquet at which Representative W. P. Connery, jr., from Massachusetts, will be master of ceremonies.

101 Ranch Head Sues Banks for $1,500,000

Tulsa, Okla., May 11 (A.P.).—A suit for $1,500,000 against the Exchange National Bank and the Exchange Trust Co. of Tulsa has been filed here by Zack Miller, one of the owners of the 101 Ranch Trust, of Ponca City.

The principal claim is that the defendant companies caused a depreciation in the value of the 101 Ranch Trust by bringing suit on a note. One million dollars is asked on this claim. Miller asked $250,000 for humiliation, worry and a nervous breakdown suffered during the recent financial troubles of the once famous Wild West Show properties. He seeks $250,000 punitive damages.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE fear that has been expressed in some quarters that the heavy advance sale of tickets for the "road show" engagement of "Grand Hotel" at the Columbia, beginning tomorrow matinee, and the great demand that probably will be made for tickets for several weeks to come will spell disaster for the other downtown first-run houses seems to me entirely unwarranted. With the small seating capacity of the Columbia, the greater the demand for seats the more the other picture theaters in the downtown sector will flourish. And I'll tell you why.

Those who feel that "Grand Hotel," with its colossal cast, will "steal the town" seem to have lost sight of the fact that only two performances are to be given daily—with three on Sunday—and that the Columbia can seat only 1,232 customers at a time. Allowing for standees, this means that not more than 2,500 patrons can be accommodated on any week day.

Under the customary "grind" policy, with six shows a day, the Columbia has had a potential draw of approximately 7,400 persons a day, exclusive of standees.

Since the other first run houses have successfully competed with the Columbia's biggest weeks under the all-day "grind" system, when its possible daily capacity was three times that of the two-a-day engagement, I fail to see by what method of reckoning "Grand Hotel"—granting even that it will play capacity at every performance—can be considered a serious threat to the competitive houses in the business area.

It is a thoroughly bogus bugaboo. The only unusual aspect of the road showing of "Grand Hotel" at the Columbia is that it will, perforce, have to run three times as long to play to the same number of people as would be attracted to a "grind" engagement of the same picture.

Courtland Smith, president of RKO-Pathe News, accompanied by Mrs. Smith, arrived in Washington last night. This afternoon at 2 o'clock, Mr. Smith will address the convention of motion picture engineers, in session at Wardman Park, on the subject of "The Future of the Motion Picture."

It will be recalled that as an executive of the Fox Movietone News, Courtland Smith had more to do than perhaps any other individual with the development of the use of sound in recording news shots and the popularizing of screen interviews with important personages the world over.

Associated with him at that time was Jack Connolly, formerly the Will Hays representative in Washington, who is still his righthand man in the capacity of general manager of Pathe News. Mr. Connolly arrived in the Capital on Tuesday, to be sure to be on hand on the occasion of one of his boss' infrequent public appearances.

And that reminds me. On Tuesday of this week Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, and Mrs. Meakin celebrated the nineteenth anniversary of their marriage.

Nineteen years ago on May 10, they slipped over to Alexandria between matinee and night performances of the Poli Stock Company, in whose production of "Way Down East" Mr. Meakin, then a professional actor, was importantly cast, and were married. They got back to Washington so late that the bridegroom was compelled to forego the wedding dinner, elaborately spread at the Raleigh Hotel, and hustle into his makeup while the lonesome bride dined in solitary glory with the members of her wedding party.

As Hardie and I both recall it, the leads in the Poli company that season were Izetta Jewell and A. H. Van Buren.

Incidentally, Mr. and Mrs. Meakin contrived to dine together on Tuesday evening!

Tonight at Constitution Hall the American Intimate Opera Company will present both "Il Pagliacci" and "Hansel and Gretel," as the fourth attraction of the Music Week celebration under the sponsorship of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

There will be no chorus to line up and sing rousing ensemble numbers; no magnificent orchestral effects; no gorgeous trappings of expensive scenery and elaborate properties. The members of the company are, first of all, actors. They are singers, too, and good ones. But they believe that opera, stripped of its nonessentials, is, after all, better described as "lyric drama," and that the jewel rather than its setting is important. Their performances are predicated upon this assumption.

It is reported by the management that the testimonial to be given the National Theater Players next Sunday night in the National Theater is rapidly taking shape and gives every promise of fulfilling the forecast that it will be one of the distinctive entertainments of the season.

In addition to the specialties to be offered by the members of the National Players, an impressive roster of outside acts has been enlisted.

As we have remarked at least twice before, it ought to be a lot of fun.

The next regular bill to be presented by the National Players, beginning next Monday night, will be a revival of Willard Mack's widely popular melodrama, "Tiger Rose," which served as Lenore Ulric's stepping stone to stardom. It was originally a Belasco production, and the late David Belasco was planning a revival of the play at the time of his death.

The leading roles will, of course, be played by Leona Powers and Donald Woods, with the other members of the splendid repertoire company congenially cast in one of the most colorful vehicles of their spring and summer season.

But that isn't all. There is more in the offing than immediately meets the eye.

Saturday evening at 8:30 at Wardman Park, for example, 30 Washington dancers will appear in the recital of ballets and accompanying divertissements, to be given by Lisa Gardiner and her senior dance group. Miss Gardiner will personally appear in several dance groups, among the most notable being "Chopiniana" and her Spanish numbers.

Then on next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, at Central High School Auditorium, the Community Institute will present Frederick Vining Fisher in a series of talks, illustrated with panoramic views of "The Trail of the Giants," "The Land of the Great White Throne" and "California, the Magnificent." The Tuesday talk, dedicated to Washington's junior and senior high schools, will be at 3:30 p. m.; Wednesday and Thursday's at 8 p. m.

And come Thursday of next week, May 19, the Friars Frolic, bringing a cast of 70, with a stellar group of 20 ranking performers, will be presented for one performance only in the Washington Auditorium, following a parade up Pennsylvania avenue, an audience at the White House and other formalities, preliminary to the inauguration of a tour that will extend to the Pacific Coast.

In the meantime, Glen Echo Park is steaming along at top speed with all of the amusement devices in perfect working order, the picnic grounds refurbished and MacWilliams' Band crowding the ballroom every evening, except Sunday. The Crystal Swimming Pool will be added to the attractions on May 28.

Before you begin writing letters about it, the new bills in the celluloid cathedrals will be as follows: Columbia, Greta Garbo, John Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery and Lewis S. Stone in "Grand Hotel," two performances daily, three on Sunday, all seats reserved; Earle, Warren William and Sidney Fox in "The Mouthpiece," and Peter Higgins, tenor, headlining the vaudeville; Fox, Elissa Landi in "The Woman in Room 13," and Wesley Eddy with Loew's "Wild Waves" stage revue; RKO-Keith's, John Barrymore and Helen Twelvetrees in "State's Attorney"; Rialto, Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke in "Night World" and "The Mystery of Life," vividly interpreted by Clarence Darrow, famous attorney and evolutionist; Metropolitan, Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen in "Wayward"; Palace, Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "Letty Lynton."

When that parade came up the avenue, headed by the Fox Military Band, yesterday afternoon about 4:30, they tell me it was all they could do to keep Wesley Eddy in the back seat of that auto. He wanted to get out and do that drum major business up in front!

Nice showers we're having after the rain, I shouldn't wonder!

Cereal Executive Plans Trade Drive

Kellogg Co. Will Expand Output by Advertising in Newspapers.

Special to The Washington Post.

Battle Creek, May 11.—Expressing the opinion that "business may be had if it is gone after hard enough," W. K. Kellogg, founder and president of the Kellogg Co., cereal manufacturers, yesterday announced that his company would inaugurate one of the greatest newspaper advertising campaigns in the history of the industry on May 15.

Mr. Kellogg stated that practically every important newspaper in the country, including The Washington Post, would be employed in a campaign extending through the month of June, and that among other benefits it would undoubtedly increase the flow of money through grocery channels.

Manager of Theater Is Convicted of Libel

Syracuse, N. Y., May 11 (A.P.).—Perry Spencer, theater manager, was convicted of criminal libel today by a police court jury for exhibiting the picture, "The Mouthpiece." Sentence on the charge, a misdemeanor, will be pronounced tomorrow. The maximums are $500 fine, imprisonment for one year, or both.

The charge against Spencer was brought by Miss Ruth Fallon, 18, who declared the motion picture libeled her father, the late William J. Fallon, noted New York defense counsel. The attorney in the picture, she said, was meant to represent her father in an unsavory light.

$25,000 IS DONATED TO STUDY OF MUSIC

Mrs. Ottaway Tells Federation of Action by Carnegie Corporation.

An appropriation of $25,000 to the Association of American Colleges to carry on the study of music was recently made by the Carnegie Corporation, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Elmer James Ottaway, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, at its annual spring meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Ottaway declared this action was a result of a campaign by the federation to make music a major study in colleges throughout the country.

A survey of 30 colleges, Mrs. Ottaway pointed out, revealed that one-tenth of the total number of students elect any study relating to music. A survey soon to be launched will attempt to ascertain what is being done in some of the colleges throughout the country and what could be done in others to bring music to a greater number of students.

A new type of college music course, Mrs. Ottaway declared, a kind that might correlate music and art, is the aim of the federation.

It was pointed out that greater recognition of music in colleges is part of a program to bring about a renaissance of amateur music in America.

Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, addressed the federation. He told of the Government's education work and stated that at the present time it was impossible to give music the emphasis which it deserves because of the curtailed budget.

Canada to Take Over Dominion Radio Nets

Ottawa, May 11 (A.P.).—The House of Commons, without dissent, today adopted the report of a special committee recommending eventual nationalization of Canadian radio broadcasts.

Within an hour the dominion was on its way to ultimate ownership of a coast-to-coast chain of broadcasting stations.

Jewish Fund Drive Progress Reported

Large Contributions Listed at Campaign Workers' Luncheon.

The results of the first two days' canvass in the united Jewish campaign were reported yesterday at a luncheon at the Jewish Community Center, attended by several hundred drive workers.

Among the larger contributions reported were: Mrs. Cora Berliner, $2,000; S. Kann Sons, $800; Isidore Hershfield, $200; Joseph P. Tumulty, $100; I. J. Mano, $100; Joseph A. Wilner, $100; Abraham Cohen, $60; Dr. Charles Bamesches, $60, and $50 each from Melvin Behrend, Arthur J. Sundlun, Mrs. M. Mano, Mrs. Fanny Schloseberg and William L. Bush.

Drive leaders reported that contributions generally were up to last year's levels and expressed optimism that the $50,000 drive for the relief of eastern European Jewry and Palestine reconstruction would be a success. The next meeting of drive workers will be at a luncheon tomorrow at the Jewish Center. Tomorrow night special services in behalf of the united drive will be held at the Eighth Street Temple, with Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of the Madison Avenue Temple, Baltimore, filling Rabbi Abram Simon's pulpit. Dr. Lazaron's subject will be, "We Salute Our Brethren." The drive will close May 22 with a banquet at the Jewish Center.

Waterspout Takes Cottage Over Lake

Ohio Man Describes How His House Was Carried Off and Wrecked.

Sandusky, Ohio, May 11 (A.P.).—A waterspout which came in from Lake Erie picked up a cottage east of Huron, Ohio, today and carried it half a mile over the lake, according to its owner, Robert Breckenridge, of Sandusky.

He said the cottage, situated on a point jutting out into the lake, was carried to Cheaka Beach, another projecting point, where it was dropped and wrecked. No one was in the cottage and no other damage was done.

Several years ago a number of waterspouts were seen off Put-in-Bay, in Lake Erie, but did no damage.

New Cinema Offerings

RKO-KEITH'S

"STATE'S ATTORNEY." Radio Pictures' Almication of a story by Louis Stevens, adapted to the screen by Gene Fowler and Rowland Brown, starring John Barrymore, with Helen Twelvetrees, William Boyd, Jill Esmond and Mary Duncan. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Wednesday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Mr. Jack Barrymore is following most competently in Brother Lionel's footsteps in this business of swaying juries, although to be quite frank he hasn't nearly the opportunity for impassioned pleading that Lionel had in "A Free Soul."

If you perchance expect dignity, you won't get it. If you're looking for great acting, you won't find it. And logic is a bit neglected this trip. But if it's entertainment and amusement, you're seeking, and the Comedian Barrymore, you'll find them here in both quantity and quality.

Mr. Barrymore essays the intriguing role of Cardigan, risen from the gutter to the shady eminence of criminals' lawyer, then on up to the district attorney's office, warning the underworld influence putting him there as prosecutor, that he will prosecute. And shortly he finds Powers, the leader of the group, before him on trial for murder, guilty, but primed with stories of Cardigan's past and threats against Cardigan's sweetheart, a material witness.

And John plays the role with all the Barrymore sense of humor, all the Barrymore effective histrionics, and—all the Barrymore insincerity.

This latter quality is well enough when lawyer Cardigan is bamboozling juries (we've been brought up on the traditional stupidity of jurors) and flattering women judges, when wedding rings and hearts and flowers are his weapons of death-dealing sash-weights are tools for harrowing a murderess, but at the end of the picture, when Cardigan should be stripping clean his soul before a jury of his peers, when his emotion should for once be real, Jack Barrymore is still playing with his tongue edging toward his cheek.

Of course, he can claim the alibi that it's Cardigan, and not Barrymore, who has play-acted so long that he can't help it. But alibi or no alibi, C. or B., you're going to think that Cardigan's renunciation, real or not, will be taken as a grandstand political move probably assuring the State's handing him the governship on a platter the next day. Or maybe, we're just suspicious.

The picture seems slowly paced throughout, a bit ridiculous at times, at others featuring gags instead of scenes, so that all in all, without much help from adepters, it's Barrymore's pretty brilliant performance and swell comedy that make this as interesting as it is.

The plaintive Helen Twelvetrees is right enough opposite the star, a little better than right in one or two scenes. And William (Leer-a-lot) Boyd is among those present as Powers.

An Edgar Kennedy comedy, "Mother-in-Law's Day," and the Pathe News, featuring the Kentucky Derby, complete the excellent bill.

WET VICTORY IN OHIO MOUNTS IN RETURNS

Bettman Defeats Master of Grange by 60,000 in Senatorial Race.

Columbus, May 11 (A.P.).—Ohio, birthplace of the Antisaloon League, gave its support to foes of prohibition in yesterday's primary election on the face of returns nearly complete tonight.

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman easily won the Republican nomination for senator on an antiprohibition platform, leading Louis J. Taber, dry, master of the National Grange, by about 60,000 votes. Next November Bettman will face Robert J. Bulkley, wet Democratic incumbent, who was renominated without opposition.

David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics, who made repeal his issue, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination from Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, dry, and his nearest opponent in a four-cornered race. Ingalls will run in November against Gov. George White, Democrat, who favors a prohibition referendum. White was overwhelmingly renominated over his politically unknown foe, Galen Starr Ross, of Columbus.

France's Men Snowed Under.

President Hoover and Gov. White made clean sweeps of the delegations to their parties' coming national conventions. Four candidates for former Senator Joseph I. France, of Maryland, were snowed under by a 3-to-1 vote for Hoover-pledged candidates.

Gov. White's delegate slate was opposed for nine places, but six anti-White men, who favored Al Smith were badly beaten in Cleveland while one delegate favoring Newton D. Baker lost in a close race at Akron.

Neither Baker nor Smith sought delegates, but it is understood the Ohio Democratic delegation will turn to Baker if White does not gain strength.

The outcome gives President Hoover the 55 Republican delegates with 55 votes, and White 56 delegates with 52 votes.

Besides nominating "wets" on the Republican senatorial and gubernatorial tickets, voters gave commanding leads to antiprohibitionists in both parties' races for two representatives-at-large.

Drys Blame Indifference.

Maurice Maschre, Republican national committeeman and organization leader at Cleveland, said "yesterday's vote will give assurance to the Republican delegates to the next national convention that a liberal plank in the Republican platform will not be unwelcome to Ohio Republicans."

S. P. McNaught, State superintendent of the Antisaloon League, which indorsed Taber, said the result indicated voters "indifference."

"The trend is not due to the fact that Ohio wants to slop itself with liquor, but shows that the majority of those who voted in the primaries have the fallacious notion that this State can get rid of the lawless element by ushering in a wet regime which has no constructive program to offer," McNaught said.

The latest Republican senatorial tabulations, in 8,411 precincts out of 8,901 in the State, gave Bettman, 243,032; Taber, 180,338; Mayor Jacob S. Coxey, of Massillon, 49,102; Mrs. C. T. Miller, of Cleveland, 26,878, and Charles A. Bracher, of Dayton, 26,262. The Republican gubernatorial count in 8,521 precincts stood: Ingalls, 278,-775; Brown, 249,384; former Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, 123,761, and James C. Beatty, 11,951.

Two Women in Congress Race.

Two women will seek seats in the lower house of Congress from Ohio as a result of easy victories over male opponents. They gained recognition in a primary in which the principal issue was prohibition or its repeal. One of them, Judge Florence Allen, of the Ohio Supreme Court, advocates a referendum on the eighteenth amendment. The other, Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson, of Dayton, is understood to possess liberal views. Judge Allen is a Democrat and Mrs. Patterson a Republican.

Advocates of prohibition repeal or modification were adjudged victorious in a majority of the contests, both at large and in the 22 districts. The liberals won an overwhelming victory for the two nominations in each party for Congress at large.

Twelve incumbent Republican representatives and nine incumbent Democratic representatives successfully defended themselves against opposition in the primary and emerged victorious, several by large margins.

Victorious Incumbents.

Victorious Republican incumbents are:

John B. Hollister, Cincinnati, First; William E. Hess, Cincinnati, Second; John L. Cable, Lima, Fourth; Grant E. Mouser, Marion, Eighth; Wilbur M. White, Toledo, Ninth; Thomas A. Jenkins, Ironton, Tenth; Francis Seiberling, Akron, Fourteenth; C. Ellis Moore, Cambridge, Fifteenth; C. B. McClintock, Canton, Sixteenth; Frank Murphy, Steubenville, Eighteenth; John G. Cooper, Youngstown, Nineteenth; Chester C. Bolton, Cleveland, Twenty-second.

Winning Democratic incumbents are:

Byron B. Harlan, Dayton, Third; Frank C. Kniffin, Napoleon, Fifth; James G. Polk, Hillsboro, Sixth; M. G. Underwood, New Lexington, Eleventh; Arthur P. Lamneck, Columbus, Twelfth; William L. Fiesinger, Sandusky, Thirteenth; Charles West, Granville, Seventeenth; Martin J. Sweeney, Cleveland, Twentieth; Robert Crosser, Cleveland, Twenty-first.

Winnie Judd Is Calm On Day Set for Hanging

State Prison, Florence, Ariz., May 11 (A.P.).—Today, the date originally set for her hanging, was just another day to Winnie Ruth Judd, slayer of her two former friends, Mrs. Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson. The sentence pronounced last February 23 was automatically stayed when defense attorneys appealed to the State Supreme Court.

Her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, of Darlington, Ind., visited their daughter Monday. They are living in town to be near her.

Big Steamer Aground; One Is Reported Dead

Lisbon, Portugal, May 11 (A.P.).—The 1,200-ton German steamer Gauss went aground tonight at the mouth of the Douro River near Oporto in a stormy sea.

Rescuers succeeded in shooting a line to the ship from the shore in the hope of saving the crew. It was reported one of the crew had already lost his life.

Reports of Doris Duke's Engagement Doubly Denied

New York State Senator Is Named; Their Mothers Aver "Ignorance."

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Doris Duke, 19-year-old heiress to the many millions amassed in tobacco by the late James B. Duke, was reported engaged today, but both her mother and the mother of her reputed fiance, Elmer P. Quinn, 36, denied the published story.

Mrs. Nanaline H. Duke, widow of the late founder of the American Tobacco Co. and British-American Tobacco Corporation, asserted:

"Neither I nor my daughter have ever heard of this Mr. Quinn. Of course, Doris is not engaged to him."

Quinn's 76-year-old mother echoed the reply: "I never heard of Miss Duke."

Her son, a former secretary to George W. Alvany, one-time leader of Tammany Hall, and successor to Mayor James J. Walker as a State senator, could not be reached at his office.

Miss Duke, often called the "richest girl in the world," was bequeathed an estate conservatively estimated to be worth $60,000,000. She had planned to sail tonight with her mother for Europe, but Mrs. Duke said the trip had been postponed until later in the summer.

3 Men Plunge to Death Inside 190-Foot Stack

Cleveland, Ohio, May 11 (A.P.).—Three men plunged 190 feet to their death today within a great smokestack they were removing when scaffolding built inside the stack collapsed, burying them under masses of timbers and debris. They were dead when rescuers finally reached them.

The victims are: Mike Marzik, Mike Divich and Joseph Capor, all of Cleveland. The cause of the scaffolding's collapse was obscure.

WET PLANK SEEMS CERTAIN FOR PLATFORM OF G. O. P.

a referendum plank in the Republican platform. There were several reasons for this, aside from the fact that Ohio is the home of the Antisaloon League. For one thing, Ohio is a pivotal State in a national election. Therefore, it is a State not to be antagonized by a political party.

Cited as Referendum Argument.

What would have happened if the wet Republican candidates had been defeated by the Anti-Saloon League candidates can only be conjectured. Drys in the party certainly would have cited such a result as an argumentment against a referendum plank, just as the wets are now citing the actual result as an argument for a referendum plank.

"Ohio used to be dry as a mummy," said Henry H. Curran, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. "Now she is as wet as Lake Erie.

"If the Republicans pussy-foot in their platform in June, Ohio will go Democratic in November, from President down to dog catcher. Ohio is wet."

Rufus S. Lusk, executive vice commander of the Crusaders, had this to say:

"As Ohio goes, so goes the Nation—and Ohio has gone wet. Antisaloon League support has lost its magic; in Tuesday's primaries practically all its candidates from governor down were engulfed in a wave of protest against national prohibition.

Candidates for Repeal.

"Victorious wet candidates were frankly for repeal; they did not weasel. Party managers, intent on writing a weasling prohibition plank, will do well to consider Ohio as a warning; the American voter will stand for no more straddling on prohibition."

The outcome of the primary creates two anomalies. The senior United States senator from Ohio—Senator Simeon D. Fess—remains a dry, a darling of the Antisaloon League. What will he do now? Those who know him predict that he will retire from the Senate voluntarily after his term expires in 1935.

Fess is scheduled to be retired as chairman of the Republican national committee after the June convention.

The other anomaly involves the Antisaloon League. The home of the league is in Westerville, Ohio. Will the organization continue to maintain its headquarters in a wet State?

Fess Stanch Party Man.

Whatever Senator Fess may think about the agitation against prohibition, he remains a stanch party man.

"What do you think of the Ohio returns?" Fess was asked yesterday.

"We have a winning ticket," said Fess.

"Did you say a wet ticket?"

"No, I said a winning ticket," Fess replied, and he walked off.

The drift away from prohibition in Ohio first became apparent in the 1930 election when the Democratic candidate for United States Senate, Robert Bulkley, came out as a wet and won by a handsome majority. The situation was clouded, however, by the fact that the candidate for governor, George White, ran as a dry. Since then he has become wet.

Both Advocate Repeal.

In Tuesday's primaries, the issue was clear cut. The successful Republican candidates for United States senator and for governor—Gilbert Bettman and David Sinton Ingalls—both advocated repeal.

Bettman, attorney general of Ohio, was opposed by Louis Taber, who was trotted out by the Antisaloon League. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was opposed by Myers Y. Cooper and Clarence J. Brown, both of whom were catalogued as "satisfactory" by the Antisaloon League.

Bettman will oppose Bulkley in the November election, and Ingalls will face Gov. White, unless the latter's ambition is realized and he is chosen as the vice presidential nominee of the Democratic party.

White, a favorite son candidate for the presidential nomination, will have Ohio's 58 votes at the Democratic convention in June. The Republican delegates will, of course, be for President Hoover.

CITY G. O. P. FIGHTS FEDERAL PAY CUTS

District Convention Names Delegates to Back Hoover at Chicago.

Steadfast opposition to reduction of Government employes' salaries was expressed in the 1932 platform of District of Columbia Republicans adopted last night by the convention, which also named delegates and alternates to the Chicago convention.

Affirming faith in and loyalty to the Republican party and extolling its accomplishments, the support of District delegates was pledged in the platform for the renomination of Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis by the June convention.

Edward F. Colladay was renamed national committeeman for the District, while Mrs. Virginia White Speel was again chosen national committeewoman. No opposition was put forward to their nominations, which were made unanimous after a series of enthusiastic seconding speeches from the floor.

Edgar C. Snyder, United States marshal, and the Rev. W. H. Jernagin were chosen delegates to the forthcoming convention, and the Rev. George Fiske Dudley and Francis Wells were chosen as their respective alternates.

Johnson Describes Furloughs.

As principal speaker before the convention Representative Royal C. Johnson (Republican), South Dakota, referred to Government economy projects as affecting Government workers here.

"Before this session of Congress is over," said the South Dakota representative, "through the initiative of the President, we will secure needed Government economy and if the Democratic party will allow us to do it, we will secure it without the discharge of employes, but by a furlough plan that will at less cost give more people an opportunity to make a living."

With regard to the Federal salary cut, the platform endorsed efforts of the President and other Government officials and legislators toward balancing the budget.

"We realize the necessity for such a course," read this section of the platform, "and as good citizens we pledge our steadfast cooperation in the enforcement of the laws looking to this end. We, however, are opposed to a reduction in the salaries of Governmental employes, believing that in the final analysis it will prove detrimental to the public good."

Hoover Regime Praised.

However, the platform expressed belief that the President "should be entrusted with the power of consolidating bureaus and departments to the end that reductions in running expenses of the Government may thereby result."

The administration of Herbert Hoover was accorded glowing appreciation by the platform, the plank referring thereto reading:

"Its acts have been established in wisdom and patriotism, and at home and abroad it has distinctly elevated the influence of the American Nation. Walking in the pathway of Calvin Coolidge, Warren G. Harding, William Howard Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, President Hoover has been in every situation the true American patriot and the upright citizen, clear in vision, strong in judgment, firm in action and in the midst of criticism and vituperation has pressed forward with the high resolve to make his administration worthy of the respect and confidence of his fellow-countrymen."

The Chief Executive was denominated in the platform as a "partisan making for the welfare of the National Capital and its beautification along well defined, artistic lines."

Suffrage Sought for District.

Equal suffrage for men and women in the District of Columbia was favored in the platform and the attention of the national convention was invited "to the anomalous condition which obtains in the District of Columbia with reference to the franchise." Delegates were urged to "do everything possible" to have the national platform include the indorsement of legislation which would bring enfranchisement to the District."

Internal revenue matters were not mentioned in the platform and a like silence was maintained as to the prohibition question. The Republican policy of protection as regards the tariff was hailed "as the bulwark of American industrial development and the foundation of American development and industry."

The present tariff law was declared by the platform to be "just, fair and reasonable" in its "reasonable application." Flexible provisions of the tariff act were heartily approved.

Maintenance and development of an adequate merchant marine were favored and the "splendid efforts on the part of the administration to bring about an agreement among the civilized nations of the world to end wars and rumors of wars and secure for ourselves and those who come after us a lasting peace" were heartily indorsed.

Five Alaska Delegates Pledged for Roosevelt

Juneau, Alaska, May 11 (A.P.).—Outvoting Republicans for the first time since 1916, Alaska Democrats have elected five national convention delegates instructed to vote for the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt. A sixth contest remained to be settled between a Roosevelt backer and uninstructed candidates.

With only about 1,200 more votes to be received from isolated settlements, the Democrats polled 4,929 votes to 4,173 for the Republicans.

TRAYLOR IS BOOMED BY PUBLICITY DRIVE

Campaign for Nomination of Chicago Banker Directed From New York.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—A widespread boom for Melvin A. Traylor, Chicago banker, for the Democratic presidential nomination is being directed from New York City.

A large publicity organization here, it was learned today, is managing the campaign. Thousands of pieces of literature are being put into the mail daily. They quote editorial comment on Traylor's availability and list his qualification in large type.

The pamphlets are being sent into every State in the Union and are signed by the Traylor-for-President Club of Fort Worth, Tex.

Although Traylor has been mentioned frequently as a likely "dark horse" candidate in the event Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt fails to win the nomination, the Chicagoan's name was brought forcibly to the forefront for the first time by Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago yesterday.

Cermak, dominant Democratic leader in northern Illinois, said his State's 58 votes would go to Traylor after a first-ballot "favorite son" vote for Senator James Hamilton Lewis.

Months ago, when a boom was launched for Traylor in Texas and Kentucky, where he formerly lived, the banker stated he was not a candidate and did not intend to be one.

The attitude of Roosevelt supporters here was that the Traylor movement was being pressed with the idea of advancing him as a likely candidate for the Vice Presidency or for some Cabinet post, such as Secretary of Commerce.

The Roosevelt forces made it clear they are relying on a statement of Thomas F. Donovan, chairman of the Illinois Democratic committee, that Roosevelt will get more than half the State's votes if and when Lewis' name is dropped.

BRUENING HECKLED IN TALK ON DEBTS

Tells Reichstag Cancellation Only Way Out; Sees Crisis if Delayed.

Berlin, May 12 (A.P.).—To the accompaniment of heckling from the National Socialists and the Communists, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening defended his foreign and domestic policies before the Reichstag yesterday in a long speech, in the course of which he reiterated the German demand for complete cancellation of political debts.

There has been no change in the German position that it is impossible to continue reparation payments, the chancellor said, since that policy was first announced to the world last January. There is increasing evidence that other powers are coming to realize the justice of the German view, Dr. Bruening averred.

Without complete cancellation of political debts, there can be no economic recovery for the world, the chancellor told the Reichstag, and postponement of payment, or even final payment in one lump sum, is not acceptable.

"It is easy to understand," he continued, "why the people are beginning to lose enthusiasm because of the deliberation with which the disarmament conference at Geneva is proceeding, yet there has been a certain noticeable improvement since February.

"The will to disarm is increasing. There is a growing understanding of Germany's position. What we want, briefly, is restoration of Germany's equality to the utmost. He pledged his government to rescind measures restricting commerce and to remove tariff walls as soon as other nations do likewise.

"The crisis in the next few months is bound to make such terrific strides," he asserted, "that delaying even weeks or months may bring the world into a situation from which there is no way out."

The Reichstag adjourned at 1:15 a. m., after a fifteen-hour session, to reconvene later in the day, when a series of nonconfidence motions will be brought up for a vote.

The chancellor's unvarnished description of the world situation as he saw it appeared definitely to have staved off defeat in tomorrow's voting.

Spanish Flier Leaves Burma.

CHARGES BY SENATOR GLASS START ROW IN BOTH HOUSES

gentleman from Texas to impugn the reputation of the late Martin B. Madden as I do any implication impugning my reputation," Britten replied. He concluded by shouting:

"It's a damn lie."

Later Blanton took the floor and said:

"I want to indorse what Mr. Britten said about Martin B. Madden. I don't think there was enough money in the world to influence Martin B. Madden.

Off the floor it was pointed out by members of Congress that Glass had given no indication that he referred to Madden and that the latter was not even a member of the banking committee which considered the McFadden bill.

Informed of the House developments, Glass said a Senate committee found evidence several years ago of a member of the House being hired to oppose the branch banking provisions of the McFadden bill. The evidence was suppressed, he said, because of the state of the member's health. He offered to prove his charge if any one would take responsibility for making the evidence public.

At the center of all the turmoil was Glass' bill designed to strengthen the country's banking system and prevent use of Federal Reserve facilities for stock market speculation.

Cables to Paris Read.

An assertion by Kean, in opposing the measure, that it was written at the suggestion of Willis was hotly denied by Glass, chairman of the subcommittee.

Prefacing his remarks with the statement that he meant no reflection on any member of the Senate, Kean asserted Willis obtained confidential information from the office of the Comptroller of the Currency which was available to no senator but Glass.

"He received the information," said Kean, referring to Willis, "and was in daily communication with Paris papers.

While the Senate listened closely, Kean read translations of information which he said Willis had cabled to French newspapers in recent months.

"The result of these dispatches," he said, "has been to make depositors of foreign money in the United States withdraw their funds and to so frighten investors that they have sold back securities held in the United States."

Glass Doubts Propriety.

When word of the House developments reached Glass he arose in the Senate and said the facts on which he based his statement were learned by a Senate investigating committee at the time.

"We had the testimony of this man's family physician that any revelation of that nature would endanger his life," Glass said, "and therefore, the subcommittee decided not to pursue the investigation any further.

"That congressman has since died and perhaps I should not have made the reference I did to it.

"If any one in this or the other branch of Congress is eager to make a revelation of the facts I still have the documentary evidence and if anybody wants to take the responsibility for revealing it, I will agree."

When informed of the Justice Department statement, Senator Glass stuck to his assertion and said the opinion "was never acted upon nor given publication of any description," although it dealt with a matter of "tremendous importance," and had been requested by President Taft. He remarked that he had not charged it was suppressed by any particular public official.

Mr. Palmer said it was clear that "if there was any suppression of the opinion by anybody, it was not either by Attorney General McReynolds or myself, for the former delivered to the Secretary of the Treasury and I returned to the Comptroller of the Currency the only paper bearing on the opinion which was to be found in the Department of Justice, and that was merely a photostatic copy of an unsigned memorandum."

He said it appeared from phases of the case that Lehmann's original opinion must have been delivered to the President (William Howard Taft), since he apparently had expressed a desire for a "fuller discussion" of the questions involved in it.

Norbeck Hits Glass Bill.

Chairman Norbeck, of the banking committee in the Senate, yesterday attacked the branch banking extension provisions of the Glass banking reform bill.

Norbeck charged that Comptroller of the Currency Pole had "concealed facts" in his arguments for branch banking by telling of the large number of small banks which had failed, but neglecting to point out the amount involved was much smaller than from the big banks that have closed.

The Glass bill, as approved by Norbeck's committee, would permit branch banking in any State.

Norbeck's opposition is based on his contention this extension would ultimately destroy State banks. He assailed the Federal Reserve System, which he charged had failed to perform its functions of maintaining an elastic currency.

Glass' statements on the bill, Norbeck said, were replete with disclosures the system was "dominated from New York" and that instead of controlling booms, it had been run away with and then had swung to the other extreme.

Wheeler Criticizes Lobby.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, told the Senate there was "never such a lobby" against the McFadden bill as there is at present "to put over" the Glass bill with its branch-banking features.

Norbeck denied the branch-banking provisions would operate to prevent failures.

"How are you going to make a poor note good by taking over the bank?" he asked.

The unit bank is an "American bank," Norbeck said, in which leading persons of a community are interested.

The branch banking system, he continued, "is a foreign system," which has only worked in small countries.

The hitherto unpublished Lehmann opinion, prepared in 1911, holding that national bank "affiliates" are illegal was made public yesterday by Senator Glass.

Addressed to Wickersham.

The opinion, which Glass placed in the Congressional Record, was addressed to the then Attorney General, George W. Wickersham.

"It dealt specifically with a New York bank and its affiliate, the names of which were eliminated by Glass in placing the matter in the Record.

The Lehmann opinion said, in part:

"You (the Attorney General) advise me that the President desires that there shall be submitted to him * * * a fuller discussion of the question of the legality of the agreements and arrangements existing between the ——— Bank of New York and the ——— Company, a corporation of the State of New York.

"On August 1, 1911, I submitted to you an opinion, in which you concurred, that the agreements and arrangements in question were means of enabling the bank to carry on business and exercise powers prohibited to it by the national banking act.

"I have reconsidered the question with the care demanded by its importance and have reached the conclusion that both the bank and the company, whether considered as affiliated or as unrelated, are in violation of the law."

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—H. Parker Willis gave out a statement today saying "there is not one word of truth" in Senator Kean's allegations that his dispatches to Paris caused heavy withdrawals in earmarked gold from the United States.

American Academy Picks Capital Men

Claudel, Adams, O'Brien and Mills Honored at Boston Session.

Boston, May 11 (A.P.).—The American Academy of Arts and Sciences elected 99 new fellows at the annual meeting today. Thirteen foreign honorary members were chosen.

Among the new fellows were Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy; Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury; Dean Wallace Donham, of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration; President James R. Angell, of Yale; William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, and Robert L. O'Brien, Tariff Commission chairman.

Paul Claudel, French Ambassador at Washington, and Sir William H. Beveridge, of London, were among the new honorary members.

The officers of the academy, headed by President Jeremiah D. M. Ford, were reelected.

$35,000 Asked to Pay Heflin Contest Cost

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Hastings, of the Senate elections subcommittee that dealt with the Heflin-Bankhead seating contest from Alabama, yesterday introduced a resolution asking $35,000 to pay up the cost of the committee's work.

The Senate upheld the right of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, to the seat, against former Senator J. Thomas Heflin.

Easier Liquor Buying Defeated in Belgium

Brussels, May 11 (A.P.).—Belgium's "drys" have won their battle with the "wets" to prevent modification of the country's liquor laws.

They defeated amendments to the present strict laws which amendments would have made purchase and consumption of liquor an easier matter than is now the case.

West Virginia Lead Of Roosevelt Gains

Assured of Full Support of State's Delegation; Murray Is Far Behind.

Charleston, W. Va., May 11 (A.P.).—Belated returns from the hill country tonight increased the overwhelming lead Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York piled up in the presidential preference primary election in West Virginia.

Gov. Alfalfa Bill Murray of Oklahoma trailed from the first in yesterday's balloting. Tonight, 669 precincts out of 2,342 gave:

Roosevelt, 68,442.

Murray, 7,007.

While the vote is not binding on the sixteen delegates to the national convention, it was conceded that Roosevelt will be given the full support of the delegation.

Meanwhile tabulation of the congressional vote was slow and several contests remained undecided.

Representatives renominated without opposition were: First District, Carl G. Bachmann (Republican), of Wheeling; Second District, Frank L. Bowman (Republican), of Morgantown; Fourth District, Robert L. Hogg (Republican), of Point Pleasant, and Sixth District, Joe L. Smith, of Beckley.

Police Join in Search For Vanished Salesman

Wytheville, Va., May 11 (A.P.).—Wytheville and Wythe County officers are searching today for Wayne Sample, 20, unmarried, of Salem, who disappeared from his automobile on the Lee highway west of Wytheville Tuesday.

Mr. Sample is employed by the Toledo Scale Co. as a salesman. His car with the gas tank empty, his sample scales and other baggage in it, was found parked on the highway Tuesday afternoon and showed no signs of violence. Other employes of the scale company who were working here with Mr. Sample are at a loss to account for his disappearance.

89 in Minnesota Enter Race For State's 9 Seats in House

St. Paul, Minn., May 11 (A.P.).—Eighty-nine persons, seeking to go to Congress, had filed with the secretary of state as candidates for the House of Representatives at the deadline for entering the race late today. It was the largest congressional filing in the State's history. Thirty-five filed on the Farmer-Labor party ticket, 32 on the Republican and 22 on the Democratic. Nine candidates from each party will be nominated at the June 20 primary.

Among the 29 late filers was A. C. Townley, former head of the National Nonpartisan League, Farmer-Labor, and former Gov. J. A. A. Burnquist, Republican. Silas M. Bryan, Minneapolis nephew of the late William Jennings Bryan, is a Democratic entrant.

Minnesota now has ten representatives, but will elect only nine next November, as the State lost one seat by the 1930 census reapportionment. The Legislature's act rearranging congressional districts from ten to nine was invalidated, resulting in the free-for-all race at large. All incumbents seek renomination.

THE TARIFF VETO.

President Hoover's veto message, which accompanied the Democratic tariff bill back to Congress, is one of the most powerful documents that have come from the White House. With measured logic and well chosen phrases he riddles the Democratic alibi tariff measure from beginning to end. It must have been a rare pleasure for the President to sweep overboard the political claptrap that was written into that bill.

The message brings out in bold relief the befuddlement of the Democratic party on the tariff issue. Democratic leaders howl about the "iniquities" of the Smoot-Hawley bill, and then come forth with a plan to destroy the flexible provision whereby inequalities in the existing law may be corrected. Just after passing this blunder through the House, the Democratic leaders brought out a tax bill containing duties on oil and coal. Senator Barkley, the keynoter for the Democratic national convention, is fighting to retain the coal tariff in the Senate revenue bill, while at the same time preparing his address that must of necessity attack the "vicious Republican tariff". The Democratic attitude toward the tariff is shot through with sham and pretense at every angle.

Foremost among the inconsistencies of the bill which Mr. Hoover sent back to Congress are the provisions "to eliminate discriminatory tariffs; prevent trade wars; and promote fair, equal and friendly trade", and the provision "to negotiate with foreign governments reciprocal trade agreements under a policy of mutual tariff concessions". One objective is wholly incompatible with the other. As pointed out by President Hoover, tariff concessions do not remove discrimination, but are "the very breeding ground for trade wars". While pretending to iron out international trade difficulties, this measure would, in reality, have committed the United States to a policy of favoritism, intrigue, and hostile bickering with other nations.

American policy prescribes equal treatment for all countries. Treaties with 31 nations guarantee such equal trade privileges. The Democratic policy as set forth in this bill could not be carried out without violating those treaties and involving the United States in endless international trade rows. Fortunately, the President's veto, which was sustained by the House, gives no opportunity to measure the extent to which American policy and sound common sense were abandoned in the passage of this bill.

From the beginning this measure has been regarded as a political gesture. If the Democrats expect to go before the people and defend such an outrageous surrender of American rights, if they attempt to justify this scheme to allow foreigners to help write the duties which protect American industry, agriculture and labor, voters will be insulted at the Democratic estimate of their intelligence. Never before in history has tariff protection been so vital to the welfare of the American people as it is today. Never before has there been such a clamor on the part of foreign importers for admittance of their products to the American market. A vote to permit foreign nations to participate in the downward revision of the American tariff is equivalent to a vote for economic suicide.

Even the Democrats who are accustomed to denouncing "Republican tariff rates", while fighting for higher duties on products of their home States, must realize now that their party has indulged in another colossal blunder. The House vote, sustaining the veto, makes an end of the Democratic tariff gesture, but it does not alter the reputation which the Democratic majority in that body has acquired for fanatical and destructive legislation.

FUTILE RELIEF EFFORTS.

Senator Robinson chose a poor time to revive the issue of an enormous outlay by the Government to relieve the unemployed. The budget is not yet balanced and every cent that can be raised through taxation and rigid economy will be needed to meet the ordinary expenses of government. The Democratic relief program raises a cloud over the entire program of retrenchment.

As outlined by Senator Robinson the Democratic program calls for $300,000,000 to be made available to States and municipalities, and for a $2,000,000,000 bond issue to finance "self-liquidating or profit-making enterprises, such as tunnels, bridges and the destruction of slum districts in great industrial centers." It recognizes a need for immediate funds to aid local relief agencies, in addition to the construction program, which necessarily would be slow in getting under way.

No one can deny that unemployment has assumed serious proportions. The continued severity of the depression has placed a heavy burden upon State and municipal agencies administering relief. Fear that some agencies will soon be without funds adds to the deplorable conditions. Additional sources of relief may have to be tapped to prevent widespread suffering. Yet it is questionable whether the remedy proposed by the Democratic Senate leader would improve the situation.

Where would the senator obtain the $300,000,000 needed for immediate relief? Higher taxes than those proposed in the Senate bill would impose such a burden upon the country that business would be seriously affected, thus increasing unemployment. Congress has an empty Treasury to work with. Consequently, there is very little that it can do to relieve unemployment without destroying more jobs than it creates.

In spite of Senator Robinson's explanation, the proposed $2,000,000,000 bond issue remains somewhat of a dilemma. Apparently he intends that this money should be raised by the Government and lent to the States to finance public works. But even this vast program of construction would give work to less than 1,000,000 men. It would require months to get the program under way, and higher taxes would be needed for interest and retirement of the bonds. Furthermore, the working capital of the Nation would be absorbed in these securities and there would be $2,000,000,000 less available for the revival of private industry and business.

The economic structure can not be set in motion again by transferring its functions to the Government. Nor can municipalities lift themselves out of their distress by acquiring fresh debts to finance public improvements they can not afford. In creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Congress attempted to put capital in the hands of private enterprise once more. The Robinson program would draw capital back into the hands of the Government. Nothing can be accomplished by drying up the stream of private commerce to stimulate public enterprises. There is grave danger that the Robinson program would plunge the country deeper into depression and aggravate the hardships of jobless men.

THE VETERANS' REVOLT.

Among the most vehement denunciations of extravagant veterans' relief legislation are those coming from veterans themselves. Disabled men who went over the top and are now dependent upon the Government for aid are deeply chagrined at the raids which are being made on the Treasury by other groups who saw nothing of the war and have no legitimate claims against the Government. Invariably these pension grabbers make their plea in the name of the disabled veterans, and weak-kneed politicians have not the courage to distinguish between deserving veterans and parasites.

The petition of the National Economy Committee to President Hoover and Congress is an illustration of the resentment really disabled veterans feel because of this current drive for gratuities. This committee, composed for the most part of World War veterans, regards this lobbying for special favors as "a vast legalized racket foisted on the people." Declaring that one-quarter of the national revenue is now expended for the benefit of less than 1 per cent of the people, this group demands a reduction of $450,000,000 in the amount spent on veterans. It is estimated that that sum is squandered on former soldiers who suffered no disabilities as a result of their military service and who have no valid claims against the Government.

Evidence of an aroused public sentiment may be seen in this remarkable petition signed by many distinguished veterans. The committee fears that "the subservience of our Government authorities to the minority group receiving this subsidy, the flinching from any real effort to reduce this $1,000,000,000 expenditure, is a direct cause of the depreciation of the dollar in the international exchange." Public sentiment re-echoes the belief that this "steadily mounting burden of expenditures for those who suffered no disability in the war is not only an intolerable menace to the national credit, but reaches to the stability of popular government itself." Likewise public opinion will indorse the demand that "this vast legalized abuse" be abated and that the welfare of taxpayers be considered before additional millions are frittered away in gratuities.

The veterans of this committee are by no means the only ones who have stood out for more economical veterans' legislation. Representative Lewis W. Douglas, of Arizona, stood on the floor of the House and demanded that expenditures for this purpose be cut down. Mr. Douglas fought overseas in the World War. He represents a State with the largest per capita veteran population in the Union. But he had the courage to fight against his own interests and to ignore political pressure, because he realizes that the increased gratuities to former soldiers are demoralizing Congress and placing an intolerable burden on taxpayers.

In the course of the debate Representative Douglas said:

> As long as I am a member of this House I will stand in the well or elsewhere to oppose every organized minority that attempts to impose on the United States a burden which can not be justified and which the United States can not and should not carry.

When the public is aroused to the actualities of the situation Representative Douglas and others who fought for the return of reason in the veterans' relief program will be rewarded for their honesty and courage. The great taxpaying public is becoming articulate. Deserving veterans are publicly expressing their disgust with former comrades who are seeking unmerited doles. As this sentiment gains momentum congressmen who stigmatize themselves as tools of the special interests may expect to find themselves looking for lame-duck jobs.

INEXCUSABLE DELAY.

Repeated subterfuges to postpone a decision upon the nomination of Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, to the Circuit Court of Appeals can not be justified. After the subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee had favorably reported on Judge Wilkerson consideration of his appointment was again delayed for further hearings. Complaints of radical elements have been heard at length and nothing derogatory to his standing as a judge and a patriotic citizen has been adduced.

Judge Wilkerson is entitled to full credit for placing Al Capone behind the bars of the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta. That accomplishment alone constitutes a strong recommendation. If Judge Wilkerson's appointment should be rejected by the Senate it would be hailed far and wide as a victory for organized crime.

Labor representatives who have appeared, doubtless in all good faith, to oppose the nomination should realize that they are playing into the hands of organized crime. Objections raised against Judge Wilkerson are petty in comparison to the larger issue of law enforcement against criminal gangs. Judge Wilkerson's appointment should stand as notification to organized crime that United States courts are above the reach of their contaminating methods.

The judiciary subcommittee announces that still further hearings are to be held with regard to judicial acts of Judge Wilkerson in Chicago. It will be inexcusable if these minor points are allowed to drag out the sessions until it is too late to secure review by the full committee and action by the Senate before the adjournment of Congress. Not only fair play to the individual, but the welfare of the Nation demands prompt action on this vitally important case.

Five thousand years ago the Hittites and Assyrians practiced a 5-day week. Possibly that accounts for certain dusty heaps of ruins.

The proposed tax on cosmetics is probably intended to give the natural roses a chance.

THE GENESIS OF "DIXIE"

From the Detroit Free Press.

Because it became the war song of the Confederacy, "Dixie" has been generally accepted as a song of Southern origin. It is, indeed, a song of the South; but its history proves that it belongs to North and South alike, though it was not intended to be a patriotic melody.

Just 100 years ago a 17-year-old lad joined the United States Army as a fifer. His name was Daniel Decatur Emmett; his birthplace was Mount Vernon, Ohio; and his ancestry was American. Before him his father had served in the War of 1812. His grandfather had been a Revolutionary soldier. But Dan was considered too young for service. After his discharge he joined circus bands, as a drummer. Later he mastered the violin and in 1843 organized what is said to have been the first minstrel troupe. Then the Bryant Minstrels hired him to compose Negro melodies and "plantation walk-arounds."

The company was in New York in 1859 when Jerry Bryant asked Dan for a new "walk-around," to be ready in a day or two. On a dreary, rainy Sunday in the Northern metropolis Dan's thoughts literally translated themselves into that phrase, "I wish I was in the land of cotton." Then the tune came to his mind, began to sing from his violin; and presently the song as we know it was evolved.

Dan Emmett's sympathies were with the North when the Civil War broke out two years later. The adoption of "Dixie's Land" by the South made him an idol below the Mason and Dixon Line, but it embarrassed him in the North, where he was denounced as a traitor. He sold the copyright for $500 and went on composing tunes until the end of the war. For some twenty years after 1865 Emmett lived in Chicago, later returning to a little house in Mount Vernon, Ohio, where he died in 1904. Last year the Ohio Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy presented a boulder marked with a memorial tablet to the town of Mount Vernon.

It was after Appomattox that Abraham Lincoln, receiving a delegation from the South, told its band to play "Dixie," since "We have captured the Confederacy, and 'Dixie' belongs to the Union." But "Dixie" had belonged to the Union long before its notes led brother against brother in battle. Moreover, it has been said that musicians who study so-called American folk-songs regard "Dixie's Land" as one of the few melodies which show no alien influence.

HELPLESSNESS.

He seemed so solemn sad when he Came in to tell his grief to me,
And it was on my lips to say
That I had heard that very day
A dozen tales of hurt and woe
From others whom I chanced to know.
But something stopped me, and I stood
And let him talk as best he could.

He was a man I'd never seen,
To me his care could little mean.
I could have sent him off unheard
With but a crisp and cruel word.
Then henceforth he would live as one
Whom I had turned my back upon.
And thinking thus, I heard him through,
Though there was little I could do.

The thing that hurts in Trouble's clutch
Is not that one must do so much
For others worried and distressed,
But that full friendship, at its best,
So very little can bestow
To ease another's weight of woe,
And that so often comes the call
From those it can not help at all.

If the Crowd Isn't Offended by Foul Blows, the Referee Won't See Them.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

GRAFT killed Rome. Men in high place sacrificed the nation to their own greed and lined their pockets with the money collected for national defense.

Graft wrecked France. The mistresses and favorites of kings made merry with the tax money wrested from starving peasants and brought the state so near the verge of ruin that a revolution was required to save it.

Graft makes vast China the weakest of nations. Every official and every business agent takes his "cut" of the money that passes through his hands. Millions appropriated for national defense, or contributed to feed the destitute, enrich thieving officials and serve no other purpose. And there is no hope of better things, for custom has made graft respectable.

The Russia of the czars was destroyed by graft. The war with Japan was lost because grand dukes and lesser gentry filled their pockets with the money that should have been spent for guns and ammunition. The soldiers at the front were betrayed—as their brothers were in the greater war that followed.

Graft is the cancer that destroys every nation when prosperity has made the people soft and lust for money has destroyed their sense of honor and their patriotism.

Do you realize what is happening in America?

You hear much about police officials and other servants of the law who are "fixed" by liquor dealers and racketeers, but these are minor offenders.

Do you realize that business men in all great cities pay tribute for protection; that buyers are offered and usually accept bribes, whether buying tires for an employer or school supplies for a State; that builders bribe officials for the privilege of violating building codes; that deposits of public money and contracts for public work are given to those who offer the biggest bribe; that laws are made and millions of public money appropriated to benefit those who "stand in" with the right people; that Big Business pays for tax exemptions; that our "big men," in and out of office, work together for their personal gain regardless of the cost to the Nation?

Why? Because the people don't care. Because any mention of common honesty is called "preaching." Because a cynical public has lost its capacity for indignation and no longer feels an honest contempt for rottenness.

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Smith-Roosevelt Fight.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Alfred E. Smith says he has put a chock under the Roosevelt band wagon, and he probably has. The New York governor is not out of the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, but his prospects are not so good as they were.

The figures from both Massachusetts and Pennsylvania show that the primaries in those States were battles between the political organizations rather than popular clamor for either man. Smith carried Massachusetts with 133,303 votes, against 56,480 for Roosevelt. In 1928, Massachusetts, in the general election, cast 775,566 votes for Hoover and 792,758 for Smith. That is, about one-fourth of the Democrats of Massachusetts turned out Tuesday for the contest between the Smith and Roosevelt organizations.

The same thing happened in Pennsylvania. Smith's total vote in the presidential election of 1928 was 1,067,586. The entire Democratic vote in Tuesday's primaries was about 222,000, or approximately one-fifth of the Democratic votes cast in the State in 1928. Another battle between the Smith and Roosevelt organizations, this one going to Roosevelt.

How the people in either State feel about the Democratic presidential candidates remains unknown. The best that can be said of these primaries is that when approximately one Democrat in five turned out to express preference for either Smith or Roosevelt, there is no indication of a very great popular interest in either man. Smith apparently had the better organization in Massachusetts, Roosevelt in Pennsylvania.

A $4,000,000,000 Country.

Brooklyn Citizen.

The American people are suffering from a bad attack of the nerves. The hysteria about the $4,000,000,000 budget reminds one of the similar hue and cry during the Harrison administration, when the Federal budget reached the then enormous sum of $1,000,000,000. To the complaining critics, Tom Reed, of Maine, the then Speaker of the House, made the retort: "This is a billion-dollar country."

The budget introduced by Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer, totals $3,000,000,000. This is only $1,000,000,000 less than our budget, yet England has a population of only 42,000,000, whereas we have a population of 126,000,000. England has only one-third the wealth of this country, so that the answer today is the same that Tom Reed made 40 years ago, namely, "This is a $4,000,000,000 country."

Morals and Morals.

New York Evening Post.

A note that rings out sharply is struck by the Herald Tribune. Of the utterly disgraceful pension bill vetoed by the President it says: "The censors of the public's morals in our National Legislature look very shady now that Mr. Hoover has exposed them." They do. They put through both House and Senate this bill voting, as the Herald Tribune said, "pensions for deserters and for 'widows' of service men who never were married." This was a crooked thing to do. It was patently and actively dishonest. Yet the men who did it howl over the morals of the New York Stock Exchange. We wish that the business conduct committee of the exchange could turn the tables and investigate the Government. It would teach our legislators a code of morals higher than any they have had since the original Constitutional Convention.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stimson vs. Root—World Court Proponents Disagree Among Themselves—Confusion in Senate Committee.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The moment when Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, proponent of the World Court, is focussing attention anew upon the ambiguities of the Root protocol, is the moment chosen by Manley O. Hudson, propagandist, for telling a committee of the House that it is not the protocol, but the Senate's reservation, which has confused the World Court situation. It was only yesterday that Senator Robinson reaffirmed his view that in a deadlock over advisory opinion the protocol would not automatically eject the United States from the court, against the view of Newton D. Baker, another proponent, that it would.

The Senate's reservation was as unmistakable in meaning as language and John Bassett Moore could make it. It said that the court shall not—

> "without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest."

When the League of Nations, interposing, brushed aside the Senate's request for individual replies from the nations and, professing to be in doubt as to the meaning of the reservation, invited the United States to discuss its interpretation, Secretary Kellogg declined, saying the reservation was "clear and unequivocal" and needed no interpretation.

The interposition of the league resulted in this protocol, by counter-proposal, over which all the confusion arises. It has set the proponents of the court themselves the one against the other in opposing camps of interpretation. It has set Mr. Stimson against Mr. Root and against himself. In November, 1929, not pretending that the protocol constitutes an acceptance of the reservation quoted, Mr. Stimson tells the President that he has found outside the protocol something just as good as an acceptance, or part of it, and in March, 1932, after Mr. Root has spoken, tells Mr. Borah "that the protocol fully accepts the five reservations."

While all that preceded is as nothing in comparison with the confusion reigning in the committee on foreign relations of the Senate over the meaning of the protocol since Mr. Root devoted three hours to elucidating it for the committee's benefit! JOHN W. FARQUHAR.

M. A. W. Discusses "The Penalty for Marriage."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is no more striking example of idiocy in the annals of Congress than the present attempt at economy by discharging married women.

In 1931 the Legislatures of five States—California, Delaware, Nebraska, New Hampshire and North Carolina—gave consideration to bills which would forbid the employment of married women teachers. Fortunately all these proposals were defeated. In 1931 the Maryland State Board of Education ruled that a woman teacher could not be dismissed on account of marriage, on the ground that such dismissal would amount to discrimination on account of sex. Moreover, the Supreme Court of Oregon, in sustaining the rights of married women to public office, held that "marriage does not involve a single element of wrong, but, on the contrary, marriage is not only protected by both the written and unwritten law, but it is also fostered by a sound public policy." (153 Pac. 482.)

Advocates of dismissal on account of marriage contend that social and economic justice would be promoted thereby. The dismissal of public employes without regard to individual effort, training and efficiency is an injustice to the taxpayer and an affront to those who strive for honest achievement. The evils of such a measure must be apparent to any socially-minded person. In a period when the marriage rate is declining and the divorce rate increasing, this Government can not afford to penalize marriage and encourage divorce. The institution of marriage does not warrant such treatment at the hand of Congress.

It is unthinkable that a congressman, with a knowledge of the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution and the political rights secured thereby, would vote against women. The right of women to hold private office may be subject to discrimination, but it is unthinkable, under our Constitution, that such discrimination would extend to office in the Government of the United States. If Congress should pass such a discriminatory act, the Supreme Court of the United States would be bound to declare it unconstitutional.

Mr. Albright Calls for Reorganization of Federal Land Bank.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate you on the editorial in The Post of May 2, particularly "Banks Still Hoarding" and "Duping the Farmer."

I have been reading many of our country's best daily publications these past twenty years, but never have I found any other paper with editorials so just and enlightening.

The farmer's need is for a reorganization of our Federal Land Bank, placing at its head a man fair and broad enough to see the peril of the farmer unless extended more liberal loans with less interest on good properties. This must be done while farm product prices are so low, or the farmers will lose their farms.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

Eyebrows Are Arched to Fit the Face.

IN spite of the fact that the plucked, pencil-line eyebrow is passe and in spite of the fact, too, that the tendency is to merely "clean" the natural brow line, eyebrows can be arched and their shape changed to influence the shape and expression of the face and also to influence the size of the eyes.

Elsie Pierce.

Women with large, beautiful eyes often live under the mistaken impression that they do not have to "fuss" with their brows and lashes. As a matter of fact, it is just as necessary to groom the brows and lashes framing large, luminous eyes as it is to accent the small eye.

The large eye should wear a more delicate, fine brow in order to avoid giving the face a top-heavy appearance. The small eye may be accented and made to appear larger by a more prominent style of brow and a heavier line.

If the brow bone over the eye is too close to the eye, this tends to make the eye appear smaller and deeper set and removing the hairs from beneath the brow will widen the space between the eye and the socket bone making the eye appear larger.

The Shape of the Face.

One of the leading brow stylists in the country has evolved ten brow styles, and these affect the shape of the face considerably. One style is called the "conservative," and this is a natural and popular brow mode following the arch of the bone. The straggly hairs are removed both below and above the brow line.

To make the face appear thinner, the "dainty" brow style is recommended. In this the hairs are removed from beneath the brow to create a deep arch, and the hairs are also removed from inner and outer corners of the eye, leaving the arch short and deep.

To make the face appear plumper and the eyes larger, the "crescent" is recommended. In this style a deep crescent is achieved by removing the straggly hairs from beneath the brows, the ends are left low, close to the nose and are "pulled down" at the outer corners with pencil or mascara. A long line to the brow, in this style.

The face looks younger and eyes smaller and deeper in "studios," a style which is achieved by having the brow straight across the face, drooping slightly at the outer corner.

Then there's the "Hollywood," which adds expression to the eyes. It follows the contour of the eyes, and the inner corners are left thicker, the brow tapering toward the outer corner. The "debutante" is much like the "conservative" described above, but quite a bit thinner. The "Oriental" dips low at the inner corners, then tapers upward at an angle, stopping near the temples. A "devilish" expression is attained, like that in masks of satin. The "piquant" slants in exactly the opposite direction, high at the inner corners and straight down, adding a piquant bored expression to the face.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Negligees are glorious and flattering! This one of black velvet uses a thousand miles of peach-colored tulle ruffles. (A Dah-ray design.)

NEW YORK, May 11.—Just how much and how many beauty aids need a lovely lady have and use to keep her loveliness.

How many she uses is far more important than how many she has! For not a one of us but can look into the medicine cabinet and there see many dollars' worth of this and that attempt to try something new—something which was only really tried once or twice, and then abandoned, as a rule.

Beauty or at least her constituents being absolutely indispensable to chic, one needs but work on certain things to have and to hold her. Any woman is considered beautiful if she has lovely hair, clear skin, and bright eyes. And any woman can have these—if not naturally, then with a little working on them can they be achieved. And held until her dying day!

Hair, for example, is sure to be beautiful if it is healthy. Well, what makes it so? Think you that the lovely tresses of the cinema stars are gifts of nature? Seldom. But regular cleaning, which is what brushing does, really; stimulation and training, and one can't have anything but beautiful hair.

About the same goes for complexions. Skin that is clean—clean really and absolutely clean—is always lovely skin. But so few women know how to cleanse the skin. Not with vigorous rubbing, but with the putting on and taking off of soap and water, lotions with cleansing propensities. Creams—that is what cleans. Not once, but several times each night and with several cleansing agents. Of course it is a bore—but isn't a clear skin worth some trouble? And cleanliness of the right kind is all that one needs.

I could go on and on, but this, after all, is a "fashun collum." But I repeat, as I have insisted so many times, that one can not be stylish, elegant or even chic unless one has beauty to clothe.

Time to renegligee! Oh, I know you haven't time to wear 'em, and you haven't the extra pennies to make use of one, and you haven't the time to make one, and can't sew, anyhow, &c., &c. But just the same, there is nothing on earth for the general morale like a new and lovely negligee! 'Tis worth its weight in gold, my deah—as you will have to admit, once you see the lovely one I have designed for you this week. So-o-o-o-o easy to make, so-o-o-o-o flattering to wear, so-o-o-o-o inexpensive! Better take my word for it just this once, and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the sketch 'n' directions for making it!

* Speaking of negligees, would you like to see the one I designed for you to look at today? No, that isn't the same one a'tall, a'tall, that this week's leaflet is about. This one you can look at today is really a tea gown, which means a negligee of the ultra type, my deahs. Choosing black velvet, cutting it in a way that swathes the figure and falls langorously and lovely around miladi's little feet, we must cut simply thousands of miles of tulle into ruffles, and laying layer upon layer, indulge in long ruffles to our heart's content, just the once. Anyway, it's fun, isn't it?

Buttons, belts and fur are really the trinity of chic trimmings. They all three play such an important part, and always a correct and subtle part, in the new mode. Remember 'em.

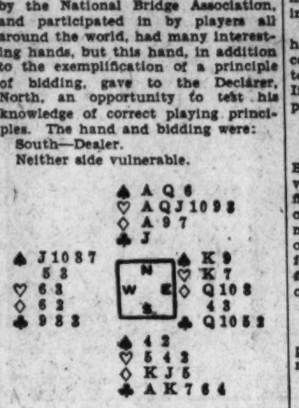
WHEN NOT TO FINESSE.

HAND No. 5 in the World Bridge Olympic is an example of the principle of the Forcing Takeout in Contract bidding. This Forcing Takeout is one of the most important bids, judged from the standpoint of games or Slams, that can be made, and sometimes it has been described as the backbone of the Approach-Forcing System. A Forcing Takeout should not be made on hands containing less than adequate strength, and the experience of years has demonstrated that, in order to justify a Forcing Takeout of an Opening bid of one, the Responding Hand should hold more than 3 honor-tricks.

The world-wide contest, conducted by the National Bridge Association, and participated in by players all around the world, had many interesting hands, but this hand, in addition to the exemplification of a principle of bidding, gave to the Declarer, North, an opportunity to test his knowledge of correct playing principles. The hand and bidding were:

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The Bidding.

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♡(1)	Pass
2NT(2)	Pass	3♡(3)	Pass
4♡(4)	Pass	6♡(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—North holds more than 4 honor-tricks. Of course, his Forcing Takeout is absolutely sound.
2—South's hand contains ½ honor-trick more than shown by his Opening bid, but he lacks adequate support for partner's Takeout, and his club suit is not rebiddable. He, therefore, has no other bid than the negative response to the Forcing Takeout.
3—North shows rebid strength in the heart suit.
4—South now has adequate support, as partner is strong enough to rebid the suit.
5—With a long and almost solid trump suit and 4 honor-tricks in the hand, North's Slam bid is fully justified.

In order that the play of the hand might be based upon sound reading of the cards, East was permitted to lead his fourth best diamond, and, with this information, North was expected to make six hearts. The play of the hand required him to win the first diamond trick with the Ace, in order to provide additional entries into Dummy, so that the fifth club might be established for a discard of his second losing spade.

The correct method of play was to lead clubs to the second trick, discarding the 6 of spades on the second round of clubs. Another round of clubs was then led from Dummy and ruffed with the heart 8 in the North hand. When East and West followed to the third round, North could see his contract as assured. To the fifth trick the Ace of hearts was led, and followed with the Queen, East winning with the King. This disposed of all the adversely held hearts. East, for lack of something better, then led another diamond, and the Knaves held the trick in Dummy. To the eighth truck Dummy's fourth club was led, trumped in the North hand, and thus the fifth club was established upon which to discard the Queen of spades.

North, by refusing to finesse the trump suit, and also by declining a doubtful finesse in spades in favor of an almost certain finesse in diamonds, was rewarded with the making of a Slam.

An alternative line of play for this hand would be the squeeze. The success of this line, however, is due only to the fact that East held four clubs. If West held four clubs, this line of play would lose.

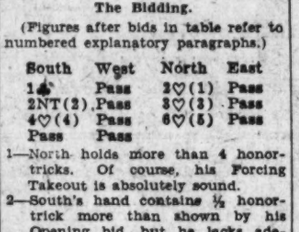
TODAY'S POINTER.

In the play of a hand at Contract Bridge, where the location of an adversely held honor is unknown, the finesse offers an exactly even chance of success. Inasmuch as a finesse may either win or lose, other methods of playing the hand would be preferred, if possible. A nearly certain finesse should always be preferred to one that is doubtful.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it and then compare the results you obtain with those shown in tomorrow's article.

Diamond Dealer Robbed Of Gems Worth $50,000

Minneapolis, May 11 (A.P.).—Five men forced W. N. Aaron, of Buffalo, N. Y., a diamond salesman, into a car today, robbed him of gems he said were worth $50,000, and threw him out at the edge of the city.

He said he was seized by two men on a street in the downtown district. A car drew up and three men joined the struggle.

The Homemaker

DEVILED SCALLOPS; GOLDEN PUFF.

STILL another letter and answer with which to start our column this afternoon, so here we are, Mrs. Hamilton.

"Dear Nancy Carey: Will you please give recipe for French fried potatoes and onions? I have a French frying basket. My potatoes seem to cook so long before browning. They shrivel and are tough when brown. I will thank you most kindly for this information. MRS. HAMILTON."

French Fried Potatoes.

Soak sliced potatoes in cold water for one hour. Drain and dry between towels. Fry a few at a time in deep fat (370 degrees F.) until lightly browned and drain on brown paper. Reheat fat, return potatoes (using frying basket) and fry until crisp and brown, keeping basket always in motion. Drain again on brown paper and sprinkle with salt.

Onion Rings.

Slice two or three onions in thin slices and separate the slices into rings. Shake these rings around in a pan in which there is sufficient seasoned flour to coat them well. Turn into a sieve and shake off any loose flour. Drop in a frying basket into deep hot fat and fry until a golden brown. When browned, lift basket, shake well, turn into a small frying pan, in which there is about a tablespoonful of hot butter. Shake around in frying pan over the hot flame until well-coated with the butter, and turn over the food with which they are to be served.

Advice on Gardening

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

I WANT to plant an ivy to ramble over an old stone wall. Shall I plant English ivy or is there a better sort? MADGE D. W.

English ivy is especially valuable for covering an old wall for the reason that it clings tightly. Pinch the plants back when young to induce them to branch.

How often, when planted in the open, must the centers be removed from coleus plants? We have a large bed in front of the office where I am employed which begins to look leggy in July and is unsightly the remainder of the summer. PEGGY D. L.

The centers of coleus plants should be removed at least once in four weeks. Careful gardeners go over these plants about once in three weeks. If they are pinched back regularly, they will be beautiful during the entire season.

I want to repot an oleander. What kind of soil shall I use?

MRS. HENRY S.

The oleander likes a sandy soil. It also likes a great deal of water when making its strongest growth, which is generally in the spring and early summer. You can hardly give it too much. It has enormous quantities of fine roots and these enable it to drink up water from the soil with great rapidity.

Is it hard to grow fuchsias from cuttings? MATTIE B.

Few plants propagate more easily than the fuchsias. Cuttings inserted in sand and kept moist are almost sure to grow.

I have a large palm which needs transplanting. When can I do this?

HANNAH D. E.

You may repot a palm at any time.

Please tell me if heather is likely to do well in this country.

MRS. PETER N.

No. Heather likes plenty of moisture in summer, but the soil must be well drained. Our weather conditions are not ideal, due to our hot, dry summers. Sometimes they do well when they are planted where they are protected from the sweeping winds of February and March.

When should I divide some coral bells? HENRY A. L.

Plants of heuchera (coral bells) are best divided in October. They should be transplanted every other year.

Please tell me the name of the lily from which I am inclosing a leaf. This plant has beautiful foliage, but never blooms. I take the best of care of it, feeding it every month. Why does it not bloom for me?

MRS. F. G. C.

It is impossible to identify a lily from a leaf. Your plant is developing foliage and no flowers due to the fact that you are overfeeding it.

What Today Means

"TAURUS."

IF MAY 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 11:35 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:20 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., and from 6 p. m. to 7:35 p. m.

The world will be in a somewhat cantankerous mood during the a. m. hours of May 12. Work will seem irksome, handicaps huge and the human element annoying. As planetary conditions change, so will the general atmosphere, and by evening it will be easy to give yourself up to gayety.

The child born on this May 12 will have a logical mind and a natural sense of justice and fitness. Do not try to coerce it. If you can convince its reason, you can do what you like with it, but it can not be driven an inch. It will have a lively sense of humor, and will be ever ready with a smile.

The woman born on May 12 will have a rather forbidding nature, with plenty of Martha and little of Mary in her make-up. Because you are dependable, you are given things to do, and because you are sincere, you are sought for solid advice. No one, however, would go to you for coddling on a soft shoulder on which to weep. You create more of an atmosphere of efficiency than comfort. You are more at home making tea than serving it. You know all about work, but very little about play. Your children would be well cared for, but it is doubtful if you would ever possess their confidence, and their love for you would be more respectful than spontaneous.

The May 12 man is a typical boss, and has yet to learn that an ounce of love is worth a ton of tyranny. You have great moral and physical courage, and are never a slacker. You rather overemphasize the common belief that you must do a thing yourself if you want it done right. You have rather a heavy sense of humor and jollity, and your gambols are not graceful. Time and experience will humanize, soften and mellow your personality for the better. Children soon learn that your bark is worse than your bite, and that you have a bit of Santa Claus about you after all. There is decidedly the right and the wrong way of handling you.

Successful people born on May 12: Joseph K. Toole, twice governor of Montana.

Frank Crane, journalist.

Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator.

Madam Nordica, singer.

Sir Arthur Sullivan, music composer.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

SOME STAND-BYS IN ORGANS.

WHEN an engineer makes plans for a structure he calculates the maximum expected load, then the strength of the structure required to carry the expected load, and next adds more than 100 per cent as a margin of safety. An insurance company, laying its plans, calculates its risks from standard actuarial tables and then adds a large factor of safety before adopting its insurance rates.

In 1876 visitors to the centennial were amazed at the great Corliss engines working so well within their capacities because they were so much overbuilt. The wisdom of always having something in reserve is not questioned. Few of us know that the architecture of the human body provides for an excess capacity that makes the above cited illustrations appear unimportant.

In his "Wisdom of the Human Body," Dr. W. B. Cannon gives the following proof on that point:

Most organs of the body are built in pairs. Any one of the pair is more than equal to all the need. Any one of any pair can be removed without interfering particularly with the supply of product. If two-thirds of each kidney is removed and only one-third of each is left, the body seems never to know the loss. If one-tenth of the adrenal glands are left sound, the body gets all the adrenal secretion it needs. One-fifth of the thyroid appears to be ample. There are four parathyroid glands. We get along comfortably enough after two have been removed. One-fifth of the pancreas is about all we need. We get along very well with one-fourth of the liver, provided what is left is sound.

Surgeons remove much more than one-half of the stomach without interfering greatly with digestion. We can lose 10 feet of the small intestine, and nearly all of the large, and still keep in a pretty good state of nutrition. The lungs can be well-nigh solidified with pneumonia or compressed by pleural fluid, or riddled by consumption, and yet we manage to breathe pretty well with what is left in condition to work.

We think of the brain as being semisacred—an area that must not be invaded—noli me tangere. All of the right half of the brain can be removed without seriously interfering with a person's well being. We think of that part of the brain that lies just back of the brows—the frontal lobes—as being necessary for thinking. Both frontal lobes have been removed without seriously affecting the individual's ability to think, to converse, to remember, or to take part in the affairs of life.

In every part of his makeup man is fabricated along very generous, if not wastefully extravagant lines. His blueprint specifications call for a margin of safety far greater than any mechanical engineer ever allows.

PLUCKING THE EYEBROWS.

N. W. F. writes: I pluck my eyebrows in moderation, but sometimes roughly. Lately I have felt pain in that region. Is the irritation paving the way for cancer? I am 25 years of age.

REPLY.

You will not cause cancer by plucking your eyebrows.

NOT SERIOUS SYMPTOM.

C. S. writes: Can you tell me what ridging of the nails comes from? The condition appeared within the last year and it is very noticeable. Is it an indication of some organic trouble?

REPLY.

As a rule, ridges in the nails mean that the skin near the root is not in first-class condition. Maybe the fingers are exposed to chemicals, to soap, to water, or to some other irritant, or to air that is too dry.

A transverse ridge may be caused by a severe illness or a shock.

CYSTS ON EYELIDS.

K. S. S. writes: Can you tell me what causes cysts to grow on the eyelids? The first one started at the time I had the grippe, and every few months since a new one will appear, always on the inside of the lids. They seem to close in and press on the eyes. Is this harmful?

REPLY.

There are glands in that area and they occasionally become stopped, causing cysts. If they form repeatedly your oculist will probably find that you are suffering from eyestrain and need glasses. The cysts are annoying, but they do no great harm.

College President Lost in Big City

Lucien Koch Turns Up After He Is Driven to Wrong Address.

Chicago, May 11 (A.P.).—Lucien Koch, youthful president of the Commonwealth College, at Mena, Ark., appeared at the home of friends at the University of Chicago today after search had been made for him last night and today.

He said he had got lost on his way to address a student group meeting in Evanston and had spent the night with friends.

He entered a taxicab last night, he said, giving the address of the Evanston meeting, 1409 Chicago avenue. There is a similar address in Chicago and the taxicab took the college president to the metropolitan place. By then, he said, it was too late for the meeting in Evanston, 10 miles away, so he went to see some friends. Only this morning, when he returned to the University of Chicago, did he learn of the search for him.

Economy Program Rings Wild Dollar's Death Knell

By JOHN J. DALY

UNDER the terms of a new economy program, presented by the President's bipartisan committee, $250,000,000 must be slashed from the cost of government. Otherwise, dat ole debil, Budget, can not be balanced.

If $250,000,000 can not be cut from the expenditures of the Federal Government, 110,000,000 people will be called upon to dig down deep in their jeans and put up the money—to keep the ship of state on an even keel.

Now $250,000,000 in any man's money, is a neat little sum—anywhere, any time, and for any government. In fact, there are governments on this globe whose officials would like to have that amount of money in the exchequer—to pay the national debt. The same sum, in the eyes of Uncle Sam, a free and easy spender, is just so much chicken feed.

ALL the economists, getting their heavy heads together, have figured out that the old gentleman has run just a little bit too wild; that his Government costs too much money to run; that a dollar here, a million there, saved, will bring about a state of normalcy. It must either be that or bankruptcy. So the senators, sitting down at the Round Table, with great big butcher knives in their hands, are prepared to slash salaries, and shopping lists, and the various extravagances that creep into an unruly budget.

As most of the senators are family men, they should know where to begin. There are, first of all, the necessaries of life which can not be eliminated though they can be, and should be, brought down to a comfortable level. Caviar for the general, but sardines for the particular.

Food, shelter and clothing—and that does not mean, always, "putting on the dog," or the ritz.

So, when these items have been brought into hand, the extravagances, the luxuries of government, can be toiled off, one by one, with funereal paeons, as riotous, reckless living goes by the board. It means sack cloth and ashes for some of the sacrosanct, in government, but bread and butter for the boys and girls out in the country.

• • • •

GOVERNMENTAL junkets, joy rides, on steamships to the South Seas, with Uncle Sam paying the bills for the Congress members, their wives, their sisters, their cousins and their aunts—this is where a mighty leak shows itself in a government by the people, by the people's representatives.

Hard times make hard men. All any good, hard-boiled senator has to do in order to start balancing the budget, is to stop budgeting the ballot—cutting pie at the political pie counter, handing out patronage and pork at the public crib to every Tom, Dick and Harry who wants to go joy-riding on Uncle Sam's money. It is, after all, money the old man hasn't got, or cannot get until he soaks his nieces and nephews to make up a deficit.

The time has come—to think of many things; of ships and shoes and sealing wax and bums who live like kings.

FRANCE MAY GIVE UP ALLIANCE TO POLAND

Government Situation Also Disturbed by Socialists' Demands on Herriot.

Paris, May 11 (U.P.).—Two unexpected developments today threatened to change the entire governmental situation resulting from the victory of Edouard Herriot's Radical Socialist party in the legislative elections.

1. The Socialist party, which with the Herriot faction controls the now powerful "Left Wing" of the Chamber of Deputies, announced a political program which may make it impossible for Herriot to accept their aid in forming a new government.

2. It was learned that France is soon expected to denounce her military alliance with Poland, marking the first break with French military satellites in eastern Europe.

The proposal to end the alliance with Poland may have far-reaching repercussions. The agreement has been a constant source of apprehension to Germany and was a part of the so-called encircling of Germany by France and her central European allies.

The French general staff was understood to disapprove of the agreement with Poland on strategic grounds. France has not been able to persuade Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, the Polish dictator, that the bulk of Polish troops and war supplies should be concentrated on the German frontier in event of trouble.

U. S. Job Director Menaced by Brick

"Give-Us-Bread" Missile Is Hurled Into Home as Relief End Nears.

Wilmington, Del., May 11 (A.P.).—Police were guarding the home of Francis E. B. McCann, Federal director of employment, today after learning that a brick bearing the words, "Give us bread," had been thrown through a window of the director's residence.

The occurrence was yesterday after chairman Frank A. McHugh, of the municipal employment and relief committee, had announced the exhaustion of funds would compel cessation of relief work at the end of this month. The committee, McHugh said, had spent $650,067 in the past six months, of which $276,000 was for family relief.

"Under the circumstances," he said, "the one thing we must do is to bring our program to an abrupt stop because we can not expend funds which we do not have."

League Investigators In Manchuria Balked

Harbin, Manchuria, May 11 (A.P.). So many guards have been placed over the members of the League of Nations Manchurian Investigating Commission that they have had considerable trouble getting any evidence.

The situation got so bad today the commissioners and their assistants held their meeting away from the hotel in which they are staying. They took this action after hearing reports that witnesses had been intimidated and had not been allowed free access to the hearing room.

RED CURB ON FOOD BUYING SLACKENED

Milk, Eggs, Cheese, Tea, Soap and Candies Removed From Ration Restrictions.

Moscow, May 11 (A.P.).—Government restrictions on the purchase of certain articles of food were lifted today in line with the recent promise that every effort would be exerted to make living conditions somewhat more comfortable for the people.

Milk, eggs, cheese and tea were taken off the ration list, thus removing the limitations on the amount any purchaser might buy.

Other important foodstuffs remain on the list. These include flour, bread, meat, herring, butter, oil and sugar.

Purchase restrictions were taken off all kinds of candies, tinned foods (except meat), soap, cigarettes and knitted goods. Regulations covering the sale of men's clothing were made less severe.

Although the government decree permits unrestricted purchase of numerous articles, prices are very high and stocks are small.

The decree followed upon lightening of the restrictions on farmers with cattle to sell. Under a new regulation the farmers may dispose of their cattle in retail markets for the rest of this year, instead of selling to the government. Last Saturday a decree was promulgated permitting collective and individual farmers to dispose of surplus grain stocks in the open market.

DO YOU INHALE?

Here goes the last "sacred cow" in cigarette advertising!

INHALING has long been an "untouchable"... a subject taboo in the tobacco trade... a "sacred cow"! Why?... Because in every tobacco leaf—even the finest, the mildest—nature hides certain impurities which, when not removed, are unkind to delicate membranes!

And since, knowingly or unknowingly, we all inhale some part of the smoke from our cigarette—Lucky Strike developed that great scientific process which removes certain impurities. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Remember—more than 20,000 physicians, after Luckies had been furnished them for tests, basing their opinions on their smoking experience, stated that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.

BABY SEARCH SHIFTS NORTH ALONG COAST

Curtis Said to Be Centering Air-Contact Efforts Off Rhode Island.

Norfolk, Va., May 11 (A.P.).—Suddenly veering to a new phase of work, John Hughes Curtis, chief of Norfolk intermediaries in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, was reported tonight to be centering his efforts to renew contact with the kidnapers in the vicinity of Block Island, off the Rhode Island Coast.

Curtis has not returned to Norfolk since Friday, when he suddenly shifted his activities from the sea to the air and departed from the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station in an airplane. It could not be learned here whether the Block Island area is the same place to which he made numerous and mysterious flights earlier in the negotiations, now more than two months in progress.

While the presence of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh at the naval station here has not been confirmed by any of the three Norfolk intermediaries, apparently well-founded reports are that he was a member of the party on the excursions to sea as well as the flight to the New England coast.

The Consolvo yacht Marcon, used by the negotiators on the sea trips, and docked at the naval base, was brought back to the Curtis shipbuilding plant this afternoon, indicating it has been abandoned as a means of making contact with the kidnapers. Capt. F. H. Lackman said it was brought in for minor repairs and would be held in readiness if needed.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage and the Very Rev. Dean H. Dobson-Peacock, associates of Curtis in the negotiations, today maintained the tight-lipped silence they have kept during the latter phase of the negotiations to recover the kidnaped baby. Neither would comment on reports that Curtis hoped to renew contact with the kidnapers off New England.

Walter S. Klee, Banker, Is Suicide by Poisoning

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—The death of Walter S. Klee, banker and retired vice president of S. W. Straus & Co., who died yesterday, was officially attributed today to poison suicidally administered. Klee, who was 47 years old, died in a sanitarium.

The finding was made by Assistant Medical Examiner Henry Weinberg in his official report. It was learned that Wednesday morning Klee telephoned a physician, who called at his apartment and was told by Klee that he had taken three poison tablets. Monday night the banker was removed to the sanitarium, where he underwent an operation for decapsulization of both kidneys.

Democrats to Push District Home Rule

Faction Is to Urge Party Pledge; Split in Ranks Also Averted.

A threatened split in the ranks of the local Democratic party has been averted as the result of a conference yesterday participated in by John Costello, national committeeman, and John P. Colpoys, chairman of the Democratic central committee, and George Garrett, George Marshall, and Arthur O'Brien.

Garrett, Marshall, and O'Brien represented a group of local Democrats who are interested in having the Democratic party pledge itself to adopt legislation in Congress giving the citizens of the District home rule, representation in Congress, and a primary law modeled after such laws in the States.

A set of rules patterned after the most satisfactory primary law were drawn up and approved by the central committee and the group headed by Garrett. The primary, to be held May 18, from 4 to 7 o'clock p. m., will be conducted accordingly.

All expense of the primary must be borne by the candidates, since there is no law providing for the holding of elections in the District. Candidates filing for delegate to the Chicago convention must put up a fee of $200 and candidates for the central committee a fee of $25.

The group backing home rule for the District has selected the three men who represented them at the conference as their candidates. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will run to succeed herself as national committeewoman.

Motorist Helps Police Find Woman She Hit

Miss Eleanor Nourse Darby, 2716 Wisconsin avenue, reported to the Bethesda substation, Montgomery County police, yesterday that her automobile had struck a colored woman at Connecticut avenue and Oxford street, Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday. The woman who was hit refused to give her name and said she was not hurt, Miss Darby, who is a teacher at the Kensington School, reported.

Police later learned the victim is Laura Frasier, colored, of 3810 Davenport street northwest, and that she suffered body bruises.

Parkview Citizens Give Bicentennial Program

A Bicentennial program was presented last night at the Park View School under the auspices of the Park View Citizens Association, the Woman's Club, the Community Center and the Parent-Teachers Association.

"Washington—the Man," was the subject of an address by Col. Charles I. Stengle, of the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission. A short play entitled "Martha's Letters" was presented as were musical selections and recitations. Dancing and refreshments followed the program.

Bad-Check Artist Works On 3 Hardware Stores

Proprietors of three hardware stores told police last night that they had been fleeced in the last week by a writer of bad checks.

According to the storekeepers, the man ordered goods, gave a fictitious address, wrote a check for a larger sum than required and received change. The three victimized are: Thomas J. Malloy, of 3241 Forty-third street northwest; Charles R. Schutt, of 3120 M street northwest, and the Shapiro Sporting Goods Store, 3068 M street northwest.

REDUCED BAIL IS ALLOWED MEANS AND HE IS RELEASED

duced by Means, that led Fish, two years ago, on a wild goose chase to Baltimore in quest of material for the famous House investigation of Communist activities.

Communist activities figured in the other spectacular disclosure while Means was in jail. It was said here by individuals close to the case that Means is alleged to have received at least $100,000 from Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, the former Helen Gould, of New York, on promises to protect her fortune and daughter from purported red threats.

On all these subjects the man who was once a Government investigator and later a Federal prisoner under conviction for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and to bribe a Federal officer had nothing to say today. He merely announced:

"Any statement I make I'll make in writing, so that there will be no doubt about what I say. Any denial I make I'll make in writing."

Peake Thanked by Means.

The spectacular Means was wreathed in smiles as he bade good-by to his jail associates. He turned to William L. Peake, the mild-mannered superintendent, and gave profuse thanks for "wonderful treatment" in jail. He greeted his wife, who has come to take him home, and walked out to face a row of news cameras. Once more he thanked the officials, including Assistant Chief Marshal John Clarkson, who arrested him last Thursday.

Clarkson escorted Means to the courthouse. They were followed closely by Mrs. Means, who waited in the car while Means executed the final steps to temporary liberty.

Wearing a heavy blue suit and picturesque black felt hat, Means stepped up to Samuel Silverman, assistant criminal clerk. Tall as well as portly, Means towered over spectators. He carefully scrutinized the papers—separate bonds of $25,000 each—before signing. He handed each over with a "thank you," then took off his hat and swore to be on hand when he is wanted.

Bonding Company Rejected.

With one more "thank you" to Clarkson, he moved out to rejoin his wife. With his lawyer, J. William Tomlinson, they drove to the office of one of two bondsmen required to secure the bail. Means, the lawyer and the bondsmen held a brief secret parley, then Means rejoined his wife and drove away.

How much cash he had to put up remained untold.

The bondsmen were Milton S. Kronheim and Isaac B. Jones. They were accepted after other proffered security was rejected. Kronheim and Jones signed the bonds, holding them individually and jointly responsible, before Means left jail.

The rejected security was the Public Indemnity Co., of Newark, N. J. Means' lawyer offered it after Justice Proctor reduced the amount of bond from $100,000 set last week. Immediately United States Attorney Leo A. Rover objected. The judge allowed time for investigation—and in a few hours the case was resumed and Rover announced that the bonding company is one whose bonding license the Justice Department is now seeking to have revoked.

Mr. Rover told the court that the company was responsible for nine men on $47,000 bail—nine men who skipped before their trial in the Brooklyn district. The Justice Department has asked the Treasury to cancel the license because the $47,000 remains uncollected.

Denies Shepard Employment.

Means maintained he never was employed by Mrs. Shepard. Though he declined to answer whether he talked with her about Communist activities, or whether he was employed in anti-Communist drives in which she might have been interested, he emphasized he "never took a dollar from her."

Means received the reporter in his home amid the habitations of the Capital's fashionable. He was furious because Justice Department agents, he said, had torn up his safe during their search of his house without asking him for the combination—and he turned his wrath on those in his story.

"This is a travesty," he shouted. "You think I'm afraid of Mrs. McLean? Listen, my heart goes out to the bunk of life. Why should I pay any attention to the bunk of life, the veneer of civilization? My object in life is to snatch the veneer off civilization—God, how I would like somebody to know I'm honest, that fundamentally I'm honest!"

Asserts He Was Sought.

Reiterating that Mrs. McLean sought him and hired him to "see whether I could recover Charles Lindbergh, jr.," Means said he agreed to this employment last March 4.

"I believed if any man could, I could get the baby," he continued. "I'd been to the pen, I knew the underworld and the underworld knew me and the underworld knew I shoot straight, and the underworld shoots straight with me."

Means said thenceforth he carried out Mrs. McLean's directions "to the letter." He exhibited his shattered safe in his cellar and led the way to his "office," where he showed articles he said he would produce later for evidence.

"Look at me," he commanded, "and say whether I've got courage."

Means' wife and a sister welcomed him home. His young son was there also. He emphasized that they "know nothing—I play a lone hand." His parting comment was, "I haven't told all yet."

Easley Defends Means.

Later Ralph M. Easley, head of the National Civic Federation, who said he had employed Means as an investigator of Soviet Russian activities in this country, said there was "not a word of truth in the story" that Means obtained money from Mrs. Shepard for protection.

"Being familiar with the matter in which Gaston B. Means is charged with obtaining money from Mrs. Finley Shepard for protecting her adopted daughter, the sum being reported to have been $100,000, I want to say there is not a word of truth in the story," said Easley. "Further, I am quite sure that Mrs. Shepard never paid Means a dollar for such purpose or any other, nor was any suggestion ever made to her that she should employ him for such work."

Mrs. Shepard Still Silent.

Tarrytown, N. Y., May 11 (A.P.).—Mrs. Finley J. Shepard at her home here this afternoon declined to make any statement on Washington dispatches linking her name with the Gaston B. Means investigation.

"We have no statement to make whatsoever," were her words through her secretary, who quickly hung up after delivering the message over the telephone.

Mrs. Shepard returned today from her summer home in the Catskills, where she had gone last week-end with her daughter.

Aiken, S. C., May 11 (A.P.).—A Department of Justice investigator has been here atempting to trace the $104,000 Gaston B. Means received from Mrs. Edward B. McLean, of Washington. Whether he had made any progress in the search for the funds could not be learned.

Means Worked on Probe Of Red Activities in U. S.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Ralph M. Easley, head of the National Civic Federation, issued a statement today saying he had employed Gaston B. Means as an investigator of Soviet Russian activities in the United States.

"For more than three years," he said, "I have been making an intensive study of the activities in this country of the O. G. P. U., formerly the Cheka, the criminal secret service section of the Soviet government. In this work I have employed sixteen agents at various times, Gaston B. Means having been one of them, principally in 1929-30. He has not been on my pay roll for eight months.

"A partial report of this work, now in preparation and to be issued within a few days, will answer all questions which may arise regarding my investigation, including 'How and by Whom Was It Financed?'"

Easley said the report would be accompanied by a translation of instructions from the chief of the O. G. P. U. which, he said, "have to do with bombing, burning, bank looting, &c., in the United States."

The purpose of his investigation, Easley said, was to promote legislation empowering the Federal Government to "deal with those forces that would destroy our institutions and, indeed, the Government itself."

TAX BILL SUBMITTED TO SEETHING SENATE

Debate Over Hotly Disputed Measure Will Start in Chamber Today.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

The finance committee yesterday laid formally before a seething Senate its much-changed and much-disputed tax bill, designed to change recent bookkeeping history of the United States Treasury and approximately balance the Federal budget by the end of next fiscal year.

Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, submitted the report saying the committee was unanimous in support of the budget-balancing principle, despite the wide and varied disagreement expressed by committee members over particular provisions in the course of preparation of the bill.

The bill is estimated to increase taxes by $1,010,000,000 in the next fiscal year. The budget-balancing program contemplates a saving of $230,000,000 in Government expenditures. The special Senate economy committee has set itself a $300,000,000 goal.

Debate on the bill probably will be launched by Senator Smoot today with an exposition of the various provisions of the measure. The course of subsequent discussion will make amply clear the divergence of views on the various provisions. Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, asked permission yesterday to file a minority report. The Bay Stater is expected to urge approval of a general manufacturers' sales tax in preference to various excise taxes on selected industries provided in the bill.

Battle Over Sales Tax.

Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania; Senator Samuel Shortridge (Republican), of California, and Senator Smoot, as well as others favor the general sales tax rather than the special and higher sales taxes proposed for special businesses. There has been a growing belief that the general sales tax would be substituted for the committee program. Perhaps it will be, but it is significant that such tried and experienced war horses of Senate battles as Senator Smoot and Senator James E. Watson (Republican), of Indiana, majority leader, regard the general sales tax as impossible of achievement. Senator Smoot, incidentally, is one of the original sales-taxers, having advocated it back in the war days.

A battle over the tariffs included in the bill offers the most serious threat against its enactment before Congress has to quit to attend to the serious political business incident to the national party conventions. Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, ranking member of his party on the finance committee, has declared his opposition to the tariffs and said he would be constrained to take his fight to the Senate floor. Senator Cordell Hull (Democrat), of Tennessee, one of the few remaining Simon-pure Democrats on the question of protective tariffs, is also going to join the battle. Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, who is not so Simon-pure on the tariff question, but who believes the tariffs have no place in a tax bill, is another who will jump on those provisions.

Thomas Would Filibuster.

The Democrats, however, are far from united on the question. Senator Tom Connally, of Texas; Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, and Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, all good Democrats, have voted for the tariffs and will fight to keep them in. Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, another Democrat, has threatened to filibuster all summer long if the Senate doesn't agree to include a tariff on oil in the bill. Senators Connally and Gore and others from the oil producing regions feel right deeply about the oil tariff, too, and, of course, in order to get their oil tariff they have got to accept others.

Senators from the cow-raising and butter-making sections desire a tariff of 22 cents a pound on imported butter. Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Laborite), of Minnesota, jumped into that fight yesterday with an announcement that he would offer an amendment imposing a tax of 1 cent a pound on imports of a selected list of oil-bearing materials and of 2 cents a pound on vegetable, animal and fish oils. He would include oils from the Philippines. His contemplated amendment would produce $24,630,000 in revenue if approved, he estimated.

Predictions are being made, however, that the tariffs would be knocked out of the bill, not because they do not belong, but because all of the tariff advocates can not get on board the gravy wagon with a big enough ladle. Those senators who come from States where the business leaders want special tariff protection are going to have a hard time explaining to these supporting business leaders how it was that all save their tariffs were put in the bill. The Democrats are counting on the law of self-preservation to bring these senators into the antitariff fold. They are counting on them to figure that their political safety lies in an explanation that no tariffs could be put in the tax bill.

Smoot Explains Necessity.

There is, of course, another economic school of thought which is opposed to the imposition of extraordinary taxes in a period of business depression to balance the budget immediately. The voices of these have been very weak in the welling chorus to "balance the budget." Senator Smoot paid them recognition and sought to answer their arguments in the report on the committee bill.

"Although occasional moderate deficits in the operation of a government are to be expected, recurring large deficits must be avoided," the report said. "Continued reliance upon borrowing, and failure to provide for a balance as between income and expenditures, and eventually for systematic debt reduction, would inevitably undermine the credit of governments as well as individuals. The maintenance of unimpaired credit is essential. * * *

Corporate Tax Increase.

"The more important features of the bill, as reported by your committee, may be summarized as follows:

"(1) The bill will raise additional revenue, through changes in the income tax rates and administrative provisions, in the amount of $287,000,000 for the fiscal year 1933.

"(2) The normal tax rates, applicable to individuals, are increased to 3 per cent on the first $4,000, 6 per cent on the second $4,000, and 9 per cent on the balance of net income in excess of the exemptions. The exemptions have been reduced to $1,000 in the case of a single person and $2,500 in the case of a married person.

"(3) Surtax rates begin at 1 per cent on net income in excess of $6,000 and increase to 45 per cent on net income in excess of $1,000,000.

"(4) The corporate rate is increased from 12 to 14 per cent, and the existing exemption for small corporations is eliminated.

"(5) The imposition of the normal tax upon corporate dividends, contained in the House bill, is eliminated.

"(6) Adequate protection to the revenues against security losses is afforded, and the severity of the provisions of the House bill is mitigated.

"(7) The increased estate taxes and the gift tax proposed by the House bill are retained.

"(8) Duties are imposed upon the importation of oil, coal, lumber, copper and rubber.

"(9) The bill proposes to impose selective manufacturers' excise taxes which will raise during the fiscal year (inclusive of the above duties), $277,500,000.

"(10) Many of the excise taxes contained in the House bill have been eliminated, such as the proposed tax on toilet preparations, furs, jewelry, yachts and motor boats, mechanical refrigerators, sporting goods and cameras, firearms and shells, matches, candy and soft drinks.

"(11) The bill will raise $280,000,000 through miscellaneous taxes upon telephone and telegraph messages, admissions, the issue or transfer of bonds or capital stock, conveyances, oil transported by pipe lines, and checks.

"(12) Increases in first and second class postal rates and other pending postal legislation will raise $160,000,000, which should be sufficient to make the postal service self-supporting."

M'KELLAR TO OFFER PLAN FOR BILLION IN U. S. SAVING

sults aimed at in the revenue bill. Senator McKellar framed a plan he claims will effect all economies sought, while retaining only income tax features of the revenue measure.

"I am much more interested in cutting down expenditures than I am in putting additional taxes on the American people," he said. "I believe the very best way of handling the present situation and balancing the budget is:

"1. Cut down expenditures at least $400,000,000 and preferably $500,000,000.

"2. Suspend all tax refunds or tax credits or actual war taxes, and this ought to save $200,000,000 more.

"3. Cut off subsidies, shipping, aircraft, magazine, in all, about $70,000,000 more.

"4. Readjust the income tax rates, the gift taxes and the estate taxes, say in all, $200,000,000 more.

"In addition I want to add that in my judgment the Congress will not authorize another moratorium, and that will make $265,000,000 more.

"This would be a total of not less than $1,135,000,000."

The Tennessee senator said savings under "item 1" of his plan could be reached principally through application of the 10 per cent slashes to all of the appropriations bills. In some instances, he declared, it would be necessary to cut deeper than that.

He said the Government already has paid out more than $3,000,000,000 in tax refunds, and should immediately call a halt.

"Subsidies" referred to include ocean and air mail contracts, as well as reduced rates on second class mail matter, Senator McKellar added. He estimated that "something like $27,000,000" is lost by the Government every year in carrying magazines of general circulation.

The proposed income taxes "would have to be worked out," but preferably would hit the largest incomes hardest, according to his statement.

Urges Long Term Bonds.

"In addition to all this, the $500,000,000 voted some time ago out of the Treasury to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should be replaced by the sale of long term bonds in the sum of $500,000,000, and that sum put back into the Treasury," Senator McKellar said.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan constituted an investment for which long-time bonds might well be given. This money ought not to be charged up to the running expenses of the Government.

"If after doing these things additional money is necessary to balance the budget, it should be obtained by further reduction of expenditures instead of putting nuisance taxes on the American people."

Following yesterday's Senate economy meeting, Chairman Wesley L. Jones announced "progress," but declined to disclose details of the session. Some provisions of the House economy bill were tentatively accepted and others rejected, he said.

Act to Forestall Lobbies.

A close lipped policy was determined on by subcommittee members as protection against lobby activities, Senator Jones explained.

Sitting with the committee at the morning session were Budget Director J. Clawson Roop, who aided the President in framing his original omnibus program, and Representatives John McDuffie and C. William Ramseyer, House economy committee members, who explained provisions of the House bill. Herbert D. Brown, director of the Bureau of Efficiency, also was called into conference.

While the senators conferred, considering the merits of the President's enforced furlough plan as against a Government pay cut, and weighing advantages of the George reorganization bill over limited reorganization power allowed the President by the House, the Federal deficit climbed to $2,497,262,985.

Again Asks Furloughs.

At yesterday's White House breakfast, President Hoover reiterated faith in his plan of staggering Federal employment through a system of furloughs. Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Budget Director Roop also sat round the President's table.

Again designated spokesman, Secretary Mills told newspapermen:

"We discussed economy along the lines of seeing how, through an economy omnibus bill, reductions in appropriations and authority for governmental consolidations, savings of $300,000,000 or more can be effected for the fiscal year 1933."

Mr. Mills said the conference had time to outline only "a general plan," adding: "It was a very harmonious meeting."

All six economy committee members were present—Senators Jones, Bingham and Dickinson (Republicans), and McKellar, Bratton and Byrns (Democrats).

Opposing Views on Plan.

The Federal retrenchment program was attacked and defended by members of Congress speaking last night over WJSV.

Representative C. William Ramseyer (Republican), Iowa, House proponent of the enforced Federal furlough plan, expressed confidence "the Senate subcommittee and the House economy committee can work out an economy program by restoring most of the items stricken out in the House, that will reduce expenditures between $225,000,000 and $250,000,000."

Representative Francis B. Condon (Democrat), Rhode Island, declared the program unwise and untimely because it means "throwing out of employment thousands of Government employes and the drastic reduction in salaries of thousands of others."

PROTOCOL ON WORLD COURT MAY REACH VOTE TODAY

ence of opinion, the members of the committee requested Chairman William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, to poll the absent members of the committee. A more definite vote may be possible today.

Even if the committee goes on record to vote the World Court resolution out, there is held to be slight possibility of a vote on the floor of the upper house before the next session.

The Moses resolution, if adopted by the committee, virtually will bring the entire subject back to where it originally started when the Senate first proposed its five reservations to safeguard the conditions of American entry into the court. The time consumed in formally drafting and despatching the document, which will announce the decision of the Senate to other foreign signatories of the World Court protocol, is expected to consume at least one year, if not longer.

State Department Silent.

The State Department declined to make any formal statement on the committee's action beyond pointing out that the opinions of Elihu Root and Secretary Stimson exactly coincide with regard to the adequacy of the Senate's fifth reservation in safeguarding American interests in all cases where the United States has an interest or claims an interest.

The World Court already has accepted the compromise proposition worked out by Sir Hurst and Elihu Root with regard to the questions before the court in which this country might have an interest or might claim an interest. The first category of questions, wherein American interests might be directly involved, has been accepted definitely by the World Court authorities, it was claimed. With regard to questions wherein the United States might have an interest, the two eminent jurisconsultants worked out a plan which provided for settlement of this problem even before it was brought to the court.

The steamship case of the Eastern Carolia, to which the Soviet government objected, is advanced as an indication of the action the World Court would take in questions where the United States might claim an interest. The Soviet authorities claimed an interest in the case, and the court declined to render an opinion for this reason.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, offered two reservations which had been somewhat similarly phrased in the Senate reservations of 1926. These were accepted by the committee.

The proposal from a group of women that American adherence to the court be conditioned on a change that all inequalities based on sex be removed from the code was overwhelmingly defeated.

The World Court has still another chance of adoption if the committee today decides to vote it down. This is in the shape of the resolution of Representative Linthicum (Democrat), chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the House. This would appropriate the moneys necessary for the expenses of the United States in its role as member of the Court.

Prof. Garner's Idea Advanced.

The idea behind the Linthicum resolution was first advanced by Prof. James W. Garner, head of the department of political science of the University of Illinois and one of the outstanding international lawyers of the country.

Prof. Garner put forward his plan two years ago. He has advocated the plan as a last resort if Senate ratification proved impossible.

The United States annexed both Hawaii and Texas by means of joint resolutions after two-thirds majorities in the Senate proved impossible to secure, Prof. Garner argues. Also, Congress by majority votes has appropriated funds for the American share in international enterprises under the auspices of the League of Nations.

Therefore, he argues, an appropriation for the World Court would be perfectly constitutional. The State Department's certificate would eliminate any doubt among foreign nations on this point, Prof. Garner believes.

Two-Foot Fall Causes Aged Man to Succumb

Injuries received in a fall May 5 yesterday caused the death of John H. Harris, 82 years old, of 346 Cedar street northwest, in Gallinger Hospital last night.

According to police, who investigated, Mr. Harris fell from a retaining wall about 2 feet high at Cedar street and Blair road. He received a fractured hip and other injuries.

LEWIS TELLS PERIL OF FOREIGN LOANS

Senator Describes to Foxhall Association Complications That Result.

The theory that the United States should cease making loans to foreign countries as a permanent step toward peace was advanced last night by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, in a speech before the Foxhall Citizens Association at Foxhall Village.

Senator Lewis declared that America's inability to enforce the Kellogg peace pact was due to the fact that her citizens have loaned approximately twelve billion dollars in Europe and about eight billion in South and Central America. Having these securities in the hands of American citizens, the senator said, places the statesmen of the United States under a serious handicap when a question arises between their governments and the government of any foreign power. Senator Lewis told the association that under the Kellogg treaty, no statesman dare to brave the storm of political strife by invoking the provisions of the Kellogg treaty.

Senator Lewis pointed out that under the Kellogg treaty the nation that was the aggressor in hostilities between two powers could be held accountable as an offender. The difficulty, however, as described by the Illinois senator, is that if the United States should cite any nation as an offender under the Kellogg pact, that nation immediately would turn to the United States and would say, in effect, that the United States had ruined the financial standing of the alleged offending power, hence it could not pay its obligations to the holders of its securities in the United States.

It was advocated by Senator Lewis that these difficulties should be removed if loans were not made by Americans outside the confines of their own country. He related for the association the history of the several peace treaties or treaties to outlaw war, but he suggested that all of them were subject to the same criticism, namely their susceptibilities to outside influence resulting from international trade. In each instance, the senator said, these influences were so great that they predomiated over the ordinary procedure followed by statescraft.

Senator Lewis spoke at the first meeting of an association which resulted from a merger of the Foxhall Village Citizens Association with the Foxall Club. The combined group numbers the citizens of entire community of Foxhall Village, Foxall and Colony Hill and its membership is approximately 150 families.

Hackworth Addresses Georgetown Students

The baffling legal problems of the State Department were reviewed by its legal adviser, Green Haywood Hackworth, in an address last night at a special assembly of the student body of the Georgetown Law School.

Mr. Hackworth traced the history of the legal activities from the beginning when the first Secretary of State, Thomas Jefferson, and a mere handful of assistants, attended to all the affairs of the department. There is scarcely a branch of the law, he said, that is not now involved in the international scope of the State Department. Dean George E. Hamilton, who presided, introduced Mr. Hackworth as a former student of the law school.

Boys, 8, 14 Years Old, Are Reported Missing

Frank Carlton Curtis, 14 years old, of 1637 Rosedale street northwest, and Francis Bernhardt, 8 years old, of 1681 Gales street northeast, were reported missing last night by their parents.

Police were told that the boys had been missing since noon. The Curtis boy has light hair, blue eyes and was wearing a dark blue suit, police were told. The younger boy was wearing a light, dirty cap, a gray mackinaw coat and brown knickers.

Firemen May Donate Funds To Prevent Cut in Teachers

A suggestion that a part of the $15,000 to be given to the Prince Georges County Volunteer Fire Association by the county commissioners be turned over to the county school board was made last night and referred back to the individual companies for action.

The matter was brought up by George Finger, of the Capitol Heights department, at the regular meeting of the association last night. Mr. Finger pointed out that when the association appropriation was increased from $5,000 to $15,000 the slump was not so pronounced. He also pointed out that the teaching staff of the county was being reduced. Sentiment in favor of accepting a lesser sum seemed to be general in the meeting, but there was some doubt that it could be done legally. A committee was appointed to ask the county commissioners if this action would be legal, and to find out how much would be needed to avoid a cut in the teaching staff.

A suggestion that each member company donate about $50 to the rescue squad for the purchase of a new ambulance was also made by Noble Ruahe, of Hyattsville. It was referred back to the member companies for their decision.

The Greater Capitol Heights fire company, hosts at the meeting last night, entertained the association members at a supper. An entertainment was given by the Orange brothers, of Greater Capitol Heights.

Ohioan Remorseful At Wife's Inquest

Breaks Down Soon After Alleged Accomplice in Slaying Kills Self.

Wooster, Ohio, May 11 (A.P.).—Herbert Meeker, 28-year-old Wayne County farmer, succumbed to remorse today as he was taken before the body of his young wife, battered to death with an automobile tire pump, as she rode with her husband and a friend Sunday night.

Meeker broke down for the first time when he viewed his wife's body, just a few hours after the suicide of a youth whom he had implicated in the slaying.

"How could I have done it?" Meeker cried to officers at a Millersberg morgue, where an inquest into the killing was conducted. Authorities could ascribe no motive to the killing.

Virginia Woman Injured In Fairfax Auto Upset

Mrs. Mary Robby, of Legato, Va., sustained fractures of the collar bone and ribs, when the automobile in which she was riding with her son, Joseph, overturned on the Lee Jackson boulevard, near the town of Fairfax, last night.

Her son, who was uninjured, said that the accident occurred when he attempted to pass another car and lost control. Mrs. Robby was treated at Manassas, Va., and taken to a Washington Hospital for further treatment.

A charge of embezzlement was placed against Clifford T. Sterns, 28 years old, an employe of the Grafton Hotel, last night at police headquarters. He was arrested at the hotel by Detective Sergts. J. W. Shiman and R. J. Mayhan.

According to police, Sterns embezzled a large amount of the hotel's funds during a period covering several months. George Clark, of 1139 Connecticut avenue northwest, an official of the Grafton, was listed as complainant in the case. Sterns was released under a bond of $1,500.

Optimists to Seek 1933 Convention

Capital Club Booms Nevius and Pirie for District Posts at Richmond.

Decision to make an effort to have the 1933 international convention of Optimist Clubs hold its meeting here was reached by the Washington Optimist Club yesterday at its luncheon meeting.

The Optimists also instructed delegates to the District convention in Richmond next Monday to seek the election of Herbert Nevius and Harry Pirie, both of the local group, as district governor and lieutenant governor, respectively. Harry Pursinger, Washington school boy, was picked by the club to represent it in the district oratorical competition to be held in Richmond Monday.

Charles V. Imlay, Washington attorney, was the principal speaker yesterday. He stressed the need of practical optimism as opposed to the impractical optimism which asserts that "all's well" without attempting to make the necessary mental and material adjustments to overcome the condition.

Indictments Naming Shapiro Are Dropped

Fifteen indictments charging Jacob B. Shapiro, real estate operator, with false pretenses in connection with the sale of real estate, were dropped in the District Supreme Court yesterday at the instance of United States Attorney Leo A. Rover.

Shapiro was convicted last year of use of the mails to defraud, but Justice Jesse C. Adkins, before whom the case was tried, placed him on probation because no one lost any money through Shapiro's transactions. The indictments that were dropped yesterday were returned a year ago.

Police Reveal Plot On Premier Lyons

Wide Conspiracy to March on Australian Capital Is Frustrated.

Sydney, New South Wales, May 11 (A.P.).—A plot to stage a "march on Canberra" and capture Premier Joseph A. Lyons was disclosed tonight by police, who raided the headquarters of the so-called new guard organization. Canberra is the capital of Australia.

Police indicated that a group of prominent men in Sydney would be arrested as a result of the raids on the new guard headquarters.

Police Commissioner Childs issued a statement saying the raids has disclosed plans to establish ammunition dumps.

Premier Lyons, leader of the United Australia party, came into power last December. Recently, during a serious strife between the government of New South Wales, headed by Premier J. T. Lang, and the commonwealth government, Lyons has been under a strong police guard.

The funeral services will be held in Notre Dame Cathedral, in which Napoleon was crowned. Then the body will be taken to the steps of the Pantheon, where Premier Andre Tardieu will eulogize the late president.

Prince Paul of Jugoslavia, the Duke of Aosta of Italy, and the Prince of Wales arrived today to take part in the funeral. King Albert of the Belgians arrived just before midnight.

The German government is sending a special ambassador. Four of M. Doumer's sons lost their lives fighting the German armies.

Match King's World Power Revealed at Court Hearing

Ivar Kreuger's Suicide Kept Secret Till Markets Closed to Curb Losses; Financial Sway in Nations Called Marvelous.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—The incredible story of the life and death of Ivar Kreuger, whose word was better than his bond, was recounted in part today.

The Swedish industrialist's stride across the world in formation of a capitalist empire which recognized neither governments nor laws nor bookkeeping; his ability to obtain millions on the mere strength of his name; his mental panic in the face of impending disaster; his dramatic end as a suicide—all these were told at bankruptcy proceedings against the International Match Co.

Donald Durant, partner in Lee Higginson & Co., his American banking representatives, testified before Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn that the news of Kreuger's death from a bullet wound in Paris on March 12 was suppressed for eight hours until the exchanges closed, but denied that securities in Kreuger's far-flung enterprises were unloaded during the period of silence.

Durant was waiting in a Paris hotel for the industrialist to join a conference of international bankers on the rescission of a contract between the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Ericsson Telephone Co., he said, when Krister Littorin, an associate of Kreuger, appeared and said:

"Ivar has shot himself."

Durant cabled his partners in New York that Kreuger was dead, but that no announcement was to be made until the French authorities took action. As evidence that no Kreuger securities were sold during that period he said his brokerage house still carries $8,000,000 worth of stock in its safe.

The broker told of an incident that occurred during Kreuger's last visit to the United States in search of capital to bolster up his tottering corporations. He and a partner called on the capitalist to discuss the decision of the I. T. & T. to abrogate a contract to buy the Ericsson concern because its affairs were in questionable shape.

"We found Mr. Kreuger very sick," Durant said. "He was on the verge of hysterics. He was very hard to talk to. He said there had been a mistake in the translation of the statement of the Ericsson Telephone Co."

Lee Higginson & Co. relied implicitly on Kreuger's word as to what concessions would be allotted to International Match in pending contracts, the witness said, and did not bother to inquire into the nature of the concessions or the percentage of profits to be allocated to the company.

"We don't know yet what the list of foreign concessions was," he said.

The mystery of the celebrated "X-Y-Z" concessions and match monopolies, secrets which the financier would not trust to paper, was explained by Durant's statement that "X" represented Italy, "Y" Spain and "Z" the Diamond Match Co. Kreuger intimated he had made tremendous investments in these fields, but this has been disproved.

The amount of International Match stock sold in this country was placed by Durant at $150,000,000, on which his house made $6,305,000 net profit. He could not estimate the total profit because the transaction was floated by some 600 brokers in many parts of the United States.

An identical story of blind faith in Kreuger's integrity and the strength of his empire was told by Samuel Pryor, of Greenwich, Conn., a director in the match company. He described his personal fondness for the financier and of a trip to Stockholm where "every one spoke beautifully of Mr. Kreuger."

He and Percy Rockefeller sold the World Match Co. to Kreuger in return for stock in the latter's organization. He still holds $100,000 in Kreuger & Toll securities and Rockefeller retains the major share of his holdings. Asked if he was not shocked by subsequent revelations of irregularities, he replied:

"I'm pretty much impervious to all shocks, now."

DR. T. M. JONES, 83, OF ALEXANDRIA, DIES

Funeral Services for Widely Known Physician to Be Held at Residence.

Dr. Thomas Marshall Jones, one of the oldest of Alexandria physicians, is dead. The end came at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, at Georgetown University Hospital, Washington, where he had been a patient for the last five weeks, following an operation.

Dr. Jones was 83 years old and one of the oldest and most widely known physicians not only in the city but also in the State. For many years past he had served as coroner for the city.

For the past 51 consecutive years he engaged in the practice of medicine here and had spent a total of 63 years in this field. The deceased took his academic course at the University of Virginia and graduated in medicine at the University of Maryland. After graduating he engaged in the practice of medicine in Warrenton before locating in Alexandria.

Born in Fauquier.

Dr. Jones was born at Woodside, Fauquier County, and was a son of Maj. James Fitzhugh Jones and Anne Lewis Marshall. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Winter Payne Jones, who is a native of Warrenton, Va., and the following children: Winfield Payne Jones, of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Annie Lewis Jones, of this city; John Marshall Jones, of Baltimore; Mrs. Harry C. Beverly, of this city; James Fitzgerald Jones, of Tucson, Ariz.; Mrs. Cora Jones Davis, of Mount Ida. He also leaves two brothers, James Fitzgerald Jones, of King George County, Va., and Fielding Lewis Jones, of California.

The deceased was the oldest living great-grandson of Chief Justice John Marshall and a great-great-grandson of Gabriel Jones, "Valley Lawyer," who was one of the first lawyers to come from England and settle in the Valley as the king's counsel.

The body was brought here and taken to his late residence, 419 Prince street, from whence the funeral will take place at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Seven grandsons of the deceased will serve as pallbearers. They are Carroll Payne Jones, of the University of Virginia; John Marshall Jones and Shriver Jones, of Baltimore; Marshall Jones Beverley, Carter Beverley, Gerald Davis, and Robert Davis, of this city.

New Capitol Heights Officials Take Oath

New members of the Capitol Heights Town Council and the new mayor, Thomas J. Luckett, were sworn in last night after the outgoing council had ordered its clerk to prepare a resolution thanking former Mayor Selig Posen for his work while in office. Mr. Posen resigned several months ago on account of ill health, and was succeeded by Joseph Lare.

The new councilmen who were sworn in were Robert Ennis, Harry Adams, Harry Hazel and J. Mulitz. They were elected on May 2, when Wallace Rollins and Harry Evans were reelected to council seats.

Couple Seek to Adopt Baby Deserted in Auto

A petition for the adoption of a baby abandoned in an auto near Children's Hospital last summer was filed in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday by Ralph A. and Mabel E. Stafford, of Colmar Manor, Md.

The little girl, now about 16 months old, was taken to Children's Hospital and then to the Home for Foundlings. The Staffords, who are represented by Attorney W. Carroll Beatty, want the court, when giving them the child, to name it officially Mary Louise Stafford.

Miss Lena Griffin Improving.

The condition of Miss Lena Griffin, of Lyon Village, who underwent an operation at Georgetown Hospital yesterday, was reported as greatly improved last night.

CHAMBER TO MAKE GUNSTON HALL VISIT

Pilgrimage to Historic Home of George Mason Will Be on May 28.

Members of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce will visit Gunston Hall, home of George Mason, author of the Virginia Bill of Rights and the historic Fairfax resolves, in a body May 28, according to plans made at the trade body's monthly meeting in the county courthouse at Fairfax, Va.

The historic estate, home of Louis Hertle and located in the southern section of Fairfax County, was recently deeded to the State of Virginia and will soon be opened as a public shrine. The members of the trade body will assemble at Pohick Church on the Washington-Richmond Highway at 3 p. m. May 28 and make the pilgrimage under the leadership of President John W. Brookfield.

Telephone and electric rates in the county were discussed at length, especially the question of toll charges among the various telephone exchanges. The entire matter was referred to the chambers' public utility committee for investigation and report.

The tentative plans of the Piedmont Dairy Festival Association for its celebration at Manassas on September 30 was outlined by County Agricultural Agent F. D. Cox, of Prince William County, and the chamber was invited to participate. It was stated that the Fairfax County School Board had recently refused to allow the county school children to participate in any celebration outside the county on a school day, which precludes them from the Manassas festivities. Several members of the chamber ask that the county school board be asked to grant a holiday on that date. Action was postponed.

The Rev. C. A. Langston, rector of the Pohick Episcopal Church, invited the members to visit the Wigmore collection of water color views of the colonial churches of Virginia, which will be on exhibition in the vestry house of the Pohick Church on Saturday.

2 Quickly Cleared Of Death Charges

Alex Shorter Acquitted in Prince Georges Murder Hearing.

Two men were acquitted, one on murder charges and the other on a manslaughter indictment, when they were tried before juries in Prince Georges County circuit court yesterday.

After leaving the jury box only long enough to smoke a cigarette in the jury room, twelve men decided that the fatal shooting of Richard Collins last fall was an accident. Alex Shorter had been arrested and charged with killing Collins on a houseboat moored in the Potomac River near Piscataway. Alber R. Hassal and J. Wilson Ryon, attorneys for Shorter, contended that the shooting occurred while Shorter was handing a shotgun to Collins.

Eugene G. Jackson, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death last October of Ben Albert Castano, a Walter Reed soldier, was also found not guilty after a short deliberation. Castano is said to have been killed in an auto crash.

3 Held for U. S. Court In Marlboro RumCounts

Three men were held on liquor charges for the Federal court in Baltimore when arraigned before United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran in Marlboro yesterday. Henry Parker, who was captured by Deputy Marshal Eugene Snook at Parker's home at Dare's Wharf, Md., was held in bond of $1,000 on charges of manufacture and possession. A still is alleged to have been found near his home.

James Wenk and George Yates, arrested near a still near La Plata, Md., were held in bond of $1,000 each. Both men live in La Plata.

BANK AT MARLBORO TO BE INDEPENDENT

Branch of Southern Maryland Trust Company to Leave Parent Firm.

A separation of the Marlboro branch of the Southern Maryland Trust Co. from the parent bank in Seat Pleasant has been authorized by the stockholders of the company, it was learned yesterday.

The Marlboro branch will be operated as a separate institution by a group of the present shareholders who live near Marlboro. It is expected to be capitalized at $35,000, and officers will be chosen from the group which has been negotiating for a separation. No name has been selected for the new bank, which will probably start to operate individually within a few weeks.

Sale of the Marlboro branch and the retirement of 1,000 shares of stock were authorized at a stockholders' meeting in Seat Pleasant Monday night. The stock retirement will reduce the capitalization of the trust company from $150,000 to $125,000. The 1,000 shares to be retired are now in the hands of those who are interested in the new institution.

The Southern Maryland Trust Co. went into the hands of receivers in 1929, after the failure of the F. H. Smith Co., which held some of the bank's funds. Later it was reorganized and reopened. Officers of the Smith company held stock in the trust company and some of the books of the Smith company were kept in the Seat Pleasant branch.

Suburban Street Widening Opposed

Petition of Protest Filed Against Project on Wisconsin Avenue.

A petition protesting against adoption of plan "D" for the improvement of Wisconsin avenue from the District line to Bethesda Bank was filed yesterday in the office of Charles Y. Latimer, clerk of the Montgomery County commissioners. The petition will be presented to the commissioners at their meeting today in the Rockville Courthouse.

The protestants claim that plan "D" imposes an unfair and unwarranted burden upon a relatively small group of property owners as well as upon the taxpayers of the whole county. They point out that the plan provides for acquiring land for the widening on the west side of the road, much of which has been landscaped and improved, and makes no provision for acquiring rights on the east side which is unimproved land.

The property owners assert that provision of a single track for the street car company, as at present, would aid in reducing the land needed for widening and further that a 75-foot roadway, as planned, would produce a "bottleneck" at the District line.

Programs Planned In Hospitals Today

Institutions Here to Join in Celebration in Honor of Florence Nightingale.

Hospitals of the city will today join in the observance of "National Hospital Day" as recently proclaimed by President Hoover. This is an annual event, the day marking the birthday of Florence Nightingale, famous nurse, and hence falling each year on May 12.

Children's Hospital has prepared an elaborate program of games and a garden party for the dispensary clients, and teachers from both white and colored schools have volunteered to act as play directors and maintain order during the day. The day will also be signalized at Children's by the formal presentation of the latest model respirator given to the hospital by the Rotary Club. S. Percy Thompson, president of the Rotarians, will make the presentation.

"Home-coming Day" will be observed at the National Homeopathic Hospital, where Mrs. Wilson Coleman, superintendent, has arranged for a party for children born in the hospital who return on this occasion. There will be special milk for the babies all day, and at 3 o'clock this afternoon there will be given a tea in the nurses' home for the mothers and other visitors.

'Possum Held For Gazing in Chicken Coop

A pent-up "possum" paced a prison last night after he was found peering with predatory glance into a Silver Spring chicken coop.

The beast was captured by G. B. Mickum and Albert Pomagno after considerable chasing.

The barking of a dog brought the animal to the attention of the men. They found it in the rear yard of Mr. Mickum's home at 743 Silver Spring avenue.

The 'possum's weight was estimated as 20 pounds. Its captors are wondering what to do with it, they say.

All of the members of the club are entitled to high praise for their work along these lines.

Use of Criminals Is Urged For Yellow Fever Tests

Dr. B. J. Lloyd Willing to Submit Self to New Vaccine; Would Free Incarcerated If They Survive Experiments.

New Orleans, May 11 (A.P.).—Use of condemned criminals for experimentation in vaccine for the prevention of yellow fever was advocated before the American Medical Association today by Dr. Bolivar J. Lloyd, medical director of the United States Public Health Service.

If the criminals should survive the experiment, Dr. Lloyd favors their pardon, contending that "in view of the relative immunity of criminals and gangsters both in and out of court, the releasing of a few more would not matter very much."

So convinced is he of the merits of new discoveries in vaccination that he has agreed to submit himself to the bite of yellow fever mosquitoes if the vaccination should show his immunity.

He qualified his offer on the condition that he could obtain sufficient life insurance to protect his family "in case of any untoward result," which he said he did not anticipate, however.

Dr. Lloyd was speaking about a paper by Dr. Wilbur A. Sawyer, of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, who offered further proofs of the specific nature of what are known as the immune reactions of disease. In that connection, Dr. Lloyd specifically discussed his own methods of vaccination against yellow fever.

He said Dr. Sawyer's discoveries would enable health officers definitely to prove the presence or absence of yellow fever and determine the approximate date of the last yellow fever epidemic in any community, even many years later.

He expressed the conviction the method of vaccination devised by Dr. Sawyer and his colleagues would be found to protect human beings against the bites of known infected mosquitoes and said the next step should be the use of human beings in experimentation, both in submitting to inoculation with attenuated virus without the giving of protective serum and by exposing vaccinated persons to the bites of infected mosquitoes.

ROW IN CHEVY CHASE ON FIRE GUARD AIRED

H. S. Yohe Insists Area Well Protected, Despite Dismissal of Volunteers.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4203.

Seeking to allay the fears of residents of Chevy Chase that the area is without fire protection because of the suspension of the 25 members of the Chevy Chase Volunteer Fire Department, H. S. Yohe, president of the Chevy Chase Fire Board, last night issued a statement denying the lack of protection.

Mr. Yohe refused to discuss the "disciplinary action" which caused the suspension of the entire volunteer fire department, and said that he was not sure that the results of the hearing, which is to be held tonight at the fire house, will be made public. It is understood the firemen were suspended because they insisted on installing a pool table in place of a work bench, belonging to one of the paid members of the department, in the recreation hall at the firehouse.

"The Chevy Chase Fire Department," Mr. Yohe said, "is composed of a paid force and a volunteer force. Members of the paid force are always on duty. Since the suspension of the volunteers, more paid men are on duty. This paid force is under the direction of an experienced firefighter. Moreover, residents of Chevy Chase should remember that full cooperation always has existed and still exists between the Chevy Chase Fire Department and neighboring and Washington fire departments."

The paid force consists of six men, all of whom are former Washington fire fighters, retired for age or disability from that department, members of the volunteer force said.

Hearing on the demurrer filed by the Montgomery County Commissioners in the suit for injunction filed by Fulton R. Gordon, Washington real estate dealer, was held yesday in Montgomery County Circuit Court before Judge Robert B. Peter. The real estate man seeks to have the commissioners enjoined from interfering with establishment by him of a "modern cemetery" at Bradley boulevard and River road.

Through Attorneys Oigle Marbury, of Baltimore, and John F. Lillard, of Hyattsville, the plaintiff alleged that he is the owner of the property and that by reason of a zoning classification of residential property and an ordinance which provides for licensing of graveyards and cemeteries he is prevented from using his property in a lawful manner. He alleges that the ordinances are therefore unconstitutional.

The commissioners, through the law firm of Whiteford & Cissel, counsel to the commissioners, demur on the grounds that Mr. Gordon has not been denied a permit, nor has he made application for a permit or for a change in zoning, and, therefore, has no grievance at law. They further aver that the ordinances are valid inasmuch as similar ordinances in Baltimore have been upheld by the Maryland Court of Appeals, and that the regulation of the location of cemeteries is a proper exercise of the police power by the county commissioners.

Judge Peter said he wished to make a thorough study before ruling on the demurrer.

Irish Income Taxes Face Steep Boosts

DeValera Government Also Proposes Drastic Hikes in Tariff Scale.

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 11 (A.P.).—Steep increases in tariffs and income taxes were proposed in the first budget of the De Valera government, which was introduced today in the Dail Eireann.

The budget provided for a duty on tea of 4 pence (8 cents), a pound, and a package tax of 2 pence (3 cents) on each container holding any article of food or drink, or cosmetics or medical preparations packed for sale.

The income tax rate would be raised from 4 shillings 8 pence to 5 shillings in the pound. (This amounts to a boost from 64 cents to 92 cents in each $3.67.)

Drastic action was necessary to make both ends meet in the nation's finances because President De Valera's government faced a budgetary deficit of £3,500,000 ($12,845,000).

Walker in Probe Spotlight Again

Banker Tells of Employing Sherwood, Mayor's Financial Agent.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Mayor James J. Walker came under the spotlight of the Hofstadter investigation again today in testimony centering around his long-missing financial agent, Russell T. Sherwood.

Park A. Rowley testified that Sherwood was hired as a "new accounts" man by the Bank of Manhattan Co. at an annual salary of $10,000 partially on the strength of his acquaintance with the mayor.

Sherwood, sought by the Hofstadter committee as the link with Mayor Walker's financial affairs, was not supposed to devote all his time to his new position, according to the testimony. Counsel Samuel Seabury endeavored to show in his questioning that Sherwood was employed primarily to cultivate agreeable relations with his former employer.

P. U. C. DELAYS IDEAS ON CAPPER TAX BILL

Will Not Give Opinion on Plan Until City Heads Are Consulted.

The Public Utilities Commission will make no report on the Capper bill to increase the taxes on local public utilities until its members confer with the District Commissioners, Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman, said yesterday after representatives of the larger utilities called on him.

Gen. Patrick declined to express any opinion on the measure pending the drafting of a formal report, which will be sent to Congress early next week. He said that the chief objection advanced by the utility delegates was that such a tax as proposed by Senator Capper would be difficult to administrate.

The bill would place a tax on the personal property of local utilities at the same rate that is charged individuals in addition to the 2 per cent tax on gross earnings.

Representatives of the Capital Traction Co. and the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Washington Rapid Transit Co. also called on the commission to protest against the provision of the recent bus order requiring the installation of safety glass on all buses whenever replacements are made or new buses are purchased.

The commission was told that the expense does not justify the extra expense. The protest was taken under advisement.

He said that more than 200 members of the House had announced their intention of attending the ceremonies and believed that adjournment was the best idea. The War Department appropriation bill was not scheduled to come before the House today, and only speeches were on the slate.

13 American Women Bow Before British Royal Pair

Ambassador Mellon Eschews Formal Court Attire of Knee Breeches, Appearing in Buckingham Palace Ballroom in Ordinary Evening Clothes.

London, May 11 (A.P.).—The king and queen, hand in hand, led the royal procession into the ballroom at Buckingham Palace tonight to hold the first court of the season at which 400 debutantes, including 13 Americans, were presented to their majesties.

Save for the Prince of Wales, almost all of the prominent figures of England's royal and political life were there. Among them was slight, gray-haired Andrew Mellon, the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

And all eyes, momentarily, were on the ambassador because there had been much speculation—and considerable mystery—as to whether he would follow the example of the brusque, popular Charles G. Dawes, who began his ambassadorial career in London by declining to wear the formal court uniform of knee breeches and stockings.

Mellon definitely approved the attitude of Dawes by appearing in ordinary full-dress suit, with long trousers. But Ray Atherton, of the embassy, who accompanied the ambassador and his daughter, Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, wore the court uniform.

The strains of "God Save the King" sounded through the ballroom as the king and queen entered, followed by the Duke and Duchess of York, Prince George, the Countess of Athlone, the Marquis and Marchioness of Milford-haven and Lady Maud Carnegie.

They walked through a background of bright uniforms worn by diplomats of many nations, mingled with the dark full dress of statesmen high in the councils of Britain's government.

The hall was decorated with red roses, laburnum and hydrangeas. The queen was resplendent in an "all-British"—the national rehabilitation program invaded even Buckingham Palace—costume. She wore an embroidered silver and gold gown with a train of Irish lace and silver lame. On her head sparkled a diamond tiara and at her throat was a necklace of blue silver and the Order of the Garter.

The king was in the full dress uniform of a colonel-in-chief of the Scots Guards.

They bowed to the assembly as they sat on the thrones, other members of the royal family grouped about them. Along the sides of the ballroom were the distinguished guests, including Emir Feisal, son of the King of the Hedjaz, wearing a flowing white and gold burnouse adorned with precious stones. The men wore black crepe on their left arm in mourning for the assassinated president, Paul Doumer of France.

Dame Margaret Lloyd George, Mrs. Stanley Baldwin, Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, Mrs. Walter Runciman, Isabel MacDonald, daughter of the prime minister, and others were in the ballroom. Outside the debutantes had been waiting for hours in a long line of automobiles at the gates. The line moved up slowly as the presentations began and crowds of idlers, including many roughly dressed cockneys, gathered on the sidewalks to stare at the gorgeously dressed women, openly voicing admiration or criticisms.

The Americans, presented by the wife of the French Ambassador, were: Miss Mary E. Beebe, Wallingford, Pa.; Miss Helen Bryan, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Eugene H. Dooman, New York; Mrs. David E. Finley, Washington, D. C.; Miss Hilda Foster, Boston; Miss Denise Livingston, New York; Miss Estelle Frelinghuysen, Elberon, N. J.; Miss Alice Lovering, Boston; Miss Isobel McCreery, San Francisco; Miss Natica Nast, New York; Mrs. Cortland T. Parker, Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. William T. Pigott, Helena, Mont., and Mrs. Bruce, who is Mellon's hostess at the embassy.

More Pupils Hear Tommy McAuliff

Armless Sports Writer Also Addresses Kiwanians; Ends Week's Visit.

Tommy McAuliff, sports writer and world's champion armless golfer, typist and penman, concluded a week's visit here yesterday with talks before the student body of Stuart Junior High School and before the weekly luncheon of the Washington Kiwanis Club at the Raleigh Hotel.

Here in the interests of the rehabilitation of the disabled in the District of Columbia, McAuliff has addressed a number of schools on how disabled persons may become successful. The Weightman School for Crippled Children here was among those addressed. The program was arranged by the Vocational Rehabilitation Service for the District of Columbia, which is connected with the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

McAuliff lost both of his arms in a railroad accident at the age of 9. Despite the handicap he is a golfer of no mean prowess and an expert penman. During his visit here he exhibited his golfing ability at the Kenwood Country Club to the amazement and edification of a large crowd of spectators.

Idle Cousin of Washington Seeks Bicentennial Work

While Bicentennial pageants are led by bewigged impersonators of the first Chief Executive, Frederick Baldwin Cole, of New York, jobless for two and a half years, with a wife and family to support, looks askance at the portrayals and aspires to present the role of George Washington, a sixth cousin of his, who he is said to resemble.

Stating his case, Cole said: "I can't understand why they won't pick one of President Washington's cousins to impersonate him in pageants. I appealed to Mayor Walker, and his secretary referred me to the Civil Service Commission. I appealed to the White House, and was told that the President was without authority to put me in a pageant. I wrote to the Bicentennial Commission and still no results."

Explaining his woes, he complained: "You see? I have the reddish hair, the gray-blue eyes, the high forehead and the ears close to the head which were always remarked on as resembling my relative. I am 5 feet 10, almost as tall as Washington. They honor him this year, but nevertheless can not give work to his cousin six times removed."

The earliest recollections Cole had of allusions to his resemblance of Washington were the remarks of his grandmother who at the age of 92 noticed her own resemblance to "the general." "Freddie," as she called Cole, was his image, she always said.

Cole says that he has mentioned for years that he is a relative of Washington, but people, he said, chaff him, even though they notice a resemblance.

METHODISTS URGED TO RELAX DIVORCES

Uniform Marriage Laws in U. S. Also Recommended at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 11 (A.P.). Further liberalization of the Methodist Episcopal Church's regulation on divorce was recommended today to the quadrennial conference.

The proposed changes, as presented by the subcommittee to the committee on the state of the church, suggested that the church recognize as valid grounds for divorce "adultery or other conditions, which through mental torture or physical peril invalidates the marriage vow."

From the date of Methodism's foundation in 1784, until 1928, the church recognized only adultery as grounds for divorce. In 1928 the discipline was changed to make grounds for divorce valid for "adultery or its moral equivalent."

Liberalizing Move.

The 1928 change, which was regarded as a liberalizing move, was adopted only after strenuous opposition, a similar fight against further liberalization was forecast when the text of the recommended changes became known.

The proposed changes, which drop from the phrase "or its moral equivalent," were reported by the committee on family relations, headed by Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, of New York, a noted liberal. They were based on memorial submitted to the conference by the Southern California and Des Moines conferences.

The new divorce regulation must first run the gantlet of debate and amendment in the committee on the state of the church before it goes to the general conference for legislative approval or disapproval. The committee deferred action on the changes today, but detailed the question for discussion on Friday.

The committee did take action, however, on a recommendation that the general conference support the effort to have uniform marriage and divorce laws enacted throughout the country. This resolution, providing that bishops notify the next conference of the governors of the United States of the church's action, now goes to the conference for final action.

Along with the proposed liberalization of divorce grounds, the subcommittee also proposed that the church eliminate from its discipline the statement: "We recognize as lawful a divorce granted by the state."

The suggested deletion was explained as an unwillingness to acknowledge divorces granted by "divorce mills" or for causes other than those the church recognizes.

End of Crowded Day.

The divorce liberalization move came at the end of a crowded day in which the conference ratified a new retirement policy for its bishops and Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Church South, sounded a warning that the South would unite against any wet candidate.

The new retirement policy arranges for retirement of bishops on a graduated scale and is believed virtually to assure assignment of Bishop Hughes of Chicago, to the Washington, D. C., episcopate, most important in Methodism.

The committee on episcopacy, after a long session, voted 131 to 31 to recommend to the general conference the elimination of the Helena, Mont., and Indianapolis areas. The recommendation will be acted upon by the general conference tomorrow.

Opposition Is Expected.

The step would leave Bishop Wallace E. Brown without a bishopric. He was mentioned for possible assignment to Chattanooga, Tenn., which would be vacant if Bishop H. Lester Smith should be assigned to Cincinnati, as expected.

The committee also recommended elimination of the Buffalo area, to be absorbed by Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Boston areas. This would leave Bishop Adna W. Leonard without a bishopric. The Indianapolis area distribution to Detroit would leave Bishop Edgar Blake without an episcopate. In the provisions for Helena, it was recommended the territory be allocated to the St. Paul, Minn.; Portland, Oreg., and Omaha bishoprics.

Some opposition was expected in the general session tomorrow, but the economy group backed the proposal and expressed confidence of carrying the day. The defeat of the proposals to reduce the number of bishops would probably necessitate election of five new bishops. Buffalo and Indianapolis delegations tonight marshalled forces to try to upset the move.

If the elimination proposals go through, election of new bishops would, it was said, be in progress before the end of the week.

W. D. Haas, Jr., Louisiana, Holds Masonic Office at Age of 34.

Among the notables who will attend the dedication of the $5,000,000 Masonic Memorial to George Washington in Alexandria today will be one of the youngest deputy grand masters in the world. He is W. Next year, when he is elevated to the post of grand master, he will be the youngest in the State of Louisiana to attain that station, and one of the youngest persons in the history of Masonry to hold such an exalted position in the craft.

Deputy Grand Master Haas entered Masonry in Alexandria, La., where he received the apprentice degree in Oliver Lodge in 1922. He passed the fellowcraft degree the next year, and was raised to the Master Mason degree March 26, 1929.

He affiliated with Bunkie Lodge, No. 326, December 18, 1921, and passed through all of the chairs and was made master of lodge in 1925. He was made a life member of Bunkie Lodge in 1930.

Other honors he has received in Masonry include past commander of Trinity Commandery, No. 8, Knights Templar, Alexandria, La.; member Summit Council, No. 12, Royal and Select Masters; life member of Scottish Rite, Lake Charles Consistory, Lake Charles, La., and is the youngest member of St. Paul Conclave, No. 35, Red Cross of Constantine, at New Orleans. Membership in this order is only awarded upon distinguished and meritorious work in Masonry.

Mr. Haas is the youngest member of the grand lodge of his State. In private life he is a banker and sugar planter.

MASONIC CLUBS JOIN IN CONVENTION HERE

Secretary Doak Is Speaker; Delegates Will Attend Memorial Dedication.

One of the most important of the prededication ceremonies of the Masonic orders was the opening yesterday of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs, at which Secretary of Labor William N. Doak was principal speaker. The convention will continue throughout the week and delegates will attend the dedication of the George Washington Masonic Memorial in Alexandria today in a body.

They will meet at 7:30 o'clock this morning near the Masonic Temple, on Twelfth street, between G and H streets northwest, to march to the train for Alexandria.

National President Walter F. Tidswell will lead the parade, with other national and past national officers. Following will be the delegates and alternates, clubs outside of the District of Columbia, and the clubs of the District, according to dates of their charters.

The meeting was called to order at 10 o'clock yesterday morning by Gen. Amos A. Fries, retired, followed by invocation by the Rev. J. C. Palmer.

The delegates were greeted by the grand master of Masons of the District of Columbia, Reuben A. Bogley, and were then welcomed to Washington by Dr. Luther A. Reichelderfer, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners.

Response to his welcome was made by Mr. Tidswell.

The third session of the convention will be held tomorrow, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., at the Willard. A trip around Washington is planned for the wives of delegates, and members will assemble at the White House, where they will be greeted by President Hoover, and for a picture to be taken on the White House lawn.

The convention will close Saturday. Officers and delegates will assemble at 8 a. m., at the Willard Hotel for the trip to Alexandria, where the last session of the convention will be held in the auditorium of the memorial, from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.

The delegates will attend the reception and ball to be held at the Willard tonight at 9 o'clock under the auspices of the Circle Club.

New York Sends Largest Knights Templar Group

The largest jurisdiction of Knights Templar represented at the dedication ceremonies for the Masonic Memorial in Alexandria today, New York State, will show its force by the number in the parade. The delegation will be headed by Arthur L. Lee, grand commander, of New York.

Harry Clay Walker, deputy grand master of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar in the United States, former lieutenant governor of New York, will be present at the Templar functions in Alexandria. Other important Templar officers who will take part in the ceremonies are Chalmers L. Pancoast, grand warden and editor of the Templar Knight; Charles H. Hadlock, grand captain general; Walter A. DeLamater, grand junior warden, and Karl Schwarzwaelder, grand representative of the District of Columbia in New York.

Pennsylvania Body Is Reception Host

Masons of Grand Lodge and Congress Members Are Guests.

(Associated Press.)

A George Washington theme ran through the brief addresses at the Pennsylvania Society reception last night. The reception was in honor of the Pennsylvania members of Congress.

Dr. Thomas N. McKee, of Kittanning, of the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania Masons, described the dedication ceremonies which will be held at the new Masonic shrine in Alexandria today. John M. Core, of Uniontown, of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge, invited members of the society to attend the dedication of Fort Necessity, near Uniontown, on July 3.

Other speakers were Charles A. Weaver, of Wilkes-Barre, and Albert T. Hanby, of Philadelphia. Representative Kendall, of Myersdale, president of the society, introduced Representative Darrow as toastmaster.

Many Companies Assisted In Building Great Temple

Carroll A. Warthen, Superintendent of Construction, Devoted Decade to Task; Wide Variety of Materials Required by $5,000,000 Job.

From the time the date, May 12, 1932, was set for the dedication of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Temple, probably the busiest man in Virginia has been Carroll A. Warthen, superintendent of construction.

Shortly after the contract for the construction of this $5,000,000 temple was awarded to the Percy Cranford Co., of Washington, Mr. Warthen was selected as construction superintendent. He first took up his duties when ground was broken June 5, 1922. When he was notified of the date set for the dedication, all the exterior stone work on the building had been completed, but very little had been done on the interior—in fact, details of the interior work are now being completed.

The auditorium, which is the only one of the many rooms in the building which will be ready by May 12, has been partially completed for several years, and had been used on special Masonic occasions several times.

Huge Foundation Slab.

Everything about this temple is of impressive dimensions. The foundation slab, which was designed by Daniel E. Moran, is believed to be the largest ever cast in a single piece. It is of articulate girder design, and has an area of approximately 39,000 square feet, varying in thickness from 4½ feet to 9 feet. It contains 9,000 yards of concrete, and once the pouring of this enormous mass was started there could be no rest until it was completed.

The building is constructed of gray granite, some of the columns are of green granite, and all came from Red Stone, N. H., being furnished by the Maine & New Hampshire Granite Corporation. The plans were drawn by Helmle & Corbett, of New York, later Helmle, Corbett & Harrison, and still later Corbett, Harrison & MacMurray, architects. Mr. Moran, the designer of the foundation, is a member of the firm of Moran, Maurice & Proctor, of New York; the construction architects were Osgood & Osgood, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; the structural engineer was Gunwald Aus, of New York; mechanical engineers were Clarke, McMullen & Riley, New York, and the landscape architects were Olmstead Bros., Carl Rust Parker, Associated, of Brookline, Mass.

Harvey W. Corbett, who is largely responsible for the design of the temple, apparently is not the only member of his family who is talented, for, over the main entrance of the temple is a striking medallion, 7 feet across, depicting the head of George Washington, after the famous Houdon statue in the Virginia Capitol in Richmond. This medallion was carved after the stone was in place by Mrs. Harvey W. Corbett.

Careful Stone Work.

It is certain that no building of modern times has been so carefully constructed as has this memorial, and one of the most important features of such careful construction is the stone setting. This work is a credit to the Samuel Miller Co., of Washington, which handled this difficult work so that, when the Grand Lodge of Virginia, in charge of the dedication, passes on it, there can be no verdict other than that the stones were "well and truly laid."

Bronze was used for window sash, doors, and other parts exposed to the weather, to further carry out the idea of permanency, and a large part of this work was furnished by the William H. Jackson Co., of New York. The Alexandria Iron Works, which has been an institution in that old city for many years, furnished a great part of the iron grille and other similar work. The Washington Stair & Ornamental Iron Co. also furnished much of the iron work.

A vast amount of sheet metal has been used, some being furnished by G. O. Robertson, of Wilmington, Del., some by Ernest Gichner, of Washington, and some by the E. Van Norden Co., of New York. Many sections of the country have been represented in furnishing materials for the Memorial to Washington.

The carving, by Mrs. Corbett, of the head of Washington was not, by any means, all the carving done on the building. C. Fred Coles, of Washington, shares this honor with Mrs. Corbett.

Many Pieces of Glass Needed.

Another subcontractor whose plant is nearby is the Hires-Turner Glass Co., of Rossiyn, which furnished the glass, many hundreds of pieces being used.

Lighting fixtures, which are varied in style and artistic in design, were furnished by the Sterling Bronze Works, and electrical supplies by the National Electrical Supply Co., of Washington, and A. L. Ladd, of Alexandria. Alexandrians have been busily engaged in plumbing work, among them being Earl Wiley, who shared honors with the D. C. Engineering Co. The Thos. Somerville Co., of Washington, furnished much pipe and plumbing fixtures.

There were a number of contractors for the hardware used, among them Henry H. Meyer & Co., of Washington, furnishing heavy hardware, machinery and equipment; Worth Hulfish & Sons, of Alexandria; the Baldwin-Stuart Co., of Hardford, Conn.; Sargent & Co., of New York, and others.

The memorial will have a great central heating plant, in a specially constructed building some distance from the main building, equipped with boilers by the American Radiator Co., which also furnished radiators, while unit heaters and ventilators were furnished by the B. F. Sturtevant Co., the Benjamin F. Shore Co., of Wilmington, Del., and the Buffalo Forge Co., all this heating apparatus being thermostatically controlled by equipment furnished by the Johnson Service Co. Oil burners for this plant were supplied by the Automatic Heating Co., of Washington.

Local Firm Supplies Carpets.

David E. Kennedy Co., Inc., furnished cork coverings for floors and walls; Woodward & Lothrop, of Washington, supplied the carpets, and W. & J. Sloan the drapes.

Sewer pipe was furnished by the Potomac Clay Works, of Alexandria; acoustic tile by the George P. Little Co., and the roofing work was done by the New York Roofing Co., of New York City, and the Ehret-Warren Co., of Washington.

The Concrete Steel Co., of Washington, furnished the steel and the Vulcanite Portland Cement Co., of Philadelphia, the Portland cement. The brick work for the boiler house was done by Temple B. Greenstreet, of Washington, and the stacks were by Alphonse Custodis Co., of New York. Terrazo work was by V. Foscato, of New York.

The amphitheater in the rear of the memorial hall is a specimen of what the interior work of the memorial will look like when completed. The interior marble was furnished by the Hilgartner Marble Co., of Baltimore, and the comfortable plush-backed seats by the American Seating Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., which also furnished the woodwork in this beautiful room. The fan-shaped ceiling and the ornamental frieze were modeled by Louis Ludwig, of Washington, and the plaster work was done by A. W. Lee, also of Washington.

Lumber From Nearby.

Lumber and millwork were furnished by W. A. Smoot & Co., of Alexandria, while George H. Robinson's Sons, also of Alexandria, supplied other building materials; W. W. MacCallum, of Alexandria, has the painting contract, and Ernest Simpson, of Alexandria, did the terra cotta furring. The Aluminum Co. of America supplied the aluminum plate, and the Aerocrete Corporation furnished its product.

In the landscaping work, a huge quantity of top soil was supplied by Earl Strong, of Alexandria; C. F. Armiger, of Washington, furnished landscaping supplies, and the grass seed came from O. M. Scott, of Marysville, Ohio.

MEMORIAL TO DATE FREE OF ALL DEBTS

$3,644,189 Has Been Put in Construction, Association President Reports.

Not a penny of indebtedness remains on the part of the George Washington Masonic Memorial thus far completed, Louis A. Watres, of Scranton, Pa., reported yesterday at a meeting of Masonic Memorial Association, held in the auditorium of the structure in Alexandria. Mr. Watres is president of the association.

When the idea for the memorial was conceived back in 1908 the original estimate of $10,000 for the project was increased to about $5,000,000. The association has followed the plan of letting contracts for work on the structure only when the money was actually in hand, regardless of the amount of the pledges.

To date a total of $3,644,189 has been expended on the project, Mr. Watres reported. Out of a Masonic population of 3,267,327, a total of $3,448,984 has been raised for the memorial, he said.

Members of grand lodges from every State in the Union, Porto Rico and Canada attended the meeting of the association.

An address of welcome was extended by Harry K. Green, Grand Master of Virginia. He said the temple which will be dedicated today will "proclaim to the world that the man who maintained in peace the independence he won for the country in war was a zealous member of this fraternal body."

Masons of today are alive to the idea of their fathers, Mr. Green declared. It was left to the Masons to perpetuate the memory of Washington as a Mason while the George Washington Bicentennial program is honoring him as a soldier and statesman, he said.

Robert B. Gaylor, Grand Master of California, responding to the address of welcome, called upon Masons of the world to rededicate themselves to the ideals of government founded by Washington.

Master Masons Sponsor Big Reception Tonight

The peak day in Masonic Bicentennial activities will close tonight with an event scheduled to be one of the highlights in the convention of the National League of Masonic Clubs.

The Circle Club of Master Masons will be hosts at an elaborate reception and ball to officers and delegates in the Willard Hotel. The club, composed of Masons employed by the District Government, has engaged both ballrooms for the occasion. A program of entertainment, featuring the Vincent Lopez Club Orchestra, will be presented for prominent civic and Government officials expected to attend.

6,000 to Attend Eastern Star Fete

Patriotic Pageant Ready to Be Given Tomorrow Night at 7:45.

With everything in readiness for the feature of the Masonic Week entertainment program, and no more seats available, the dress rehearsal for the pageant, "Washington's View of a Triumphant Nation," sponsored by the Bicentennial committee of the Order of Eastern Star, will take place tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. in the Washington Auditorium. The presentation will be given tomorrow night at 7:45 o'clock before some 5,000 people, including many distinguished guests attending the Masonic Week activities and also many members of Congress.

Written and directed by Mrs. Selma Klein, the pageant will be presented in eleven elaborate scenes depicting the progress of the Nation from its earliest stages. The program will open with selections played by the United States Marine Band. Detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines will participate in the closing scene. Some of the leading local soloists will have parts in the colorful pageant.

Preceding the performance brief addresses of welcome will be made by Miss Edith Williams, worthy grand matron, and Paul B. Cromelin, worthy grand patron. Other short talks by Eastern Star and Masonic officials also will be heard. Mrs. Lelia Cooke, chairman of the ticket committee, announced that the 6,000 tickets on hand two weeks ago had been distributed and no more seats will be available.

Finest Materials Used in Structure

Petro-Nokol Oil Burners Installed to Meet High Standards.

To reflect fittingly the ideals and character of George Washington, the new Masonic Memorial at Alexandria employed the finest materials and craftsmanship in its construction and also in the equipment, even though unseen, that contributes to this outstanding testimony of the esteem in which the memory of our first President is enshrined.

Because of the standards of superexcellence that were insisted upon in every feature, J. B. MacMurray, general manager of the Automatic Heating Corporation of Washington, yesterday expressed himself as particularly proud of the fact that the heating of this magnificent edifice has been intrusted to the Petro-Nokol oil burners installed by his concern.

Pointing to a record of nine years, during which many of the city's important business buildings, such as the Southern Railway Building, in addition to domestic heating installations, have been equipped with Petro-Nokol burners, Mr. MacMurray added that the details of their oil delivery system and service has undoubtedly contributed to the reputation that was a large factor in the selection of this equipment for the new Masonic Memorial.

NATION'S MASONIC LEADERS GATHER TO DEDICATE MEMORIAL

HOOVER AND CABINET TO ATTEND SERVICES

present the members of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association, the governing body for the erection of the Memorial; grand masters and past grand masters representing each of the 49 grand jurisdictions of Masonry in the United States; representatives of the order from the territorial possessions of the United States, and from foreign lands. Constitution Lodge, of Beverly, England, which has always maintained close relations with Washington's own lodge in Alexandria, exchanging messages of congratulations each year on Washington's Birthday, will send a representative. There will be such an assemblage of Masonic dignitaries present as has never before in the history of the craft been gathered in one place.

The grand chapters of Royal Arch Masons will be represented by their grand high priests and other officers; the Knights Templar by the eminent commanders; the Scottish Rite by the grand commanders and inspectors general; the Shrine by the imperial potentate and his divan, and the Veiled Prophets by the grand monarch. No collateral branch of Masonry will fail to be represented.

The dedication ceremonies will be preceded by a monster parade, in which more than 20,000 persons—possibly twice as many—will march. In addition to the uniformed branches of Masonry, the Shrine, Knights Templar and Veiled Prophets, there will be more than 5,000 soldiers, representing every branch of the service—sailors, Marines and Coast Guardsmen of the regular forces of the United States. Hundreds of subordinate Masonic lodges will send delegations.

To Show Washington Relics.

A number of relics connected with the Masonic life of Washington will be brought to Alexandria for the dedication, among them being the Bible used at his initiation, the property of Fredericksburg Lodge, No. 4, of Fredericksburg, Va.; the trowel used by Washington in laying the corner stone of the National Capitol at Washington, the property of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22; the silver urn made by Paul Revere, a grand master of Masons of Massachusetts, which contains a lock of Washington's hair; the Bible upon which he took the oath of office as first President of the United States, owned by St. John's Lodge, of New York City, and the gavel used by him in laying the corner stone of the Capitol, the property of Potomac Lodge, of Georgetown, D. C., all of which will be used in the dedication exercises. This is the first time these relics have all been assembled in one place. A special ritual written by Dr. Robert S. Barrett, chairman of the dedication committee, to be used by the presiding officer, contains sections which provide for the display of these relics.

The ritual also provides for the pouring of "The Corn of Nourishment," the "Wine of Refreshment" and the "Oil of Joy and Gladness," ancient symbols of the fraternity, upon a symbolic memorial which will be placed on the dedication platform. These will be contained in one gold and two silver pitchers. These pitchers were made especially for this occasion by Olaf Saugstadt, of Arcturus, on the Potomac between Alexandria and Mount Vernon, as his contribution to the dedication, and have been presented by him to Dr. Barrett, dedication chairman. They are about a foot high, of the same general design, but each differing slightly from the other. The gold pitcher will contain the corn and the silver the wine and oil.

This symbolic memorial is a replica of the memorial itself, and has been constructed, to exact scale, by inmates of the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Va. It will be carried in the Masonic procession from the auditorium of the memorial by four past grand masters of Masonry in Virginia—William Lee Davis, of Portsmouth; John T. Cochran, of The Plains; Dr. Frank T. McFaden, of Winchester, and Dr. A. M. Showalter, of Christiansburg.

At the time of the dedication, Charles H. Callahan, acting grand master of Virginia, and Harry K. Green, of Clarendon, will conduct the exercises, dedicating the memorial to God, to Virtue, to Universal Benevolence and to the memory of George Washington.

Description of Trowel.

The little trowel which will play a part in the dedication ceremonies is perhaps one of the most interesting of the many Washington relics in the possession of his old lodge. The blade is of silver, with an ivory handle, and was made by John Dufey, a silversmith of Alexandria, who married the daughter of Gen. Washington's landscape gardener. So highly is it valued, and so jealously guarded, that it is kept in a steel safe in the old lodgeroom, and may not be removed from the room unless accompanied by three officers of the lodge. It has been used on many important occasions in addition to the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol, among them being the laying of the corner stone of the new Masonic Temple in Washington by President Roosevelt, and the grand master of the District of Columbia; the corner stone of the Scottish Rite Cathedral in Washington, by the grand master of the District of Columbia and the supreme grand commander of the Southern jurisdiction of Scottish Rite Masonry; the new Masonic Temple in Detroit, in September, 1922, by the grand master of Michigan and Secretary Denby, representing President Harding, who was unable to attend, and on November 1, 1923, in laying the corner stone of the George Washington Memorial when it was used not only by the acting grand master of Virginia, Charles H. Callahan, but by President Coolidge, Chief Justice William H. Taft, who, while President, on several occasions visited Alexandria-Washington Lodge, and the various grand masters or their representatives of the grand jurisdictions of the United States.

The reason for erecting a National Memorial to George Washington, the Mason, is apparent to every student of Masonic history, if not to the layman. Gen. Washington was the most revered Mason of his day. Masonic institutions were dedicated to him; lodges were named in his honor, and wherever he journeyed, whether in private or public capacity, the most distinguished consideration was accorded him by leaders of the fraternity, acting in their capacity as such and by the grand and subordinate lodges from the Canadian border to the Southern limits of the Nation. Upon his death not only did the Masonic bodies of the United States drape their temples and rooms in mourning, but those in Canada and even England also "put this symbol of grief" as a token of respect for their most illustrious brother.

Washington was selected as the first grand master of Masons in Virginia upon the organization of that grand lodge in 1778, but declined "the important office," because of "duties in the tented field," and when the subject of organizing a general grand lodge was proposed during the Revolution, his was the only name considered for the exalted station of general grand master. It is significant that after he had declined this office, no further steps toward organizing a general grand lodge have ever been taken, or at least have ever come to fruition.

Mementoes Given Lodge.

Immediately after Washington's death, numerous mementoes of inestimable value were presented to Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, originally "Alexandria Lodge No. 22," over which he presided as the first worshipful master, the name being changed shortly after his death by adding his name. These mementoes came from Gen. Washington's relatives and friends, as testimonials of their friendship for the institution he loved, and within a few years the lodgeroom became a veritable storehouse of these interesting souvenirs. So numerous were these gifts and so much space did they occupy that, as early as 1811, the lodge was seriously embarrassed for lack of space in which to confer its degrees, and consequently, on December 29, 1911, a movement was started which resulted in the establishment of a museum to be attached to the lodge. The city council of Alexandria, in 1818, set aside the entire third floor of one wing of the city hall, then just erected, for the purpose of this museum. It was in this building that the lodge received the Marquis de la Fayette in 1825, and many other distinguished visitors in the antebellum days.

The dark days of the war between the States proved the most trying in the history of Alexandria-Washington Lodge. Many of its members were called to the front in active service, and those who remained were embarrassed by military restrictions when Alexandria was occupied by Union troops, but a vigilant guardian of the lodge and its treasures was present. William H. Lambert, elected master of the lodge in 1860, served to June 24, 1866, and to him, probably more than to any other member, is due the gratitude of Alexandria-Washington Lodge for the preservation, intact, of its treasures, including the charter which contains the name of Washington as master.

The occupation of Alexandria by the Union soldiers in 1861 at first appeared to be a serious menace to the safety of these priceless possessions. Demands were made by the worshipful master for admission to the temple, and when this was denied, violence was threatened both to him and to the lodge. He appealed to the provost marshal, who, though not a Mason, was an officer and a gentleman, and he promptly placed a guard at the door and saved the cherished mementoes which are now to be seen in the sanctum of the present temple. Some of the more vindictive spirits had already gained admittance to the temple and were committing acts of vandalism when the guard arrived. They were quickly subdued and driven from the premises, and afterward, during the whole four years of the Civil War, not a picture was removed from the walls, nor a hand raised except in defense, by the Union troops occupying the city.

Lodge Catches Fire.

On May 19, 1871, disaster as serious as it was unexpected befell the lodge, when the cry arose that the city hall and Masonic lodge were burning down. Brother Lambert was among the first to arrive on the scene, and he led the forces at hand to rescue the treasures of the lodge from the threatening fire. In spite of their efforts a large number of the relics were burned or stolen. Among these missing relics were flags of the Revolution, including the banner of Washington's Life Guard, which have since been recovered. After the erection of the present building in 1872, on the site of the old, the relics saved from the fire were deposited in the new temple, where they can be seen at this time, the tiler of the lodge being on duty during the day.

The movement to erect a memorial to Washington, the Mason, which has finally born fruit, was largely the result of a prevailing condition, and not entirely original with Alexandria Masons. While the subject of a fireproof structure for the preservation of the Washington relics owned by Alexandria-Washington Lodge had been frequently discussed the effort was entirely local, confined to local interests, and had none of the national features of the present plan. The completion of an electric railway between Washington and Mount Vernon, the home and tomb of Washington, in 1906, and later the construction of a concrete highway between these points, through Alexandria, placed Alexandria in the immediate line of travel of the human horde which flows in ever-increasing volume to the sacred shrine on the Potomac, 8 miles below.

A very large proportion of the visitors to Mount Vernon are Masons or members of their families, in consequence of which it was not long after the establishment of convenient communication that the demands upon the officers and members of the lodge to gain admittance became so insistent and numerous that it was decided to open its doors and place a custodian in charge. During the first year the lodge was open to the public (1907) there were 600 visitors, while in 1922 more than 40,000 passed through its doors.

Many influential members of the craft, who visited the lodgeroom while on their way to Mount Vernon, became interested in the preservation of the relics and, observing the lack of fire protection for these mementoes, which were considered of inestimable value to the craft at large, they invariably expressed the opinion that Alexandria was the logical site for a national memorial to Washington, the Mason. "A place," these sojourners said, "so inseparably connected with him as a man and a Mason should be made the mecca of the American fraternity." Most of these suggestions, however, were made with a view to protecting the possessions of the lodge, and not with any idea of forming a national Masonic association or society.

Local Interests Waived.

After much delay, the subject being taken up in the lodge and fully discussed, it was finally determined that no movement which had the sole object of procuring better quarters for the lodge or greater security for its possessions, at the expense of others, was consistent with true Masonic principles. It was felt that Washington Lodge, owning its temple and free from debt, could not consistently ask the Masons of the United States to contribute to the erection of a more luxurious home for their comfort, regardless of the objects in view.

So this was the condition when, in the latter part of 1907, Charles H. Callahan, whose name has since been inseparably connected with every phase of the memorial project, offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to fully investigate the subject. Dr. Thomas B. Cochran was then master of the lodge and, owing to the approaching close of his term of office, he asked that the resolution be deferred and again presented to his successor. Early in the following year J. Edward Shinn, the new master, received Mr. Callahan's resolution and appointed a committee composed of Leopold Ruben, chairman; Dr. William M. Smith, Judge J. K. M. Norton, Edward H. Kemper, Judge Louis C. Barley, Samuel W. Pitts, Robert W. Fuller, Robert W. Arnold, Alfred G. Unler, Charles H. Callahan and J. E. Shinn, to be known as the local Memorial Temple committee. Mr. Callahan was chosen secretary, and his daughter, Miss Jessica Callahan, became his temporary assistant, to be later succeeded by Miss Elsie Hamilton. Suitable resolutions were adopted by the lodge giving the committee full power in the premises, and Joseph W. Eggleston, grand master of Masons in Virginia, was requested to approve the movement and to assist in the organization of a National Memorial Association.

Grand Master Eggleston, in the fall of 1909, extended the first invitation to the several grand masters of the United States to assemble in Alexandria on February 22, 1910, for the purpose of organizing a National Masonic Memorial Association with the object of erecting a memorial to Washington, the Mason. This letter was followed by an appeal from the lodge, and as a result eighteen representatives of grand lodges assembled in the Masonic Temple at Alexandria on February 22, 1910, with William B. McChesney, who had succeeded Joseph W. Eggleston as grand master, presiding, and began serious consideration of the subject in question.

Grand Master McChesney appointed as a committee on permanent organization James D. Richardson, supreme grand commander of the Southern Jurisdiction of Scottish Rite Masons; Gen. Thomas J. Shrock, grand master of Maryland; Delmar H. Darrah, deputy grand master of Illinois; Henry Banks, grand master of Georgia; Henry H. Ross, past grand master of Vermont; Thomas J. Day, past grand master of Delaware; John H. Cowles, grand master of Kentucky; James R. Johnson, grand master of South Carolina, and William H. Nichols, representative of the grand master of Texas.

Building Resolution Approved.

After several hours of deliberation this committee reported a resolution approving and indorsing the proposed erection of a Masonic temple as a memorial to George Washington, under the auspices of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, No. 22, pledging their earnest support to the undertaking and requesting all grand masters to call the project to the attention of the lodges within their several jurisdictions and urge upon them their cooperation and assistance. The date for the forming of a permanent organization was set for February 22, 1911.

On Washington's Birthday, 1911, the representatives met, adopted a preliminary constitution and elected these officers of the permanent association: Gen. Thomas J. Shryock, grand master of Masons in Maryland, president; James M. Lamberton, of Pennsylvania, first vice president; James R. Johnson, of South Carolina, second vice president; Albert B. McGaffey, of Colorado, third vice president; Lawrence H. Lee, of Alabama, secretary; Dana J. Flanders, of Massachusetts, treasurer; the Rev. William J. Morton, D. D., of Alexandria, chaplain; Henry K. Field and J. Edward Shinn, of Alexandria, stewards; George W. Zachary, tiler and custodian of Alexandria-Washington Lodge, sentinel.

The ceremonies closed with a banquet in celebration of Washington's Birthday by Alexandria-Washington Lodge, with members of the association as guests, and it was in an address at this function that President William H. Taft gave his first indorsement to the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association.

In the death, in 1917, of Gen. Shryock, the first president, the association suffered a serious loss. Col. Louis A. Watres, past grand master of Pennsylvania, was chosen as his successor and, with a long record of successful achievements in public and fraternal circles, he has, by his example and precept, revitalized the whole project, injecting into the work the spirit of his own optimism and energy. The movement under his direction has been reduced to an organized system for enlightening the masses of the fraternity in the objects and nature of the association and collecting the necessary funds.

Objects of Association.

At the organization meeting of February 22, 1911, the objects of the association were stated to be: "First, the collection of a fund to erect and maintain a suitable Masonic memorial to George Washington in the form of a temple; second, to provide a place where the several grand jurisdictions, members of the association, may perpetuate in imperishable form the memory and achievements of the men whose distinguished services, zealous attachment and unswerving fidelity to the principles of our institution merit particular and lasting reward; to create, foster and diffuse a more intimate fraternal spirit, understanding and intercourse between the several grand jurisdictions and sovereign grand bodies, throughout the United States and her insular possessions, members of this association; to cherish, maintain and extend the wholesome influence and example of our illustrious dead."

The cost of the proposed temple, with its furnishings, was placed at not to exceed $4,000,000, with an endowment fund of $1,000,000, and under the rules adopted by the association, no obligations were to be incurred and no contracts entered into until the money for their discharge was actually in the hands of the treasurer. In carrying out this plan the association, at its meeting on February 22 of each year, has, after ascertaining the amount of the funds on hand, appropriated money to carry on the work during the ensuing twelve months. It was also determined, since the memorial was intended to approach as nearly as possible to absolute permanency, that the work would only be prosecuted in favorable weather, being discontinued during the cold winter months when freezing would endanger the permanency of the construction.

As to the question of the location of the Memorial Temple, it was decided that there could be but one choice. Alexandria was the home town of Washington. From early youth to the time of his death he took an active part in the public affairs of the locality. There, with headquarters in the old City Tavern, which is still standing and which has recently been restored to its original condition, he recruited his first military command; there, in the Carlyle House, which also stands, he received his commission as a major on the staff of Gen. Braddock, of the British Army, and from there he set out, in April, 1755, on the march to the fatal field of Monongahela.

Leading Alexandria Citizen.

Washington represented the Town of Alexandria in the Virginia House of Burgesses from 1765 to the beginning of the Revolution; he was a member of the town council and its magisterial court; the first master of its Masonic lodge, which, since his death, has borne his name. He founded the town's first free school and its fire department, presenting to the latter a hand engine, a replica of which is on exhibition in Alexandria, and the original, now the property of the City of Baltimore, will be shown in Alexandria on the day of the dedication of the Memorial. He surveyed the streets of Alexandria and maintained an office in the town for the transaction of local business. He was a stockholder in its first bank and, upon his death, endowed the school he had established with his stock in the bank. He was Alexandria's most prominent citizen and its benefactor.

At Gadsby's Tavern he and his family joined in the first public celebration of his birthday. From the steps of the same old hostelry, in November, 1799, he held his last military review and issued his last military command to the Alexandria Independent Blues.

Alexandria was his voting place and his market. Its physicians, who were his personal friends, ministered to his dying wants; its Freemasons arranged the details of his funeral and performed the Masonic ceremony at his grave, while its clergy performed the religious rites; its citizens formed his funeral cortege and its soldiers paid the sole military tribute at the bier of their departed chieftain. After his death his will was recorded in the courts of Alexandria. There resided his lifelong friends and neighbors, of whom he wrote so frequently and affectionately in his diary, and the whole community for miles around is a veritable museum of history redolent with the spirit and abounding in the traditions of Washington and his compatriots.

Shooters Hill, in the western section of Alexandria, finally selected as the site for the Memorial, was the property of Washington, forming a part of what was known as Arlington Ridge, extending from Arlington Mansion to Alexandria and the Potomac River on the east. But for his intervention, this would now be occupied by the Capital of the United States. This commanding eminence was the selection of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison and favored by John Adams as the appropriate site for the Capital, but their choice was vetoed by Washington, lest it might be thought that he chose this location for the advancement of his private interests. What more appropriate site could be selected than this, which overlooks the Potomac River, the Capital of the Nation he founded, the old city in whose affairs he took so intimate a part, the home where he spent his declining years and where he died, and his last resting place, known and revered the world over?

The Memorial site consists of approximately 36 acres of land, which has been acquired at a total cost of $55,000, most of it having been purchased from the City of Alexandria at a nominal consideraton. A conservative estimate places the present market value of this land at $350,000.

From the elevation upon which the Memorial stands the observer looks out upon a scene of exquisite beauty. In the northeast, spread out like a gorgeous panorama, is the City of Washington, with its stately public buildings, gilded domes and towering spires, stretching away over the hills and valleys of the District of Columbia and beyond into Maryland. On the undulating plain between the National Capital and the corporate limits of Alexandria are many suburban towns of modern type to embellish this angle of view.

From the foot of Shooters Hill to the river's edge, a mile away, is old Alexandria, still quaint and provincial, creating a distinct contrast to the contiguous suburban districts.

Beyond and to the east, forming a natural background, rise the imposing bluffs of Maryland, and through the intervening valley, from Washington City on the northeast to its bend at Fort Washington on the south, a distance of more than ten miles, lies the historic Potomac river, around which gathers romantic tradition and legends of three centuries.

Cameron Valley to South.

On the south, with the slopes of Temple Hill forming the northern limit, and extending far back in the thickly wooded country to the rear of the Memorial, is Cameron Valley, named for Thomas, sixth Lord Fairfax, Baron of Cameron, in Scotland. This wide ravine opens a charming inland vista in a westerly direction toward Bull Run battlefield, some 30 miles distant. To the west of the Memorial, its tower rising above the surrounding trees, a mile and a half distant, is the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, the oldest institution of its kind in America. Here Bishops Potter, Phillips Brooks, Randolph McKim, and a host of other distinguished prelates received their theological training.

At the foot of the hill and bordering the site to the south of the Memorial is the King's Highway, one of the oldest and most famous roads in America. This highway led from Jamestown and Williamsburg to Alexandria, which was its northern terminus in Virginia. Developed from an original Indian trail to an historic highway, it has witnessed the transition of western civilization from a little colony under John Smith to a continental nation of the greatest power and influence. Just across the highway, at the foot of the Memorial site, is Cameron, colonial home of Charles Broadwater, colleague of Washington in the House of Burgesses.

Ground was broken for the Memorial on June 5, 1922, and the work progressed steadily, though slowly, for more than a year before it was sufficiently advanced for the corner stone to be laid. Scarcely less in Masonic importance than the forthcoming dedication was this ceremony, which was conducted in the presence of many thousands of Masons, on November 1, 1921. There have been other ceremonials of preeminent importance, commanding widespread attention and interest, but it remained for the occasion on which the corner stone of the memorial to Washington as a Mason was laid to arouse a Nation-wide interest in the fraternity and to bring its representative men from the farthest ends of the American Republic. In a Masonic sense, there had been but one ceremony comparable, and that was the laying of the corner stone of the United States Capitol in 1793.

The grand lodge of Virginia was invited to perform the ceremony, and the invitation was promptly accepted. An Alexandria committee composed of J. E. W. Timberman, chairman; Samuel W. Pitts, vice chairman; Percy E. Clift, William A. Moore, Claude W. Fletcher, George E. Warfield, Charles E. Dare, Chester A. Gwinn and C. C. Batcheller was appointed to cooperate with the grand master of Virginia and the executive committee of the memorial association's board of directors. It was this local committee which arranged the program and supervised the details connected with and necessary for final success.

Callahan in Charge.

At its meeting in February, 1923, the memorial association was informed by Grand Master James H. Price that, because of the activity of Charles H. Callahan, then deputy grand master, he would assign to Mr. Callahan the honor of conducting the actual ceremony of laying the corner stone, and he later directed Mr. Callahan to make any arrangements for the occasion he desired.

Mr. Callahan proposed that invitations to take part should be extended to the grand master of all jurisdictions, and that reproductions of the Washington trowel to be used in the ceremony should be made for their use at the laying of the corner stone, these trowels to be retained by them as souvenirs of the occasion. Similar trowels were to be presented to the President of the United States, to the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court and to the officers and members of the board of directors of the Memorial Association. It was further agreed that each jurisdiction should be permitted to deposit some object or memorial in the receptacle to be placed within the corner stone. Three old lodges, Fredericksburg, No. 4, in which Washington was initiated in 1752; Alexandria-Washington Lodge, of which he was the first master, and Potomac, No. 5, of Washington, which had participated in the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol in 1793, were to act as escort of honor to the Grand Lodge of Virginia.

The parade which was held preceding the ceremonies was composed of six divisions and was about 4 miles in length. When the head of the sixth division arrived at the Memorial the procession halted and divided, columns facing inward and reversing order, the Grand Lodge of Virginia passed to the front, followed by the other grand lodges. The Grand Lodge of Virginia had just taken its place on the platform when the boom of artillery stationed to the west of the Memorial announced the arrival of President Coolidge and his party, to whom was rendered the presidential salute of 21 guns. Accompanying the President were Mrs. Coolidge and Chief Justice William Howard Taft and the committee appointed to escort them from Washington.

Guarded by Marines.

Forming a cordon around the temple to guard against any unforeseen contingency was a Marine guard brought from Quantico by order of Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, a spectator on the platform. On the steps leading to the platform was the President's special military guard, and immediately in front were massed more than a score of military and civilian bands of music, while on the crest of the hill to the north was stationed the battery of artillery from Fort Myer, the sharp crack of whose guns was echoed by the deeper boom of the great guns on the U. S. cruiser Richmond, lying in the Potomac more than a mile away. As their deep reverberations died away the noise blended into the rich strains of sacred music played by the massed bands, and when these in turn fell silent, the huge throng waited for the opening of the impressive ceremony.

The solemn and impressive ritual then proceeded according to the form of the Grand Lodge of Virginia officiating as acting grand master. A prayer by the grand chaplain was followed by the formal statement of the purposes of the Memorial Association in erecting the Memorial by its president, Col. Louis A. Watres, and a request by him to the acting grand master to lay the corner stone according to the ancient rites of Freemasonry.

A long list of articles to be placed in a box to be inclosed in the corner stone was read by the grand treasurer, these including a Bible, a flag, copies of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence and a great number of coins, plates, memorial trowels, pamphlets, books, pictures, medals, badges, &c. After the reading of the list and the singing of appropriate music by the choir, President Coolidge, accompanied by Chief Justice Taft, at the request of the acting grand master, advanced to the foundation stone and spread mortar upon it, using the trowel used by George Washington at the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol building in Washington 130 years before. The grand masters of the several grand jurisdictions, or their representatives, then advanced to the stone, one by one, headed by the two grand stewards, carrying white rods, and spread mortar over its resting place.

Ceremony of Laying Stone.

The acting grand master then directed the grand master to order the craftsmen to lower the stone. This was done in three motions: First, the stone was lowered a few inches, and held while the grand honors were given; then lowered again a few inches and the grand honors repeated. The grand officers then returned to their stations, the grand lodge was seated, and then followed the symbolic testing of the stone, in which the appropriate officers applied to it the level, the "emblem of equality, and its use to prove horizontals;" the plumb, "emblem of the rectitude of life, and its use to try perpendiculars," and the square, "to square our actions by the square of virtue, and to prove our work," and reported that the stone was "well formed, true and trusty, and accurately laid according to the principles of our art." It was then consecrated with the "corn of nourishment," the "wine of refreshment" and the "oil of joy and gladness," and the grand honors were again rendered. The acting grand master then received the working tools, and in turn delivered them to the architect, intrusting to him also the superintendence of the work of completing the building in due form. The officer representing the building authorities then received the working tools and pronounced the corner stone as "well and truly laid."

This concluded the formal ceremony of the corner stone laying. An address was delivered by Grand Master James H. Price, who concluded by presenting President Watres, of the Memorial Association, and he, in turn, presented the principal speaker of the day, Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington.

So ended the most notable day in the local history of Masonry, if not in that of the whole North American Brotherhood, for the ceremony had far greater significance than simply the laying of another corner stone. It had done more than any other one thing in living memory to emphasize the national unity of the order, and with respect to the memorial project itself it had been invaluable, for the corner stone of the structure was far from being the whole memorial. An immense amount of effort still remained to be put forth before the design could be realized in actual stone and the work of construction was destined to move deliberately, with many intervals of slow activity, but no one of the great throng that witnessed the ceremony left with any doubt in his heart that the project would be completed in due time. Each one carried back to his own particular group of Masonic brothers the assurance that the great memorial of which they had heard so much, and to which they had contributed of their means, was actually taking definite form and needed only the further loyal support of the membership of the order to bring it to completion.

WASHINGTON—THE MASON

TODAY, the Masons of America are celebrating the dedication of the beautiful Masonic Temple erected in sacred tribute to America's Greatest Mason, George Washington.

IT was fitting that this temple should be located in Alexandria, Virginia, for so long the "home town" of Washington. It was in Alexandria that Washington mingled with its citizens in civic, political, religious and fraternal affairs. The temple itself is erected on a hill that, in Washington's time, was seriously considered as a site for the Capitol of the Nation.

THE Virginia Public Service Company is proud that it is able to serve a territory so replete with history. Proud that it is able to provide electric service to more than 300 communities in the State and thereby make it possible for Virginians to enjoy all the manifold blessings of electricity not dreamed of in the days of Washington.

NATS NOW RATED 7-5 FAVORITES TO WIN PENNANT

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE gentry of the betting fraternity, who will be glad to quote you odds on anything from the Gulf Tide to the reincarnation have undergone a change of heart as far as the American League pennant race is concerned and, lo! the Washington Club has been installed the favorite at odds of 7 to 5.

Jack Doyle, the gentleman who is Broadway's biggest betting commissioner, specifically, views the chances of the Nats to win the pennant as better than any other club in the league and that goes for the Athletics, who were even money favorites a month ago, and the Yankees, who were 8-to-5 shots.

Mercenary as it may seem to link the fine old game of baseball to the betting ring, it is none the less a pleasing commentary for Washington fans who have seen the Nats establish themselves in the lead, and who are wondering, perhaps, if the team isn't playing so far over its head that a protracted slump and fall from grace is inevitable.

The quotation on the Nats has a particularly pleasing aspect inasmuch as the opinions of the betting gentry are as free from bias and home-town pride as a night in June. The gentlemen who are ready to back their opinions with the long green are keen baseball men with a circumspect view of all that has happened or is likely to happen in the pennant race.

The decline of the Athletics from an even money choice to a 2-to-1 shot is easily explainable as a result of their slow start, which finds them 7½ games behind the Nats. Seven and a half games would not amount to a great difference if the Athletics were the same mighty machine of 1931, but with the A's apparently crumbling, the Nats' margin assumes great importance.

In the case of the Yankees, who remain stationary at the 8-to-5 odds, they apparently are doing as well as expected, but remain as second choices only because of the fact that the Nats have displayed unexpected strength. The upward surge of the Nats from odds of 3 to 1 to 7 to 5 has been accomplished chiefly by their success against the two preseason favorites.

Washington's record thus far shows six games won out of eight with the Mackmen and three victories out of four games with the Yanks.

This department which last month was accused of being overly optimistic when it went on record that the Nats would be a serious factor in the pennant race, is not convinced that the Washington team does not belong exactly where it is situated—at the top of the league standings.

The Nats' position has been fairly earned. They tackled the two most feared rivals at the outset of the season and delivered knockout blows to both. The team has power, pitching and balance, the absence of the latter factor being an item that has contributed largely to the decline of the Athletics and which the Yankees fail to possess in the same degree that do the Nats.

There can be no belittling the Yankees despite the Nats' early margin. As long as Ruth and Gehrig are in health, the team will always be a threat, and McCarthy's pitching shows signs of taking an upward trend. But man for man, and pitching staff for pitching staff, the Yankees can show little, if any, superiority over the Nats.

Chief among the items that have transformed the Nats from a mere first division club into the favorite at this stage of the proceedings is the excellent pitching that Johnson's staff has provided the team from the outset. Crowder, Weaver, Fischer, Brown and Burke have dispelled Johnson's doubts as to the quality of his hurling corps.

The acquisition of Carl Reynolds has lent tremendously to the club's batting punch and that the team is closely pressing the Yankees for the team batting lead is a sound commentary on the Nats' new power.

And with the tightest infield in the league cutting off base hits in a manner approached by no other club, the pitchers' jobs have been made that much easier. Defensively, the Nats' outfield, too, concedes nothing to any rival outer trio, and when it comes to speed on the bases, gentlemen like Buddy Myer, Sammy West, Carl Reynolds, Ossie Bluege, Joe Cronin and Heinie Manush defy comparison in the makeup of any other single club.

These items constitute that muchly-desired "balance" which is the outstanding feature of the Washington club this season. It doesn't figure in the box score, but it's handy to have around.

Horton Smith Has Luck, But It Is Mostly Bad

Chicago, May 11 (A.P.).—Horton Smith of golf fame is still the victim of luck—all bad.

He was taken to a Chicago hospital today suffering with a nasal infection just as the soreness was disappearing from his wrist, which was broken last winter. Two years ago, his teeth became infected, later, the muscles of his back were infected, keeping him out of golf.

15,000 Watch Hamas Beat Loughran

Collegian Tries Hard to Duplicate K. O. of First Bout.

(Post Staff Correspondent).
Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Youthful Steve Hamas, three letter man at Penn State, met Tommy Loughran coming back along the fistic trail here tonight, and for the second time in five months scored a decision over the former light heavyweight champion.

But the crowd of 15,000 that filled Convention Hall to the roof loudly booed the decision, a 2 to 1 vote of the officials, which virtually meant the end of the career of a truly great boxer.

Hamas failed to duplicate his kayo triumph of last January and was forced, yes, pained, to travel the limit distance of ten rounds. Favored 7 to 5 in the prefight betting and regarded by some experts as capable of knocking out Tommy a second time, Hamas not only encountered stouter resistance than was anticipated of the Old Master, but came near having his lights put out in the tenth round.

Loughran Slugs In Final.

To everybody's amazement Loughran, who had done well to withstand his foe's wild charges, elected to slug it out in the final session when he apparently needed only to keep away behind the armor represented by his wonderful left jab in order to win the decision.

Tommy let loose his right to connect flush on Steve's jaw, the blow sending Hamas back two steps on his heels and inspiring frenzied cheers from the rabid Loughran fans. Again Tommy exploded his right, this time on Hamas' face, and within ten seconds Steve's left eye had swollen nearly shut.

In a last desperate effort to get over a kayo punch, Hamas launched a long right and missed by a country mile. As Tommy dodged, Hamas kept on and fell half way through the ropes.

Throughout the fight, the great left hand of Loughran stood off Hamas' bull-like rushes. Tommy showed surprising speed afoot and continually outmaneuvered his opponent.

Hamas Forces Fight.

However, Hamas, t was who forced the fight and this factor undoubtedly swayed the judgment of Referee Tom Riley and Judge Al Voice who voted in his favor. Judge Larry Coles voted for Loughran.

Loughran appeared hurt in only one round, the ninth, when Hamas planted a right hook on his jaw. Tommy's knees sagged and for a moment it looked as if he was on the way to dreamland. But he smartly caught hold of Steve's waist to gather a few seconds of rest to snap out of the fog.

Ralph Picucello, 198, of Brooklyn, knocked out James J. Taylor, 202, of League Island, in the second round of the six-round semifinal.

The three other six-round preliminaries to the Loughran-Hamas fight were: Sam Weiss, 176, Allentown, won a decision over Andy Mitchell, of Los Angeles, Calif. Mike Sullivan, 181, Atlantic City, N. J., won a decision over Rattle Kitchline, 174, Phillipsburg, N. J.; Sam Tribett, 185, Leiperville, Pa., knocked out Tony Dublinsky, 203, Burlington, N. J., in the first round of the curtain raiser.

Anzacs-Cubans Start Cup Play Tomorrow

The winner of the series will meet the winner of the United States-Mexico tie for the championship of the North American zone.

Marquard Calls Wagner Baseball's Best Hitter

Atlanta, May 11 (A.P.).—Asked who was the toughest batter he ever pitched to, Rube Marquard hesitated not a moment—Hans Wagner.

The veteran moundsman who was "up there" for 19 years with New York and Brooklyn, said he was never able to find a ball Wagner couldn't hit.

"I waved my outfielders back," he said, "pitched 'em low inside and hoped the ball would not land on the elevated tracks."

Marquard who in 1912 won 19 consecutive ball games in the National League, is coaching the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association this year, for Manager "Red" Barron.

'David Harum' Days At Horse Sales Gone

Kansas City, May 11 (A.P.).—The old days of doubtful methods and devices in horse trading are gone—so far as the better regulated sales are concerned.

Rules of the annual American royal saddle horse sale, held here recently, provided for examination of each animal in its stall and in the ring by veterinarians, and removal of saddles in the arena.

Referees pass on any cases of alleged misrepresentation.

Yanks' Rookie Shuts Out Browns

Johnny Allen Yields Only Five Hits in 3-0 Triumph.

His Triple Figures in 4th Straight Win of Yankees.

NEW YORK, May 11 (A.P.).—Johnny Allen, a rookie right-hander who was knocked out of the box the first time he faced major league batting, and who had only one good relief hurling job to show for his previous efforts, turned in a pitching masterpiece today to give the Yankees a 3-to-0 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The triumph, the fourth straight for New York, brought a clean sweep in the series, which was cut to two games. It also dropped the Browns to sixth place in the American League standing, a few points behind the idle Philadelphia Athletics.

Allen gave the Browns only five hits, three of which came in the last two innings and might have done better if he had received perfect support. Until two were out in the eighth a double by Ferrell and a single by Burns were the only St. Louis hits. Then Crosetti droped a foul by Jenkins and on his second try the pinch batsman came through with a hit. Schulte followed with another.

Allen's Own Triple Scores First Run.

For seven innings Sammy Gray gave Allen a real bottle, giving five hits, but in the fifth Allen smacked a triple to deep left center and scored the first run when Melillo fumbled Combs' grounder.

Chad Kimsey pitched the eighth for St. Louis and gave two more runs on Bill Dickey's double, which followed singles by Lary and Ruth and Chapman's roller, on which Lary was caught at the plate.

Leo Durocher Clouts Bartell as Reds Win

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 11 (A.P.).—Lombardi, Herman and Hafey of the Reds began swinging again today, backing "Red" Lucas in scoring a 4 to 1 victory over the Phillies.

Leo Durocher swung too, but without a bat, and Bartell of the Phils, and not a ball, was his target. Nipped in the eighth trying to steal second, he quarreled with Bartell and bowled the second baseman over. The flurry cost him his place in the game.

Lombardi had a place in scoring three Cincinnati runs. In the sixth he singled, Hafey doubled and Heath's single brought both home. In the seventh with two out his single after Herman's double put over another tally.

Bucky Harris Returns With New First Baseman

U. S. NETMEN DRILL IN SECRET

Davis Cup Hopes Are High for Mexican Match Friday.

NEW ORLEANS, May 11 (A.P.).—Optimism and confidence reigned in the camp tonight of the United States Davis Cup players as the week's training culminated in a secret practice today, from which came the announcement the squad had improved far beyond the fondest hopes.

Although a brief practice will be held tomorrow morning, the team already is considered in fine fettle for the semifinal matches in the American zone, which bring the team against the Mexican Davis Cup players, starting Friday.

The American nonplaying captain, Fitz Eugene Dixon, said John Van Ryn's game had improved by the acquisition of a new drive and the team now could boast of "four singles players."

Van Ryn, Shields Learn New Strokes.

Coach Mercer Beasley said the secret practice had been devoted to showing Van Ryn and Frank X Shields several new strokes, which they acquired readily.

The new strokes, one of which is a drive which has force and court depth coupled with accuracy, already had been passed on to Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison while they were playing here several weeks ago. Around the courts it is called "the new American drive."

The Mexican Team has been working hard to accustom itself to the bounce of the ball, which because of the air pressure of the sea level does not bound as high as in the altitude of Mexico City. They also have found a heaviness to the ball which requires that they stroke harder.

Ernesto Lopez, the nonplaying captain, worked his players through two practice sessions today and said he would have them out tomorrow for two light practices.

His doubles squad of Alfonsa Unda and Eduardo Mestre worked out against Ricardo Tapia, the team's singles star, and young Angel Roldan. Capt. Lopez said he had not decided whether Roldan would be used in the matches, since his experience is limited.

Fields Is Arrested; Hurt in Auto Crash

Highland, Ind., May 11 (A.P.).—Jackie Fields, welterweight boxing champion, was arrested today on a charge of ignoring a stop light after his automobile in which he was riding with his wife crashed into a small truck driven by Lester Smith, of Hobart, who was accompanied by Albert Tomlinson, of Gary.

Fields and his wife were cut, bruised and shaken, and Smith was also hurt. All were given medical treatment here.

The Fields were en route to Chicago from Louisville.

Johnson Must Fight To Pay Wage Claims

Los Angeles, May 11 (A.P.).—Jack Johnson, former heavyweight boxing champion, assured City Prosecutor Edward Kelly today that he hoped to pay pressing wage claims by an immediate return to the ring.

Kelly granted Johnson until June 11 to meet demands of former employes in Johnson's cafe here. The prosecutor indicated labor law complaints might be issued after that date.

"I have just obtained a permit from the State boxing commission to take part in exhibition matches," Johnson said. "Within a few weeks I hope to earn enough money in the ring to pay off all claims."

LEWIS BEATS ROEBUCK.

Montreal, May 11 (A.P.).—Ed (Strangler) Lewis, of Los Angeles, downed "Tiny" Roebuck, of Oklahoma, in straight falls to capture the feature event on tonight's mat program here.

Roebuck dived out of the ring to lose the first fall in 19:15, and Lewis made short work of the Oklahoman after the interval, tossing him in 2:12.

BOTTOMLEY TO STAY.

St. Louis, May 11 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals intend to keep "Sunny Jim" Bottomley, unless they are able to trade him for first-rate players.

This was the reply of Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Club, to a statement by Max Carey, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who said there was trade talk between the two teams involving Bottomley.

ROBINS BEAT HALLAHAN IN 12TH

Three Wild Pitches Costly to Cards in Overtime Game.

ST. LOUIS, May 11 (A.P.).—After pitching ten good innings and one shaky one that carried the game overtime in a 3-to-3 tie, Wild Bill Hallahan justified his nickname in the twelfth inning today with an outstanding burst of wildness that gave the Brooklyn Dodgers three runs and a 6-to-3 victory over the Cardinals.

Going into the twelfth, Hallahan had given only eight hits and had fanned a round dozen Brooklyn batsmen, but Frank O'Doul opened the final inning with a double and as he tried to "bear down" Hallahan made three wild pitches, equaling the major league record, walked a man intentionally and allowed three more hits.

Equals Record for Wild Pitches.

Three major league pitchers previously had made three wild pitches in an inning. They were Jacob Weimer, of the Cubs, in 1903; Charles Sullivan, of Detroit, in 1930, and Milton Gaston, of the Browns, in 1928.

Hallahan's first wild heave sent O'Doul down to third. Danny Taylor was passed and took second on another wild pitch. Then Tony Cuccinello beat out a hit and O'Doul came home with the winning run. Wright's single brought in the second tally of the inning and after Kelly's hit had filled the bases Hallahan again threw one high and wide and let Cuccinello come home.

WASHINGTON UPSETS ODDS, GAINING FAVOR OVER YANKS AND A'S

Johnson Still Holds Deep Respect for A's Power.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

FOR the second consecutive day the Nationals lost ground by idling, and the New York Yankees are now only two games behind them in the pennant race. Manager Walter Johnson and his charges were particularly anxious to stage yesterday's scheduled finale with the Indians, but rain called off hostilities.

One of these postponements will be played as part of a double-header when the Tribe next visits the Capital, Saturday, July 9, having been assigned, while the other will be delayed until Saturday, August 20, when the Clevelanders are here on their final swing through the East.

Fischer and Whitehill To Pitch.

Despite the rain, Skipper Johnson had all of his pitchers working out under the stands, and he is in the unusual position of having all of them at top form and ready to go. As the Tigers, whom Manager Bucky Harris has playing exceptional ball, are practically tied with the Indians for third place, the Nationals will have to put their best foot forward to take the edge in the three-game series.

Earl (Dapper Dan) Whitehill, the little southpaw who always has given the Nats trouble, likely will do the alien slabbing, with Carl Fischer, who was to have pitched against the Indians, due to get a shot at the Jungle Cats. As many of the Harrismen are left-hand hitters, Johnson believes that Fischer can give them a good battle. His present plans call for "General" Alvin Crowder to get the call tomorrow, with Monte Weaver hurling in the final of the set on Saturday.

Although the Philadelphia Athletics are far down in the race, being seven and one-half games behind the Nationals at this writing, Manager Johnson is one who still respects them. In a gabfest yesterday, he stated that, irrespective of what has happened so far in the race, he considers the Yankees and Mackmen as the two teams which his own team will have to beat out for the pennant.

Johnson Has Respect For A's.

"Everyone else seems to think that the A's are shot to pieces," he said, "but you can't tell me that a team with the pitchers and batters it has won't be heard from before the season is over. The A's simply have not gotten in their stride. Earnshaw and Grove are back to form and Walberg shows signs of pitching winning ball. And you know what those three can do when they get going.

"As to their punch, the Mackmen still have it and, take it from me, they'll be running over teams getting toward the top before long."

Discussing the Yankees, Johnson remarked that they showed last year that all they needed was better pitch-

New York Held at 8 to 5; Philadelphia Now 2 to 1.

Doyle, Broadway's Bookmaker, Fears High Losses.

NEW YORK, May 11 (U.P.).—Jack Doyle, veteran Broadway betting commissioner, announced changes in the major league betting quotations today and expressed fear that "layers" who covered preseason wagers may "take an awful beating" this year.

The new prices make the Chicago Cubs and Washington Nationals favorites to cop the pennants in the National and American Leagues, respectively.

Doyle's quotations follow:

NATIONAL LEAGUE—Chicago, 3 to 2; New York, 8 to 5; St. Louis, 2 to 1; field, 10 to 1.

AMERICAN LEAGUE—Washington, 7 to 5; New York, 8 to 5; Philadelphia, 2 to 1; field, 10 to 1.

In his preseason quotations, Doyle had picked the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Athletics to repeat for the pennants. He had selected New York and Chicago second and third in the National and New York and Washington second and third in the American circuit.

Had Made Cards and A's Favorites.

This elderly, dark chap with the iron-gray hair, who happens to be the largest individual baseball and fight layer in the country, admitted his early selections seemed "very unfortunate because the favorites are dying on my hands and I am almost positive now that neither the Cards nor the A's can win."

Doyle sat in his billiard parlor, nervously flicking ashes from a cigarette, and said he was almost ready to send out for a large order of nice black crepe.

"Unfortunately," he mourned, "only a few bet on the favorites this season, but an army marched in to back the others. Washington supported the Nats heavily at 3 to 1, and Chicago showed great municipal pride by backing the Cubs at the same odds.

Most Bets Made On Long Shots.

"And the largest number of bets in years came through on the long shots. Take Cincinnati, for example. If the Reds finish third, I won't be able to have chicken for five years because I covered plenty of 200-to-1 shots against their showing. And I covered 1,000-to-1 chances against their coming first. They can't accomplish this miracle, but if they should——"

Doyle said most of the other layers around the country were beginning to spend restless nights like himself.

Concerning the amount of baseball betting this season, he estimated that little more than $1,000,000 had been wagered with the four important layers east of the Mississippi. In normal times these channels handle over $5,000,000 by this time.

"Although the amounts are smaller," he continued, "the number of bettors is larger than ever before. The

Cantonwine Is Favorite To Throw Szabo Tonight

SANDOR SZABO, the colorful trial horse of Eastern rassling, will make another appearance at the Washington Auditorium tonight, meeting Howard Cantonwine, who is coming along rapidly in the favor of ring moguls and patrols alike.

Szabo is the possessor of a much greater reputation than Cantonwine, but, nevertheless, is the underdog tonight. Cantonwine only recently has come East and into the Curley-White-Mondt-Pfeffer fold. He has yet to lose a match in Washington, and, so far as the incomplete past-performance sheet goes, has yet to meet defeat since leaving the West.

Klay to Take On Romano.

Fritz Kley matches his inhuman gyrations with Mike Romano in the semiwindup. Kley does most everything in the ring but rassle. He has beaten many good men. It is next to impossible to secure a real hold on the loose-jointed German, since he can ooze out of the most trying knots by a few patented Houdini-like jerks. Romano should get dumped.

George Calza, held by many to be the strongest man in the Curley crowd, meets Frank Speer, who has something of a football tackle. Calza's best performance was a victory he scored several months ago over Rudy Dusek.

Doc Wilson, not the least bit less popular, even though soundly trounced by Jim McMillen last week, meets George McLeod in another match. The card is likely to open with a return engagement between George Hagen and Alex Aberg. Hagen won the match last week, but Aberg objected about something or other. If Aberg wins tonight, it is feared that they will be matched again.

Ladies with escors are free tonight.

MICROPHONE, PREAKNESS HOPE, SCORES IN PIMLICO MUD

8-1 Shot Wins Handicap by A Head

Outstays Happy Scot in Stretch; Tred Avon Third.

Syriac, at Odds On, Wins Fourth as 2 Entries Fall.

By WALTER HAIGHT
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 11.—Microphone, with skinny Jimmy Smith in the saddle, today proved the best at the weights assigned for Class A of the Pimlico Graded Handicap, defeating Happy Scot, Con Amore, Tred Avon and other speedsters whose owners sent them after the $1,500 purse over the sprint distance.

Unable to catch the flying son of Flying Ebony and Broadcast at the finish was Happy Scot, Admiral Cary T. Grayson's colorbearer with Portden, an outsider, third.

Microphone Gets Worst Of Breaks.

Microphone did not get all the best of the break, beginning in the second flight behind a swift pace set by Senado, Con Amore and Happy Scot. But there was soon open evidence that Microphone was much in the race. He sifted through the field with ease just before the far turn and drew away to a three-length advantage. At the stretch turn, Happy Scott moved up to take a hand in the battle, all but wresting the lead from Microphone. But Smith went to the whip and the ultimate winner drew away to take the chief honors by a length margin.

The smallest crowd of the meeting braved miserable weather with the three divisions of the graded handicap as the magnets. There was a tip for every rain drop, and the figures on the odds board flickered before every race.

Daisaburo, a little-regarded Preakness candidate heretofore, came through with a smashing mud race in the sixth to defeat Barcelona Pete and other crack 3-year-olds. He not only showed a neat turn of speed in the sloppy going, but overcame a bumping in the stretch to draw away. Barcelona Pete was second, with Pending third. Pennywise, regarded as a Preakness starter, was fourth. Daisaburo ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:49 3-5, considered creditable time under the circumstances.

Iridescent was backed into favoritism and walked out on the slippery turf to make a show of the steeplechase field in the opening contest. Iridescent went to the front soon after the start, drew away to a good lead, and on the final swing left his field far behind. His backers' only worry was whether or not he would fall. McGovern took the St. Germans gelding over the last jump carefully and the race was over.

Battle for Third Feature Steeplechase.

Willingdon had a wide margin for second honors. The only battle was for third, with Daniel Soot, lightly weighted long shot, nosing out Huon Joy. Night Retreat was the only one not to finish, losing his rider at the last jump.

Madame Snob, a cute little filly with a lot of early foot in the mud, was hustled home ahead of the juveniles in the second race by Danny Meade. The filly had an advantage of several lengths at some stages, but had to be driven hard at the finish to stall off the rushes of Town Square and Singing Heart, the latter a field horse. Madame Snob took the decision by a neck, with Town Square second by a half length.

Flying Ebony's sons made it two victories for the day when Syriac, which closed an even-money favorite, won from Mud and Dunfern. The race was marred by a fall at the far turn. The Tout again being the cause of the trouble. This one went down, making Wolf Run lose Eddie Smith. Neither he nor Al Snider, The Tout's rider, was hurt. Both walked back to the judges' stand after some stable boys dug the mud out of their eyes.

Mexico and Elston were the winning combination in Class B of the Graded Handicap. Porgie was second and Trajectory third. Mexico laid behind the pace set by Kudos and took the lead on the far turn to win in breezing style.

Scholastic Golfers, Netmen in "Festival"

High school tennis and golf players are toeing the mark for Saturday's "Festival of Youth," which incorporates a tennis and golf tournament within its far-flung fold of activities.

Two miniature tennis tournaments will be run off during the afternoon, abbreviated matches in the early rounds making this possible. One of these is for senior boy players and the other for junior boys. There will be sixteen in each class. Among the boys entered are Anthony Latona, Western; Kent Boyle, Friends; Fred Scheele, St. John's; John Yeomans, Central; Kendall, Devitt; Allen, Georgetown Prep; Walker, Eastern, and other high school, prep school and playground stars.

Efforts are being made to pick a mixed team of prep school golfers to play a mixed team of high school linksmen. Play will be at West Potomac.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRIDESCENT, $4.80, $3.30, $2.90; WILLINGDON, $4.60, $3.90; DANIEL SOOT, $11.05.

IRIDESCENT, going into command after the second fence, fenced cleverly at all of his fences, opened up a long lead after the first mile and held away thereafter. He was under strong reserve at the end. WILLINGDON, in closest attendance of the winner throughout, easily held the others safe. DANIEL SOOT, rated for the first mile, closed gamely in the final stages. HUON JOY was unable to threaten the leaders at any stage. QUEEN'S PAL was always outrun. LOCHSHEE was under strong urging throughout, but was not good enough. NIGHT RETREAT tired after the first mile and lost his rider at the final jump.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. The Mackenzie Stable's 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:31½. Off at 2:33. Winner, J. B. Belk's b. f. (2), by Snob II—Madame Curie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:49 3-5, 0:56 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MADAME SNOB, $20.00, $7.50, $4.30; TOWN SQUARE, $4.20, $2.90; SINGING HEART (field), $3.50.

MADAME SNOB, away quickly and displaying good speed in the footing, drew clear when moving into the home stretch, but had to be placed to punishment to stall off TOWN SQUARE. Latter, prominent from the start, swung to the outside of the winner and closed stoutly in the final furlong. SINGING HEART, close up in the early stages, continued determinedly for the final drive. ALL ABLAZE showed a good effort when securing racing room in the final stages. KELTWICK broke slowly, was rushed hard to reach a forward position, but had too much taken out of him and he tired. ARCHWOOD lost ground all the way. ROYAL DURBAR did not fancy the going.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Pimlico Graded Handicap (Class A). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01½. Off at 3:02. Winner, Sage Stable's b. c. (3), by Flying Ebony—Broadcast. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MICROPHONE, $18.20, $5.70, $4.40; HAPPY SCOT, $3.80, $2.90; PORTDEN, $7.40.

MICROPHONE reached contention with high speed when midway of the back stretch, sprinted into a clear lead rounding the turn and, saving ground during the stretch run, responded gamely to withstand HAPPY SCOT. Latter, rated in close pursuit of the leaders, came through a narrow opening next the inner rail when entering the home stretch, made a stout effort nearing the final furlong pole, but weakened approaching the finish. PORTDEN, slow to get going, circled his field and closed full of run. TRED AVON closed with good courage in the final half mile. CON AMORE and SENADO were used up forcing the early pace.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:30½. Winner, F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SYRIAC, $3.90, $3.00, $2.50; MUD, $3.80, $2.60; DUNFERN, $3.20.

SYRIAC, going in improved fashion and kept close up with the early pace, closed stoutly when put to a drive and, wearing MUD down, was slowly drawing clear at the end. MUD, taken under steadying restraint in the first seven furlongs, responded when called on, but was unable to meet the winner's rush. DUNFERN improved his position on the outside early, saved ground during the stretch run, but was held safe. DADDY NELSON was always outrun. SINGLE STEP could never reach contention.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Pimlico Graded Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:03. Winner, S. W. Labrot's b. or br. c. (3), by Eternal—Antipodes. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $200. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MEXICO, $6.70, $3.20, $2.80; PORGIE, $3.10, $2.80; TRAJECTORY, $4.40.

MEXICO, going into command when leaving the back stretch, was steadied along until straightened into the home stretch and had enough in reserve to withstand PORGIE. Latter, kept on the outside of the leaders from the start, closed gamely in the final test. TRAJECTORY, saving ground the while in trip, showed a good effort. BENISH WAY, slower than usual when the break came, was rushed up on the inside in the opening furlong, but weakened fast after a half mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:30½. Winner, L. E. Keiffer's blk. c. (3), by Rustic—Ilaus. Trained by H. Rites. Value to winner, $900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 3-5, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAISABURO, $30.70, $9.80, $4.40; BARCELONA PETE, $3.90, $2.70; PENDING, $2.90.

DAISABURO, sluggish in reaching his best stride, gained steadily when kept on the outside, reached contention midway of the far turn, was bumped by BARCELONA PETE when nearing the final furlong pole, but came determinedly and was going away at the end. BARCELONA PETE, hurried to the front, was rated while saving ground, was forced out and bumped the winner when moving into the home stretch, but was unable to keep pace. PENDING, well placed in the early stages, was held safe in the final drive. PENNYWISE was hard ridden all the way and had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Pimlico Graded Handicap (Class C). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:05½. CLOTHESLINE, hurried into a short lead, saved ground while stalling off keen contention from CLEAR KNIGHT, responded willingly when placed to punishment and drew out steadily inside the final furlong. CLEAR KNIGHT, a stout factor for the first five furlongs, weakened during the stretch run after being bothered by the riderless TIME ENOUGH. ROSEMARIE B., away slowly, improved her position on the outside to finish stoutly. LADY GENERAL met with slight interference when leaving the back stretch. LAMPOON raced well placed and had no excuses.

ON THE SIDELINES

by BRIAN BELL

SOME good advice was given by Jess Harper, director of athletics at Notre Dame, when he spoke at a luncheon in Los Angeles given in his honor by the University of Southern California.

The man who was Knute Rockne's coach urged his hearers to remember that "football is only a game" and forget all about it as soon as it is played.

"I think," said he "football should be played on the field and as soon as a game is over it should be a closed issue. There should be no allbis, explanations, or other aftermath.

"Win or lose, we'll live just as long, for football is only a game, after all. The game isn't perfect by any means, but its greatest evil is the alibi of the well-meaning alumnus or over-enthusiastic coach."

SAVOLDI "INSIDE STUFF."

The speaker also suggested that one should never believe anything heard about another institution unless it is favorable. He recalled that a Notre Dame man once heard two men talking football on a train and was amazed at one statement made flat-footedly without qualification.

One of the travelers made the assertion that Joe Savoldi, the great Notre Dame back, was brought to the South Bend institution direct from Italy, and as he could not speak English, Frank Carideo had to play quarter back so Savoldi could understand the signals.

Harper paid high tribute to Army, Notre Dame's traditional rival. He recalled that the two institutions have been playing for 18 years and not once in that long series has there been a game played over in discussions after the contest had ended on the field.

"In my opinion," he said, "we have no higher type of sportsmanship in this country today than that exemplified by the Army."

"A good coach," he said, "keeps his mouth shut and lets his deeds speak for themselves."

STARS STILL PUPILS.

Ambitious golfers who can not be bothered by practice may take a tip from two of the best, if not the best players in California. George Von Elm may be rated just about No. 1 among the men and Mrs. L. D. Cheney, the former Leona Pressler, is not far from the leading position among the women.

Both Von Elm and Mrs. Cheney have been taking four lessons a week for months. The plan seems to be bearing fruit, as both are hitting the ball straight and far.

If players as good as Mrs. Cheney and Von Elm need four lessons a week, there are not enough days available for the great rank and file.

BRITISH GAMBLE.

British golf authorities need no advice in making up a Walker Cup Team to play Francis Ouimet and his fellow Americans this summer, but at a great distance they seem to have done well by introducing new blood into the classic competition.

Great Britain has sent some of its greatest stars against teams from the United States with only indifferent success, and it seems fair enough to give the young fellows a chance. The British lion may have a chance to roar after the next matches, for Robert T. Jones, jr., will be there only as a spectator. This will be a big help to the visitors.

FIFTY CANDIDATES OUT.

Freddy Meyers, new manager of the Greensboro club, of the Piedmont League, has 50 candidates from which to recruit a team. Most of them were signed for Meyers by the St Louis farm system, of which Greensboro is a member.

Army Wins, 5-4, Although Given Big Scare in Final.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 11 (A.P.).—Army's baseball team defeated Washington and Lee this afternoon by a score of 5 to 4. With the score 5-to-1 against them, the Generals staged a ninth inning rally, scoring three runs. Fitzgerald got in on Schorr's error, Wilson hit to center and then Cremin knocked a home run.

Coughlin, Cadet pitcher, then tightened up, fanning Burke, who was pinch-hitting for Cross. Cook flied out to center and Mattox struck out.

Methven Knocked Out In Fourth.

Methven, who started the game for the visitors, was taken out of the box at the end of the fourth inning. After walking Brown and Lewis, Fuqua, Army's strongest batter, hit to center, scoring them both and taking second on the throw in. Daniel sacrificed him to third. Schorr hit safely scoring Fuqua. Coughlin fanned and O'Neill made the Army's third hit in this inning, sending Schorr home. Cook went in the box in the fifth and held the Cadets scoreless, giving them two scattered hits.

14TH C CLUB MEET SETS RECORD

Entries for Games on May 21 Draw 30 Schools.

THE fourteenth annual Central "C" Club track meet, to be held May 21 at Central Stadium, is expected to draw the entries of more than 30 schools and 500 individual athletes. Last year's record of 22 schools entered has already been surpassed.

Two new events have been added to the standard program and track and field endeavors. They are two relays, one of them a one-fourth mile event, wherein each match runs 110 yards, and the other a sprint medley, in which the first two men run 220 yards, the next 440 and the next 880. This latter event has long been a feature of the Penn Relays.

Lambda Sigma Fraternity has put up a cup for the one-fourth mile relay winner. A George Washington Bicentennial award will go to the winner of the Spring medley.

Besides the local schools, where rivalry is particularly keen this year, the meet has attracted such out of town institutions as Forest Park, Gilman and Baltimore Poly, of Baltimore; Tome, Fort Union, Staunton, Charlotte Hall, Episcopal, Central (N. C.) High, Asheville (N. C.) High and Delmar (Dela.) High.

County Nines to Play Big Games Tomorrow

Games tomorrow afternoon in the Prince Georges County scholastic baseball championship series are expected to go far toward deciding the title.

In the most important clash Hyattsville High and Maryland Park High will face at Maryland Park. The latter nine now is tied with Mount Rainier High for the lead in the upper section of the county at three wins against one defeat. Hyattsville has lost two games and won one, and another defeat will eliminate it from the series.

Mount Rainier is to meet Laurel at Laurel in another upper section contest.

In the lower group Upper Marlboro and Brandywine will come to grips at Upper Marlboro, while Baden and Oxon Hill will face at Oxon Hill. Upper Marlboro is the team favored to take the championship in this group.

A play-off between section winners is to be arranged at a later date.

14 Capital City League Games Scheduled Sunday

Miller Furniture Will Open With Dor-A on Saturday.

THE Capital City League will officially inaugurate its season Saturday at 2 p. m. on the West Ellipse diamond, when the Miller Furniture and Dor-A Barbecue Teams, of the senior division, clash in a game included in the Festival of Youth Program. Col. Hjalmar Ericson, president of the league, will throw out the first ball sending the teams into action. The remainder of the teams will not play their opening games until the following day, when fourteen games are to be played.

No Outstanding Game On Fine Card.

It is impossible to select any one game as outstanding on the day's card. Leading contenders for the city championships are scheduled in all divisions. Favorites, underdogs and dark horses will be striving to get away from the barrier in the right stride.

Court Referee Plans Count in Thousands

Lawrence, Kans., May 11 (A.P.). "Thousand and one, 1,002, 1,003," and so on up to "1,010."

That's the way basket ball officials will count off the 10 seconds allotted the team in possession of the ball to get down into its own offensive half of the court under the new rules.

Failure to cross the center line within 10 seconds costs the team possession of the ball, which is awarded to the opposition out of bounds.

Dr. F. C. (Phog) Allen, University of Kansas basket ball coach, says the "thousand-and" counts, repeated in the artilleryman's cadence, are best for approximating the elapse of a second.

Players Divided by Way They Face Hurler

Blacksburg, Va., May 11 (A.P.). College baseball coaches and fans are interested in the experiment of Coach George Kircher at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

He has two baseball clubs, one composed entirely of left-handed hitters, with the possible exception of the pitcher, and the other of right-handed hitters.

The idea is that if the opposing hurler begins to make the left-handed clouters look bad, Coach Kircher yanks them out and sends in a whole team of right-handed hitters or vice versa.

Kircher was formerly one of the greatest catchers in the South, having played with the Southern, South Atlantic and Virginia Leagues before he became a coach.

DUMM AND DUMMER ON THE WELL-SPLIT ATOM.

"WHAT'S all this stuff about splitting the atom, and why?" asked Representative Dummer.

"I'm glad you asked," returned Senator Dumm. "For a long time I've been yearning for somebody to sit down with me and have a nice, long chat on the atom. You know what an atom is, I assume."

"All I know is that it is something you find in yeast and oranges," said Dummer.

"Don't exasperate me," rebuked the senator. "An atom has nothing to do with yeast or oranges. It is a part of matter. By splitting the atom the scientists hope to reveal its secrets."

"Why don't they get Judge Seabury?" asked Dummer.

* * * *

"DON'T interrupt," said the senator. "By taking the atom apart and seeing what makes it tick the scientists hope to be able to find a source of energy that may make our coal mines, oil fields, electric plants and railroads obsolete."

"What's an atom got to do with a railroad?" asked Dummer, plainly befuddled.

"Through the medium of the well-split atom," explained the senator, "it might be possible to run a train across the country on the contents of a little salt shaker."

"Would they shake it on the engineer or the fireman?" asked Dummer, regretting that he had brought the subject up.

"They wouldn't need any engineer," said the senator. "All the railroads would be operated by a couple of college professors sitting in the Department of Atoms and splitting them up as the occasion demanded."

"The railroads?" asked Dummer.

"No; the atoms," insisted Senator Dumm. "It defies the imagination. It might even be possible to move all the freight in the United States for an entire year on the energy stored in a pink pill too small to be visible to the naked eye."

"You could probably accomplish that right now on any pill," scoffed Dummer.

"I'm talking about prosperous years," explained the senator. "Why, you have no idea the tremendous power the atom may hold."

* * * *

"DO you suppose it could open a day-coach window?" asked Dummer.

"There are limits to everything," said the senator. "But please don't interrupt. Within the fragment of the atom there's enough energy to tear down mountains," continued Senator Dumm.

"If there was a mountain I didn't like, I suppose I could knock it off the map by dissolving a small particle of atom in soapy water and blowing bubbles out the window," mused Dummer.

"It's quite possible," agreed Senator Dumm. "Nobody knows but what Niagara Falls might be turned upside down and made to run the other way by a pale chemist standing on the American side and shaking a few drops of powder out of a half-ounce vial. It has been stated that a steamship could be run around the world on a spoonful of dust and that a city illuminating plant could be operated for a year on a pinch of something that would look like snuff. Have you any questions?"

"None," concluded Dummer, glad the subject was being closed, "but from what you say a well-shattered atom would be a great help in getting a devastated country back on its feet. It's too bad, Mr. Hoover isn't a practical scientist instead of a retired engineer."

BE HONEST, GIRLS!

MORE and more women are coming out openly in opposition to prohibition. In their public utterances they profess belief in personal liberty, profound fears for the safety of the republic, disgust with enforcement scandals, &c., but this department believes they are really moved by these facts:

1. They are sick of having the pantry full of synthetic gin paraphernalia.

2. They are tired of being blamed because the essence of juniper can't be found when it's wanted.

3. They feel that the kitchen has been used as a combination clubroom, smoking car, debating hall and chemical laboratory long enough.

NEW YORK CENTRAL OMITS 1ST DIVIDEND

Record Since 1870 Broken as Road Votes to Defer Payment 6 Months.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Directors of New York Central Railroad today omitted a dividend on the stock for the first time since the company was reorganized in 1870.

Action on the payment was deferred six months ago, when it was decided to place the stock on a semiannual basis, but hopes that earnings would improve in the ensuing six months were unrealized and the board "reluctantly decided" that it was "out of the question" to authorize a payment at this time.

"Gross revenues," said an official statement, "have continued to decline, and despite economies of operation the company has been unable to earn currently its fixed charges."

The first quarter of this year resulted in a deficit after charges of $1,316,852. Operating expenses were pared $17,600,000, but gross revenues dropped approximately as much. Although net operating income was only $371,000 less than for the same period of 1931, interest charges have arisen.

New York Central was on a $7 annual basis from 1923 to 1927. From August 1, 1927, to the second quarter of 1931, it paid $6 a year. The quarterly payment was reduced to $1.50 on May 1, 1931, and a similar payment was made August 1. This rate was cut to $1 on November 2.

At the December meeting it was decided to defer action and consider dividends semiannually, explaining that the change in policy would insure the availability of "accurate forecasts of earnings for a given period to which a dividend applies."

Cerro de Pasco Copper.

Edward H. Clark, president of the Cerro de Pasco Copper Co., told stockholders at their annual meeting that the Peruvian government is cooperating fully, and that the company's properties are being operated at good efficiency.

Output is being maintained at approximately 30 per cent of capacity, he explained, but sales are considerably under production. About 50 per cent of the normal working forces are employed.

He said the company is operating at about as low a rate as possible, without closing down completely, inasmuch as only one furnace out of the three at the shelter is being operated.

Milwaukee Reports Deficit.

An operating deficit for April of $300,000, compared with income of $124,954 in 1931 reported today by the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. in a preliminary statement.

April gross revenue was $6,600,000, compared with $9,474,706 in April, 1931.

Newton Steel Co.

The Newton Steel Co. reports for the quarter ended March 31 net loss of $126,132 after depreciation, interest and other charges, compared with net loss of $67,943 in the 1931 quarter.

New York Air Brake.

A net loss of $68,570 after depreciation and charges for the quarter ended March 31 was reported today by the New York Air Brake Co. This compares with net loss of $49,534 in the first quarter of 1931.

John Morrell & Co.

Directors of John Morrell & Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable June 15 to stock of record May 21. This declaration places the stock on a $2 annual basis, compared with $3 previously.

Oil Companies Make Profits Now for First Time in Year

By WILLIAM VOIGT, Jr.

Tulsa, Okla., May 11 (A.P.).—Oil companies operating in the Midcontinent area are making a profit, some of them for the first time in a year, reports to the Associated Press revealed today.

Only those major companies which do not have headquarters here, or whose spokesmen could not be reached are missing from the list of those once more making money, the survey showed.

Companies reporting included Continental Oil Co., Consolidated Oil Corporation (Prairie-Sinclair), Barnsdall Oil Corporation, Midcontinent Petroleum Corporation, Skelly Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co., and the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co., one of the Cities Service group.

Without exception these companies attributed the improved condition to the recent advances in prices of crude oil and refined products and lessons in economy taught by the lean months of the past.

Continental Oil reported that for the first time in 14 months it moved out of the red in April.

W. G. Skelly and C. C. Herndon, of Skelly Oil, said their firm showed a profit in March for the first time in 12 months, and that current conditions indicated a profit for May.

Daniel L. Pierce, speaking for Harry F. Sinclair, of Consolidated Oil, specifically mentioned the stringent economies being practiced by all the oil companies at this time. He said:

"Contributing to the improvement is the regime of economy that has been forced upon all business managements by the difficulties of the last three years."

Frank Phillips, president of Phillips Petroleum, joined the chorus, but warned, as did Skelly, Herndon and E. B. Reeser, of Barnsdall, the time is not ripe for an orgy of rejoicing.

Skelly asserted rapid improvement should not be anticipated, that the blows of the past were so great the oil companies should advance cautiously.

An improvement in field conditions was noted by the Oil and Gas Journal, which reported 310 more wells east of California drilling or digging for exploration in April than in March, and 170 more wells completed in April than the preceding month.

The additional work has provided a like increase in field employment and in sales of rigging and equipment.

Sun Oil Shares Gains In Midcontinent Fields

Philadelphia, May 11 (A.P.).—J. Howard Pew, president of the Sun Oil Co., said today his company had experienced the improvement in conditions noted in the midcontinent oil fields since the recent increase in the price of crude oil. He said, however, it was not sufficient to take the company "out of the red" in Oklahoma.

Complete figures of his company's business since the new prices went into effect are not yet available, Pew said, but he expects them to show a loss in the Oklahoma operations.

However, Pew said the Sun Oil's business generally has been showing a profit, except in the producing field, and that despite unfavorable conditions it had not yet been forced to reduce wages.

New Jersey Standard Shares Improvement

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey subsidiaries in the midcontinent field are sharing the improvement in earnings noted generally among oil producers in that area, it was indicated to the company's offices today.

Although no comment was available as to whether the higher crude and refined prices were returning profits, it was learned that current results were, in the main, more encouraging than for some time.

New Jersey's subsidiary in Texas is the Humble Oil Co., while its representative in Oklahoma and Kansas is the Carter Oil Co. Neither of these companies makes interim earnings reports.

British Bonds Advance.

London, May 11 (A.P.).—British government bonds moved upward a quarter to a full point today on buying orders from all quarters on Neville Chamberlain's speech last night indicating further cuts in the national expenditures.

Gypsum Dividend Continued.

Chicago, May 11 (A.P.).—The United States Gypsum Co. today declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on each share of preferred stock and 40 cents on the common stock, payable June 30, to stockholders of record June 15.

BIG MUNICIPAL BOND SALES SLATED SOON

Cities and States Planning to Offer $100,000,000 Issues Shortly.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—A number of cities and States are planning to tap the municipal bond market for $100,000,000 or more in the next few weeks.

Wall street bankers incline to the view that the recent improvement for highest grade bonds, coincident with the Federal Reserve System's vigorous credit expansion program through its purchases of Federal Government securities, augurs well for the new municipal financing.

With some large commercial banks, especially those having excess reserves with central banking institutions, evincing a willingness to expand investments there appear to be fair grounds for belief that long-term borrowing planned by State and city governments will find market conditions favorable.

Demand at present is largely for highest grade obligations, such as the recent New York State securities which attracted a $150,000,000 subscription for a $75,000,000 issue; but bankers point out that inquiry should broaden provided confidence escapes further jolts.

A huge volume of municipal financing has been held back for months because of poor markets, but dealers in this class of security say that, given a maintenance of current trends, there should be a substantial and steady increase in the number of successful borrowers.

The largest new issue in prospect is a $21,000,000 block of New Jersey State bonds, proceeds of which are to be used for highway and institutional building construction. Bids are scheduled for June.

The State of Mississippi, it is reported here, will offer a $12,500,000 issue, while Minnesota will soon be in the market with a $10,000,000 batch of highway bonds. The City of Philadelphia has announced that it would sell publicly on June 8 a $20,000,000 issue.

Another large offering believed to be in prospect is a $34,000,000 issue by the Delaware River Bridge Commission to provide funds for acquiring the bridge between Philadelphia and Camden.

MARKET COMMENT

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.—The two most interesting phases of the present market position are the seeming cessation of persistent liquidation in most directions and the lack of any except speculative sponsorship. The latter probably results from unwillingness on the part of operators to make important commitments in face of the uncertainties of Washington. In view of the decline in the short position in April, a period of uncertainty in which it could be rebuilt would be logical.

Magazine of Wall Street—There is no substantial improvement in business. Irresponsible political bickering at Washington gives cause for genuine alarm. Seldom has depression been so acute or the outlook, as the average person views it, so black. That is why stock prices are at the lowest levels of a quarter of a century. That, also, is why intelligent investors from now on should strive to keep an open mind, for it is precisely under conditions of abject public pessimism that the ultimate investment bargains will be available. The stock market is not going to zero. At the recent low the decline from the 1929 peak amounted to 85 per cent.

Westheimer & Co.—Stabilization in the market, and in business and finance as well, undoubtedly would be very desirable and beneficial at present. With conditions as they are, however, probably nothing better than this can be expected until some new stimulus appears.

BALTIMORE BANKERS EXPAND IN CAPITAL

Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. Removes to Ground Floor of Woodward Building.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

A further step in the progress of the local office of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co., Baltimore bankers, is seen in announcement yesterday of its removal to larger quarters on the ground floor of the Woodward Building effective before July 1. The local office of this firm, which holds membership in the New York and Baltimore Stock Exchanges and associate membership in the New York Curb Exchange, will occupy rooms 3, 4 and 5 in the lobby of the Woodward Building.

These large rooms will be joined and renovated into one of the most completely equipped offices in the city. It will have a modern board room, a bond department and private wire service extending to all the principal markets.

The banking house of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. was established in 1899, and its local office opened in January 1929, in a room on the second floor of the Investment Building, Fifteenth and K streets northwest. For five years prior to that time, the national firm had local representation, however.

Offices Since 1929.

On October 15, 1929 upon acquisition of the local office of Clark, Childs & Co., the Washington office of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. removed to its present location on the second floor of the Glover & Flather Building, at 1508 H street northwest, this location giving it added facilities of board, room and private wire service.

Ralph M. Wolfe, who is resident manager of the local office of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. was born in Hagerstown, Md., and after studying at Technical High School of this city and taking special courses in local colleges, began his banking career as a runner for the former American National Bank, later becoming associated with the District National Bank.

Following service in the World War, he entered the employ of the former Citizens Savings Bank as assistant cashier. On the absorption of the Citizens Savings Bank by the former Marchants Bank & Trust Co., he became auditor for the merged institutions, serving in that capacity until January, 1929, when he was appointed manager of the bond department of the local office of Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. In January, 1931, he assumed charge of both stock and bond departments and was appointed resident manager.

Among the personnel of the local office are Charles B. Quarles, Harry Brisker and Henry M. Camp in the stock department and Richard H. Wood and John H. Clarke in the bond department.

Stockholders of Anacostia Bank held their annual meeting yesterday and reelected all officers and directors as follows: Maurice Otterback, president; S. A. Manuel, first vice president; J. Frank Campbell, second vice president; Charles W. Warden, third vice president; W. L. Koontz, cashier; Alfred V. Fohl, assistant cashier; George C. Gertman, counsel. Directors are: J. Frank Campbell, Charles W. Warden, A. E. Gude, George S. King, S. A. Manuel, Maurice Otterback, L. W. Thompson, Robert Thompson and W. L. Koontz.

The National Mortgage & Investment Corporation which owns and operates the Capital Garage, at 1320 New York avenue northwest, has taken out group accident, health and life insurance for the 78 employes of this large garage, it was announced yesterday. The insurance, having a valuation in excess of $100,000, was issued by the Continental Assurance Co., through the office of Johnson & Adams.

The policies were delivered at the monthly meeting of employes last night, at which James P. Schick, president of the corporation, presided.

Stock Price Changes Small As Trading Remains Dull

Bond Quotations Almost Stationary at Close, With Curb Market Listless and Disheartened After Failing in Rally Attempt.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Stocks idled through another uneventful session today. Some liquidation seeped through the rail group, disturbing an early rally by other major classifications, but this selling was desultory and the market's action generally appeared inconclusive. Net changes were irregular, with fractional variations predominating.

Hopes that the Senate economy committee would achieve results, supplementing with a reduction in Government costs the Senate's tax bill, together with the bullish crop report, stumbled against uninspiring trade statistics and a reiteration by New York Central's directors of the unfavorable railroad situation. That road passed its dividend formally, which was no surprise, but the actual decision to omit a payment doubtless had an adverse psychological effect and some selling of rails followed.

Union Pacific meets for dividend action tomorrow. A cut has been widely forecast.

Central, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific lost about a point net and displayed an average degree of activity. Other carriers, however, were sluggish. Santa Fe sagging slightly while Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania finished steady.

Final Changes Fractional.

Final changes in U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, General Motors, Allied Chemical, Standard of New Jersey, National Biscuit and Case amounted to small fractions on either side of the previous close.

Eastman rallied on declaration of a regular dividend, the extra having been omitted three months ago.

United Aircraft stocks made new lows, presumably because of special selling based on assumptions that Government curtailment measures would affect that company's business.

National Lead, appearing for the first time this week, jumped 10 points on one sale.

Reaction on Wheat.

The May 1 crop figures suggested higher wheat prices and that market did advance. However, enthusiasm was probably checked by recollections of the large surplus and by a reminder that winter wheat has enjoyed more favorable weather since the first of this month. Some trade circles had expected a smaller estimate.

On its early rise the share market developed a number of 1 to 2 point gains, thus carrying over Tuesday's firm trend.

The Iron Age report that steel ingot production had been "barely able" to maintain last week's 24 per cent rate and that the automobile industry had not provided "any important impetus" to operations had little influence during the first couple of hours, but there was some scaling off of prices after last week's electric power output figures were published.

However willing Wall street may be to look for business gains as a corollary of constructive adjustments in national finances, it must meanwhile face continued evidence of severe depression.

Money markets were somewhat easier. Bankers acceptance yield rates were reduced by ¼ of 1 per cent, restoring the quotations of a week ago, obviously in a further effort to bring out bills.

Bonds' Trading Dull.

While the majority of the United States Government bonds moved to moderately higher levels, corporate issues showed little indication of life and price changes generally were without significance.

The Federal list received some stimulation from the reductions in open market interest rates. This was particularly true of the new Treasury notes and certificates. The 3 per cent notes reached a new high with a premium of 1½ points, and the 2 per cent certificates were around ½ point above par.

There was a "do nothing" tendency displayed by most of the railroads, utilities and industrials. The result was that sales totaled but $8,521,000, par value, and the average for 60 principal corporation bonds was off only one-tenth of a point.

Some scattered selling was noted among the speculative liens, but none of this had the appearance of urgency. At the same time loans of the high-grade type jogged along in a fractional range.

Dealers were of the opinion that traders and investors were waiting for something more definite to come out of Washington on the tax and budget situation.

There was also some speculation regarding the terms of the Treasury's June financing which is expected to approximate some $200,000,000.

MONEY MARKETS

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—A rise by German marks to a new high for the year provided the chief development in foreign exchanges today.

Reichsmarks, above par this week, extended their advance which suggested to some bankers that capital might be working back into Germany, encouraged by a more confident appraisal of the country's outlook. Chancellor Bruening's statement on reparations, it was pointed out, may have been an influence in today's market.

Other foreign currencies were slightly mixed at the close. French francs were firm, but sterling, the lira and the Norwegian and Swedish moneys sagged.

Guilders eased a shade. Swiss francs were unchanged. The final cable rate for pounds was $3.67⅛, off ⅛ cent.

Number of advances	156	187
Stocks unchanged	149	140

Stocks.

The day was dull and uneventful. Bearish news predominated, but price changes were inconclusive. The markets appear to be marking time, awaiting a positive stimulus either way.

Bonds.

United States Governments moved moderately higher but corporate issues were listless.

Curb.

An early rally failed to develop buying support and soon gave way to heaviness.

Wheat.

The Government crops estimates plus continued European export buying sent Chicago futures up 2 cents at the best, but the close was shaky at a net advance of ½ to 1 cent.

Cotton.

Light offerings from the South inspired some covering. The close was 3 to 5 points higher.

BANK IMPROVEMENT REPORTED IN SOUTH

Failures Are Less and Many Closed Institutions Plan to Resume Business.

Baltimore, Md., May 11 (A.P.).—Material progress in the banking situation in the South for the past several months, with several States reporting bank failures, have practically ceased, is noted by the Manufacturers Record.

Banking departments of some States report many banks have been able to resume operations. The record says the assistance of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is generally recognized as largely responsible for the results achieved.

J. R. Dorman, Kentucky banking and securities commissioner, reports for the six weeks ended April 30, there have been no State bank failures and of 18 banks closed between January 1 and the end of April, three have reopened.

R. E. Gormley, Georgia superintendent of banks, disclosed banking conditions in that State are better than for the past several years.

The superintendent of banks for Mississippi, J. S. Love, reported: "Our people have gone to work and they realize that only by hard work and closest economy can they improve their position. We have had 75 bank closings in Mississippi, carrying total deposits of $18,000,000. We have been able to reopen 43 of these banks on a sound basis, carrying total deposits of a little more than $12,000,000." He expressed optimism for the future.

R. G. Dickinson, assistant commissioner of the State Bank Department of Arkansas, wrote that since the Reconstruction Finance Corporation began to function, only one small bank has closed in his State and six have reopened.

The Florida comptroller, Ernest Amos, said cash deposits increased in his State.

Banking officials of Alabama, South Carolina, Louisiana, Virginia and North Carolina also reported improved conditions.

Insurance Holding Company Planned

Julius Barnes Is Heading Group to Consummate $19,000,000 Deal.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—An insurance holding company, the principal subsidiaries of which will be a large casualty company and two insurance investment trusts, is being formed by a group headed by Julius M. Barnes, chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

As a step in the creation of the new company, the Insurance Equities Corporation has acquired from the United Founders Corporation a controlling interest in the Insuranshares Corporation of Delaware, the General Management Corporation and Insuranshares Certificates, Inc.

Mr. Barnes has been elected chairman of the three corporations, which on December 31 had aggregate net assets of nearly $19,000,000.

The group proposes the formation of a casualty and surety company through a merger of the Lloyds Casualty Co., the Detroit Fidelity & Surety Co., and the Constitution Indemnity Co. It already has control of the last-named company.

U. S. Treasury to Sell $75,000,000 in Bills

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mills announced last night that the Treasury would sell $75,000,000 of 91-day bills on May 16.

The bills will be dated May 18 and mature on August 17 when they will be redeemed at face value.

The money raised by the sale of the bills will be used to retire $75,689,000 of similar securities which mature on May 18.

GRAIN PRICES RALLY ON DECREASED CROP

U. S. Report Slashes Yield of Wheat by 53,000,000 Bushels Loss.

Chicago, May 11 (A.P.).—Sensational slashing of Government estimates of 1932 domestic winter wheat production gave grain values a lively advance today, with wheat up 2 cents a bushel.

Wheat prices reached the highest point since April 28, but fell back somewhat at the last as a result of heavy selling to realize profits. Traders attached particular significance to the fact that practically all of the tremendous crop losses shown as compared with last year were in the big surplus hard wheat section—Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado.

Wheat closed unsettled, ½ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅜ to ⅝ cent up; oats 1/8 to ¾ cent advanced, and provisions, 5 to 20 cents down.

From the outset, the wheat market showed itself responsive to the unexpectedly extreme bullish character of the Government crop report, and in particular to the official estimate that 46,000,000 bushels less winter wheat would be harvested this season than last year.

Taken in connection with delay to the spring wheat crop and with a curtailment of 7,000,000 bushels in the official estimate of the domestic yield of rye, the Government report was regarded as largely offsetting the bearish influence of concentrated holdings which had long been hanging over the market.

Unofficial advices that crop improvement had taken place since Government data was gathered led to moderate price reactions at times, but the day's top was attained later with renewed buying thirty minutes before the close.

Helping to lift values were North American wheat export purchases of about 1,000,000, including two cargoes of United States hard winter wheat. There was also an authoritative estimate that Canadian wheat acreage this season would be decreased 10 per cent.

INVESTORS BESIEGE COPPER CO. OFFICES

Insurgent Stockholders Held Back by Police in Row Over Proxies.

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Heavy forces of insurgent stockholders, backed by overwhelming batteries of proxies, besieged the stanch fort of the Consolidated Copper Mines Corporation at 120 Broadway today, but the defending management, reinforced by husky policemen of the Wall street area, were still in possession at a late hour tonight.

The battle of votes, which had been going on at the annual shareholders' meeting for more than a week, reached a climax yesterday when the opposition, with a majority of some 84,000 proxies, amended the by-laws, elected a majority of the board of directors and a new president and prepared to take over the offices and management.

Members of the opposition, headed by R. W. Higgins, of Duluth, Minn., whom they had elected to succeed President Howard D. Smith, today appeared at headquarters and formally demanded the retirement of the present management and the surrender of the offices.

Warning Is Issued.

President Smith and his aids, however, had prepared for the onslaught with a number of private detectives and uniformed city policemen. So, when the "insurgents" arrived, they were warned against creating a disturbance or attempting to take over the offices. Members of the Higgins group, however, were admitted to the headquarters, one by one, and each formally presented a demand for possession.

"We are not giving up so easily," said President Smith. "For the present, possession is 9 points of law. It is probable that the courts will decide the victors in this controversy. Our claim is that the opposition voted proxies which they obtained by misrepresentation and that the real stockholders of the corporation are not in favor of the proposed change in management."

At the same time, Mr. Higgins explained that he and his followers were merely demanding their rights and that the present management was holding possession of the headquarters "illegally."

Majority Is Claimed.

"We had a majority of around 64,000 proxies," said he. "With this majority the board of directors was increased and I was elected president. The proxies were not obtained by misrepresentation, but were sought in exactly the same manner as most proxies. I do not know whether it will be a matter for the courts or not. All we know right now is that there is an argument."

After yesterday's meeting, at which Mr. Higgins and Thomas Batron were elected, and C. E. Merritt, of Duluth, reelected to complete the full board of nine, the directors are said to have met and reelected the present management.

The dissenting shareholders, however, claiming a majority of proxies, voted to amend the by laws and to add six new directors to the board. The new directors elected by the "insurgents" were Joseph B. Cotton, Samuel Brenner, Williams S. Gordon, Norman Lamond, Robert D. Hoffman and Charles K. Blandin.

The opposition, being in control of the new board, then proceeded to void the previous reelection of President Smith and his associates and elect Mr. Higgins to head the company.

Dealers Reduce Rates On Bank Acceptances

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Dealers today reduced yield rates on bankers' acceptances by one-quarter of 1 per cent on all maturities, thus cancelling the advance made last Thursday. There has recently been a marked scarcity of acceptances, for even the succession of rate cuts last month failed to stimulate sales of such paper by banks.

Last week's reduction in price, however, had the effect of tightening the supply still further and today's action represented another effort to attract offerings into the market.

The new rates are: 30 to 90 days, 1 per cent bid, ⅞ asked; four months, 1⅛ per cent bid, 1 per cent asked; five to six months, 1⅛ bid, 1¼ asked.

Electric Power Output Declines During Week

New York, May 11 (A.P.).—Electric power output fell to 1,429,033,000 kilowatt hours in the week ended May 7 from 1,454,508,000 in the preceding week and 1,637,296,000 in the same period last year. The decrease from last year, 12.7 per cent, is the largest reported since publication of the weekly figures started.

In the previous week output was 11.5 per cent below that of last year. The central industrial region showed the largest decline in output, 16.3 per cent, with the Atlantic seaboard district 8.9 per cent lower.

The Chicago district alone was 14.4 per cent lower and the Pacific Coast was off 12 per cent.

Massachusetts to Bar Insull Utility Shares

Boston, May 11 (A.P.).—The State department of public utilities today prohibited the sale in Massachusetts of securities of the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and of the Mississippi Valley Utilities Co. The action was taken because the companies failed to file with the department information relative to their business as required by law.

MADAM NAOMA PAL

'WASHINGTON' SUNG BY CHORUS OF 220 IN CONSTITUTION HALL

Cantata Portrays Life of First President From Youth to His Death.

PRODUCTION ASSISTED BY MARINE ORCHESTRA

Work of Edward Potter and Deane Shure Acclaimed by Large Crowd.

The cantata "Washington," sung last night in Constitution Hall by a massed chorus of 220 voices, accompanied by the Marine Band Orchestra, Capt. Taylor Branson conducting, was the high spot of the George Washington Bicentennial music week.

The audience of about 800 persons loudly applauded the rendition of the cantata, especially composed for the occasion by Edward C. Potter and R. Deane Shure, by the orchestra of 50 men and the chorus. The chorus consisted of 160 persons from the District, 15 from Baltimore & Ohio Music Club, of Batimore; 20 from the Baltimore Music Club, and 25 from the Matinee Music Club, of Philadelphia. The solo parts for the long cantata were sung by Mark Shull, Roanoke, Va., tenor, and Robert Wiedefeld, barytone, of Baltimore.

Telling Effects Achieved.

Especial credit should be given to Capt. Broanson in his conducting of the orchestra and the chorus during the cantata. There was scarcely room on the stage for the 270 persons taking part.

There was only one rehearsal of the entire group prior to last night's concert. Yet tremendous crescendo and the softest diminuendo effects were achieved in nearly perfect fashion. The voices of the two soloists were especially effective, Mr. Wiedefeld being given a hearty ovation for his rendition of the martial solo part of the cantata.

The chorus was organized by Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs. All the out-of-town singers were brought to the Capital under the auspices of the federation.

Tells Life of Washington.

The cantata dealt with the history of Washington from the time of his youth to his death. The text was composed by Mr. Potter and the music by Mr. Shure, both residents of the Capital. At the conclusion of the cantata Mr. Potter left his orchestra and joined some friends in a box adjoining Mr. Shure's box. The applause given the two composers was as great as that given the chorus and orchestra.

The first part of the program, four numbers by the orchestra, was also popularly acclaimed. The overture from "Tannhauser," by Wagner was the feature of the orchestral program. The playing of the orchestra was of the best symphonic quality as was attested by the great favor with which it was received by the audience.

The Baltimore Music Club, composed entirely of female voices, under the direction of Franz C. Bornschein, furnished the third and last part of the program. Its singing of "The Tryst," by Bornschein, was a feature of the evening. Mrs. Elizabeth Rowland was the accompanyist.

RARE SOUTH AMERICAN CREATURES ARRIVE AT WASHINGTON ZOO

Policeman Injured Returning From Crash Fatal to Soldier.

Death of a soldier, severe injury to a motorcycle policeman, and a crash of a Walter Reed Hospital ambulance were the aftermaths of an automobile accident early yesterday at Fourteenth and V streets northwest.

Private Donald McLean, 39 years old, attached to an Army motor transport company and stationed at 1800 C street, died in Emergency Hospital two hours after the crash at Fourteenth and V streets from a severed jugular vein.

Motorcycle Policeman Jesse D. Martin was hurled from his machine at Tenth and U streets northwest after a collision with a taxicab while on his way to the precinct station to report the accident. He suffered bruises and internal injuries.

According to police, the machine in which McLean was a passenger was driven by Private Columbus McCauley, another soldier, who collided with a car driven by John Baldwin, colored, 35 years old, of 1130 Nineteenth street northwest, at the intersection of Fourteenth and V streets. After the crash McCauley failed to stop, police say, driving south on Fourteenth street and turning into U street, where he abandoned the car in front of 1451 U street, after helping to place McLean in a taxicab.

Doctors at Emergency Hospital, where McLean was taken, put in an emergency call to Walter Reed Hospital for a blood donor for a transfusion, but the patient died before the donor reached the hospital.

On the return trip from Emergency to Walter Reed Hospital, the ambulance collided with a taxicab at Sixteenth and T streets, badly damaging both machines. Neither driver was injured.

Headquarters Detective H. M. Jett arrested McCauley at the Army barracks later in the day and held him for investigation.

John Wesley Ferry, colored cab driver that struck Policeman Martin on his motorcycle, was charged with reckless driving.

Baldwin, driver of the car in the collision with McCauley, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for severe bruises and contusions.

Hoover Will Be Reelected, Is Belief of Seniors at G. U.

But Smith Should Be Voters' Choice, Majority of Answers to Questionnaire Assert; 93 Per Cent Favor Change in Dry Law.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith should be elected President next fall but Herbert Hoover will be reelected, is the consensus of opinion of the majority of Georgetown University's senior class as adduced from a recent questionnaire submitted them and published in the Hoya, college magazine.

The queries ran the gamut of college affairs, serious and not serious, cultural tastes, ambitions, the attributes of wives, and political views. Several questions were deleted by faculty order on the ground that they were disrespectful thereof.

G. K. Chesterton and Sinclair Lewis stood out as favorite authors of the Hilltop seniors. Alfred E. Smith was mentioned again as the favorite national character of most of the seniors. Eighty-nine per cent were in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment, 7 per cent against, and 4 per cent for modification.

Intelligence was regarded by 74 per cent as the paramount basis on which to choose a wife; 24 per cent named domestic virtue as the main factor in such a choice, while only 2 per cent regarded beauty as the chief attribute.

Fifty-two per cent of the seniors indicated that light classical music was their preference along that line; 34 per cent favored jazz melodies, while 14 per cent checked symphonic music as their choice. Guy Lombardo's Dance Orchestra was the most favored jazz organization, while the Philadelphia Symphony ran first in that field of music.

Personality was regarded by 81 per cent of the questionnaire answers as the primary factor in success in business, while 19 per cent thought luck was the guiding principle. Hard work and mental ability, suggested in the questionnaire, received only scattering attention.

Ruth Chatteron and Kay Francis received the greatest number of favorable answers to the question, "Who is your favorite female screen star?" The two Barrymores and Ronald Colman got the indorsement for favorite male screen stars. Seventy-four per cent preferred straight drama in theatrical entertainment, while 26 per cent were for musical comedies.

The last question on the list: "Do you think you have wasted your time at Georgetown?" was answered by 96 per cent with an emphatic "No."

WASHINGTON HELD FAITH STRONGHOLD

Utah Bishop Tells Diocesan Convention of Inspiration to Rest of U. S.

The Right Rev. Arthur W. Moulton, who for the last twelve years has been the missionary bishop of the Episcopal District of Utah, told leaders of the Washington Diocese at their annual convention yesterday that Washington was a stronghold of faith, and that the Washington Cathedral had spread its influence and example throughout the West.

Sessions were held in St. Mark's Church, at Third and A streets southeast and will extend through today. Resolutions presented to the attending members for their approval, and reports of committees, were included in the business of yesterday's sessions.

An effort to repeal a church rule which limits certain privileges of constituents who fail to pay the convention fund was defeated at the meeting. Advocates of the repeal insisted that the move was an emergency measure, made necessary by the depression. The opposition contended that sentiment should not be permitted to interfere with reason, and that the church should be operated on a business basis. Many churches, they said, had been in arrears before the economic crisis. The church rule restricts fund delinquents from service as officers and on committees.

The Rev. H. Allen Griffith, chaplain of the United States Soldiers' Home, was relected as secretary of the diocese for the twelfth consecutive year. Assistants elected were: The Rev. E. S. Dunlap, canon of the Washington Cathedral; the Rev. M. M. Perkins, rector of the Grace Church of Georgetown; Ogle R. Singleton and Thomas Spence.

Representatives of charitable institutions in the diocese addressed the meeting on the progress of their organizations.

A dinner was tendered the convention by Bishop James E. Freeman in accordance with an established custom. The dinner was held in the parish hall of St. Mark's Church. Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, was a guest at the dinner.

Police Bureau Now to Take All Collateral

A new department has been created in the Traffic Bureau office for payment of collateral on all minor traffic violation tickets, known as the Traffic Record Office.

Under the old system, collateral could be left at either the precincts or Traffic Bureau, but under the new ruling the precincts can not accept any money on the tickets. It all has to be paid at the new Traffic Record Office.

The south side of Indiana avenue, from Sixth street to Fifth street, is now reserved for motorists to park while leaving collateral.

MAN, 40, OUT OF JOB, ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Police Crash Door of 16th Street Apartment After Maid Gives Alarm.

Hugh R. Cramer, 40, of 3126 Sixteenth street northwest, was found dead from a bullet in his heart yesterday afternoon in the living room of his apartment.

His body was discovered by two policemen, R. F. Goodwin and G. F. Hasty, who broke down the door of the apartment after a colored maid in the next apartment called the precinct station and said she had heard a shot.

Cramer had been unemployed for nearly a year, and despondency is believed by police to have caused him to commit suicide. A note left by him said: "I am doing the cowardly act." Persons in the apartment building said he had been downcast for some time.

His wife, Frances R. Cramer, is said by police to work for the George Washington Bicentennial Commission as a stenographer. Cramer was last employed as a salesman for a realty firm here.

The shot, from a .45-caliber automatic, was heard by Leona Johnson, the maid, who, thinking some one had fallen, ran out and knocked on Cramer's door. When she did not get an answer, she called police.

A certificate of suicide was issued by the coroner.

Firemen Help Cleric Locked Out of Home

The boys of the "hook and ladder" responded to another locked door emergency yesterday.

The Rev. Arthur E. Owens, pastor of the Marvin M. E. Church South, stepped out of his home at 904 B street southwest, for a minute. The night latch clicked, and he remembered that his key was inside.

His 5-month-old son, Thomas, was just a mite too young to come downstairs and let his "daddy" in. The Rev. Mr. Owens called the fire department. They cleared up the situation by means of a ladder and an unlocked second-story window.

HOUSE COMMITTEE FOR BILL BOOSTING LABOR AGENCY FEE

New Schedules Also Lift License Charges on Other Activities.

The Gilbert license bill, setting up a new schedule of fees and stringent provisions for local employment agencies and other private activities, was approved yesterday with seven other District measures by the House District committee.

The bill would compel employment agencies to pay an annual fee of $100 and post $1,000 bond with the Commissioners. Provisions require that no agency be maintained in living quarters, that registers be kept open to inspection, and references be investigated.

One section of the bill, levying a $250 license fee on "mediums, clairvoyants, soothsayers, fortune tellers, palmists or phrenologists," was amended to relieve spiritualists and those connected with churches from paying the fee.

New Schedule of Fees.

Licenses proposed include $100 for private detectives, $50 for firearms salesmen, $5 for guides, $15 for house-to-house solicitors, $15 for apartment houses, $15 for delicatessens, $200 a day for circuses, $35 a day for carnivals, $65 a year for amusement grounds, $5 for athletic grounds, $12 for pool rooms and bowling alleys, $50 for theaters, $30 for motion picture houses, $100 for abattoirs and $3 a pump for gasoline stations. Revenues under the measure would be increased from $120,000 to $270,000.

A favorable report also was ordered on the McLeod automobile responsibility bill, which would require all drivers found guilty of a major traffic infraction to take out liability insurance.

Other Bills Approved.

Four bills providing for the closing of streets and alleys, a measure permitting certain officials of House and Senate to drive with congressional tags, and a bill providing for exchange of land at Occoquan, Va., also were approved.

The streets and avenues subcommittee of the committee will meet this morning to consider a bill for the widening of Thirteenth street northwest. The committee will take up a measure Wednesday authorizing extension of a railroad spur from the Navy yard to the Buzzard Point area.

Chairman Mary T. Norton announced that the committee was attempting to clear its dockets by next District day, probably May 24.

SCHOOL BODY PLANS STADIUM FUND PLEA BEFORE SENATE UNIT

$160,000 Initial Allotment to Be Asked for Work at Roosevelt.

ORIGINAL SUM REDUCED DUE TO ECONOMY POLICY

Several Hundred Expected to Go Before District Group Next Week.

Plans to carry the fight for an initial appropriation of $160,000 for the new Roosevelt High School stadium before the Senate District appropriations committee next week were laid at a meeting last night of the Business High School Parent-Teacher Association.

Edward R. Williams, president of the association, announced the decision to ask for a smaller appropriation "because of the economy policy." The item of $160,000, he pointed out, will provide for all work on the recreation field except seats and track.

Explains Compromise.

The association, it was announced, will also seek the original appropriation of $220,000 for equipment of the new school which is to replace Business. This appropriation was cut by the House appropriations committee to $150,000. The grounds appropriation was cut from $225,000 to $100,000.

Mr. Williams said that efforts will be made to take a delegation of several hundred before the Senate committee. He revealed that the decision to compromise on a smaller appropriation for the stadium work has been reached after consultation "with men on the hill."

The petitioners who will appear at the committee hearing will include representatives of 31 associations interested in the new school.

To Ask Fund at Once.

Request will be made that the appropriation be made immediately available so that the grounds will be ready when the school opens in September. The work will include grading, excavation, sodding, retaining walls, walks, steps, fences, gates, sewerage and seeding.

Mr. Williams read a letter from Senator Hiram Bingham, chairman of the Senate District appropriations committee, stating that a day will be set aside to receive the Roosevelt school defendants.

Separated Homes Indorsed in Suburb

American University Park Group Wants Plane of Residences Upheld.

Declaring that their community was growing at a fast pace, the American University Park Citizens' Association at a meetong last night at Hurst Hall of the American University, adopted three resolutions, all dealing with the future development of the neighborhood.

The association strongly upheld and insisted on continuance of the policy of building separated homes in University Park, and urged that Maryland residents with adjoining property follow the same practice. Another resolution stipulated that the type of houses erected should be improved.

The growth of the locality required, the citizens stated, that larger appropriations for lighting and sidewalk improvements be made. A resolution addressed to public officials and civic leaders embodying this need was adopted by the association. The meeting was the last one until September. Participation in the Fourth of July celebration was voted Herbert L. Brooks, president of the organization, presided.

Default on Garage Building Claimed

Davison Asked to Order City Work Turned Over to Bond Company.

Harold F. Baker, director of construction, yesterday recommended to Maj. D. A. Davison, Acting Engineer Commissioner, that the construction of the Sewer Department garage at First and O streets southeast be turned over to the bonding company and that the Fidelity Construction Co. be declared in default on the project.

The recommendation was based on the refusal of the contractor to tear away part of the brick work and remedy a bent steel structure as ordered by the Engineer Department. H. S. Hatton, president of the building firm, contends that the entire steel work should be redesigned, as it was originally done by the Sewer Department instead of the Municipal Architects' office.

The District Commissioners are expected to take action on the matter today or tomorrow, though it is doubtful whether a settlement will be reached outside of court.

Man Awaits Ohio Brother; Finds Him Held as Drunk

A ten-dollar bill yesterday united two brothers who had not seen each other for six years.

The legal tender was used by Charles Taylor, of the Cairo Hotel, to free his brother, William Taylor, of Columbus, Ohio, from charges of intoxication at the Third Precinct police station.

Although Charles knew that his brother was en route to visit him, he did not know when he would arrive. A doubt as to the time of the Ohio brother's advent was quashed when William received a note from him saying that he was in the police station.

William told police he drove here in his automobile and that he had been robbed of $35 by a youth to whom he gave a "lift" near Parkersburg, W. Va.
